EARLY BIRDS GET LOOT THAT 'GROWS' ON AUTOS

TORONTO (CP)—Money might grow on trees but in the north end of Toronto it appears to be growing on automobiles.

Motorists on Albertus Ave., who often get up to find all night parking tags on their cars now are finding $10 and $20 bills instead. The cash has shown up the last two nights tucked under bumpers and windshield wipers.

The motorists must be early birds to catch the cash; if they aren't, the neighborhood children get it first. Police said children had turned in about $150 so far. If no one claims it, the children who found it will get it back.

Police were at a loss to explain the mystery donations.

AIR CLASHES

New Tension In Mid-East

CAIRO (CP)—Fighter plane clashes, border troubles and interference with shipping in the Suez put President Nasser's United Arab Republic in the midst of new tension in the Middle East Sunday.

The incidents involved Israel and Jordan and emphasized that there is no peace in the household between Arab and Arab and Arab and Jew.

Israeli and U.A.R. jet fighters clashed in a brief air battle over the Negev Desert—third such incident in the area this year.

An Israeli military spokesman said two Israeli fighters drove off four U.A.R. jets which penetrated Israeli air space. There was a five-minute dogfight but no reports of casualties.

In Cairo, a U.A.R. military spokesman said two Israeli fighters attacked U.A.R. planes on a training flight inside U.A.R. boundaries. One Israeli plane was hit and the two planes fled back to Israel.

LODGED PROTEST

The U.A.R. spokesman said his country had lodged a protest with the United Nations mixed armistice commission.

The U.A.R. also protested against alleged Turkish violations of Arab air space. Informed sources said the protest was conveyed to Turkish government representatives at a Turko-Syrian border meeting Sunday. They claimed that Turkish planes violated Syrian air space more than three times last week.

Egyptian officials brushed off border troubles between Syria and Jordan as purely a local issue that Jordan's King Hussein "is trying to blow up into a big international incident."

TO MOSCOW?

Evangelist Billy Graham said in London today he may fly to Moscow for a few days to meet religious leaders there. Friends, earlier, said he had been invited to Russia by leaders of the Soviet Baptist Church. Graham said he believed "the Russian people are basically religious."

Pastor Fired For Pleading Race Harmony

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP)—The minister of the First Presbyterian Church was dismissed from the pulpit Sunday in an action that climaxed several years of dissension over the racial question.

A judicial commission on the southwest Georgia presbytery announced that Rev. Robert B. McNeill was being relieved of his pastoral obligations because "the interests of religion imperatively demand it."

The 44-year-old pastor was the author of an article in Look Magazine in 1957 in which he discussed ways of bringing racial harmony to the south through "creative contact between leaders of both races."

Trial Off For 1 Week

MAILLARDVILLE, B.C. (CP)—Basil Joe, 22, was remanded in custody for one week when he appeared in police court here today to face a charge of attempting to murder an RCMP constable.

Joe was charged after Constable John D. S. Clark was shot in the chest while investigating a brawl May 30 at the Colony Farm Indian Reserve at nearby Coquitlam.

Canada Envoy Meets Big 4 Ministers

GENEVA (Reuters)—Escott Reid, Canadian ambassador to West Germany, had a private meeting here today with Christian Herter, United States secretary of state.

Reid had informal luncheon talks during the weekend with Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd.

Reid will lunch today with West German foreign minister Heinrich von Brentano in a continuation of what a senior Canadian official described as a visit to learn as much as possible about the progress of the East-West talks.

The official said the Canadian government was "intensely interested" in trying to follow in various ways what was happening at Geneva. The Geneva conference was a "legitimate concern of the Canadian government."

Sub-to-Land Missile Mail Delivered by U.S. Rocket

CATAPULTED OVER FISSURES

Climbers Hurtle 1,800 Ft. Down Icy Mountain Slope

LONGVIEW, Wash. (AP)—Three Tacoma mountaineers, who suffered broken ankles and other injuries Sunday in a terrifying 1,800-foot slide down a steep snow slope on Mt. St. Helens, were rescued early today.

Sixty-four climbers from Washington and Oregon, taking part in a mountain rescue seminar at Mt. Hood, sped to the scene and participated in the massive mercy mission.

Victims of the accident near the top of 9,671-foot peak was George Cashman, 40, leader of the team; Mrs. Joe Cockrell, 37, and Jim Stelling, 14.

Cashman broke both ankles and also suffered an ankle dislocation. Mrs. Cockrell and young Stelling each fractured an ankle. All were badly cut and bruised, and were treated for shock before they were transferred to Tacoma hospitals.

The three were among 28 members of the Tacoma Mountaineers who had gone Saturday to the Cascade Mountain peak 60 miles northeast of here.

The group split up into climbing teams of threes and set out at 1.30 a.m. Sunday to ascend the mountain.

Cashman said after his rescue that one of the teams ahead lost footing at about the 8,000-foot level and slid a short distance on the icy, sheer slope. He said Mrs. Cockrell, making her first major climb, became frightened and the three decided to turn back.

They had gone only a short distance when one of them slipped and all three plummeted down the crevasse-laced slope, held together by their climbing ropes. They could not check their slide with ice axes and picked up so much speed they catapulted over the fissures.

2,000 PEASANTS RIOT OVER POTATO PRICES

MARIGLIANO, Italy (Reuters)—About 2,000 peasants protesting against low potato prices stormed into Marigliano today, set fire to the town hall, cut all telephone lines and set up road blocks.

The rioters were demonstrating against the low price they get for potatoes.

Did Margaret Say 'No' To Australian Visit?

LONDON (Reuters)—Australian Prime Minister Robert Menzies Sunday denied as "completely untrue" a Sydney newspaper report that Princess Margaret refused to visit Australia "as a political football."

The Sydney Sunday Mirror, in a story from London, said Menzies suggested at a luncheon here last week that Margaret and Queen Mother Elizabeth visit Australia in 1961—just before the next general elections.

The Mirror quoted Margaret as telling Menzies that she would not become a party to vote-catching and limelight-seeking by Australian politicians. It added that Margaret indicated she did not find prospects of an Australian tour "terribly appealing."

ON WORLD TOUR

Menzies, here on a world tour, said "the report is completely untrue" when informed of the story. "I will make no comment on any discussions I may have with the Royal Family."

Make or Break Berlin Talks By Big Four

GENEVA (Reuters)—The Big Four foreign ministers met in private today at the beginning of a "make or break" week of talks on Berlin.

The East-West ministers were reported to have reached a crisis point in their month-long negotiations here. Most observers predicted that they will produce a temporary agreement on Berlin that would pave the way for a summit meeting later this summer.

Today's meeting was at the villa of Foreign Minister Gromyko. The three Western ministers met for an hour with Heinrich von Brentano, West German foreign minister, before going to Gromyko's villa.

Meanwhile, American, British and Soviet delegates returned to work on their negotiations to bring a permanent end to nuclear tests. The two sides already have agreed on 17 articles of an international treaty to ban the tests.

The chief British delegate, David Ormsby-Gore, said he thought the new series of talks would "see the conference as far as we can take it."

"After that there will be some points for settlement by the heads of government. A great deal depends on what the Soviet delegate tells us."

FRANCE MOST HOPEFUL

In the foreign ministers' talks, the feeling inside the Western delegations appeared to have changed since the start of the conference with France replacing Britain as the most optimistic member.

Nevertheless, it seemed clear that Britain regarded a summit meeting as a foregone conclusion in view of Ormsby-Gore's statement.

The time and place of a summit parley have not been discussed, but the general feeling is that it would be in Geneva in the second half of next month.

Historic Test Proves Success

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States post office department today announced the first successful mail delivery by guided missile.

The missile, a Navy Regulus I, was launched by a U.S. submarine in the Atlantic and landed at the auxiliary naval air station at Mayport near Jacksonville, Fla.

The submarine was the Barbero, a missile vessel.

The distance the missile travelled was not disclosed. The department said only that the submarine was "somewhere at sea."

The navy, however, estimated that straight-line distance at about 100 miles.

The Regulus flies around 600 miles an hour and today's run took 22 minutes, which would indicate a total flight of well above 100 miles, including any changes of course and the landing manoeuvres. The Regulus is controllable in flight.

The cargo of 3,000 letters included one addressed to President Eisenhower.

Other messages in the cargo were for the postmasters-general of the 99 other countries which are members of the Universal Postal Union.

The missile was fired at 8.10 a.m., MDT, and landed safely at 8.32 a.m., the department said.

PERFECT LANDING

Postmaster-General A. E. Summerfield, describing the event in a telephone conversation with the Washington Evening Star, said the wheeled missile made a perfect landing on the runway, trailing a parachute to slow it down. The weight of the payload was not disclosed.

Postal workers unloaded the mail, processed it and sped it on its way.

Last Jan. 23 Summerfield predicted regular missile mail.

In an address to the annual awards dinner of National Business Publications, Inc., the postmaster-general said that before man reaches the moon "your mail will be delivered within hours from New York to California, to England, to India or to Australia by guided missiles."

ROCKET SHIP IN PERFECT GLIDE TEST

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP)—The rocket ship X-15, expected some day to carry man 100 miles high at 4,000 miles an hour, successfully made its first glide test today.

A brief announcement said everything went as planned.

This meant that the ship was dropped at 38,000 feet from a B-52 mother plane, glided for four or five minutes, and landed on a dry lake bed at 230 miles an hour.

Later this year the X-15 will undergo tests with jet engines. Next year all-out flight with rocket engines is planned.

Soviet Team To Visit Parliament

By VICTOR J. MACKIE
Times Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA—A visit to Canada will be made this month by five Russian deputies to the Supreme Soviet following prolonged discussion on whether an exchange of Canadian and Russian parliamentarians could be organized.

The Russian deputies will be the guests of Soviet Ambassador Aroutunian.

Arrangements are now being completed in the Soviet for the deputies to leave for Canada.

In Ottawa facilities probably will be provided by the Canadian government for the Russian deputies to see parliament in action.

Tentative arrangements are being made for the group to visit Niagara Falls, Toronto and Montreal where they will attend a performance given by the Bolshoi Ballet.

A plan for an exchange of parliamentarians between Canada and Russia was first proposed in Moscow four years ago. It was considered by Canadians but nothing ever came of it.

The Russian group will carry with them, it is understood, an invitation to Canadian parliamentarians to visit Russia.

Solo Ocean Voyage

LAS PALMAS, Canary Islands (AP)—Rene Lescombe, 24-year-old Frenchman, says he will leave in a few days on a solo, provisionless trip across the Atlantic aboard a metallic craft. He says that on the expected 55-day crossing to the French West Indies he will depend solely on fishing for food.

16 Killed As Old Bus Slams Tree

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Sixteen Mexican farm laborers were killed and 32 others were injured when a crudely fashioned truck-bus crashed into a tree and exploded near here today.

The highway patrol, which had difficulty determining the number of charred bodies in the twisted wreckage, listed the figures as official but said there might be more dead. Many of the injured were reported in serious condition with burns and broken bones.

'Two-Time Dad' Has Quads And Double Trouble Wives

(Times News Services)

NEW YORK—Cifo Bravata, four times proud when he became the father of quadruplets, also has double trouble. The New Jersey mother of his quads doesn't know he has a wife in New York City.

The quads—three healthy boys and a girl—were born Saturday at East Orange, N.J., hospital to Louise Bravata, 31.

Bravata, a railroad freight conductor who will be 41 on June 21, Father's Day, said all he wants is to do right by all six children.

Bravata said he met Louise several years before he left his wife, Grace, in Hollis, Queens. They have two children.

"I always intended to legalize it," he said. "My intentions were honorable. But how was I supposed to know we'd have quadruplets? If we'd had twins this wouldn't have happened."

Interviewed Sunday in his neat, four-room East Orange apartment, Bravata dolefully told reporters he planned to tell Louise about Grace today.

Asked how he thought Louise would take the news, he replied: "She's a sensible person."

Bravata said he and Grace were separated 2½ years ago.

He said he already had been to a lawyer to try and unscramble his difficulties. Asked how he planned to resolve things, Bravata said, "I don't know, that's up to the lawyer."

In a bitter mood and under sedation at her home, Grace Bravata lay limply in bed, her eyes red-rimmed and dark-circled. Asked about her husband, she moaned: "Oh, he's a fine one."

The new mother and all four quadruplets were reported doing fine.

LONDON — Pianist Wladziu Valentino Liberace of Milwaukee went to court today to press a libel suit against a London newspaper that carried an uncomplimentary account of him and his talents during a stage and TV tour he made here in 1956.

The suit is against The Daily Mirror, a tabloid with a circulation of 5,000,000, and Mirror columnist William Connor, who writes under the non-de-plume "Cassandra."

An article by Connor contained the following description of the pianist: "This deadly, winking, sniggering, snuggling, chromium-plated, scent-impregnated, luminous, quivering, giggling, fruit-flavored, mincing, ice-covered heap of mother love . . . ."

The Mirror column in which Connor wrote said further:

"Without doubt he is the biggest sentimental vomit of all time. Slobbering over his mother, winking at his brother and counting the cash at every second, this superb piece of calculating candy-floss has an answer for every situation."

Liberace's lawyer contended that the article constituted a serious attack on the pianist's morals.

OAKVILLE, Ont. — About 200 persons came to tea Sunday when the Oakville and District Humane Society threw a party.

The occasion was the opening of a new animal death chamber at the municipal dog pound.

LONDON — A 24-year-old Londoner claimed the world non-stop drumming record Saturday. Rory Blackwell passed the 28-hour mark set by Ben Pollack of New York in 1953 and kept going for three minutes and 15 seconds.

ADLAI FOR PRESIDENT? 'NO CHANCE' HE SAYS

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Adlai Stevenson said Saturday "there's not a chance" that he will run for president again. The 1952 and 1956 Democratic candidate for president spoke at the national business conference sponsored by the Harvard Business School.

'NO NEUTRALISM HERE'

PM Denies Canada Cool Towards NATO

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Prime Minister Diefenbaker Sunday assailed unfounded misgivings that Canada is easing up on its support of the North Atlantic Treaty Orgonization.

"There is not and has not been any neutralism in Canada; there is no weakening of support for NATO," Diefenbaker told the graduating class at Michigan State University.

Addressing an audience of 20,000 in sun-bathed Spartan Stadium, he reaffirmed that Canada intends to "maintain and assert her sovereignty in peacetime development.

But he acknowledged a need and willingness of Canada to share the costs and tasks of a joint military defence.

"Only in the maintenance of unity is there assurance of our survival," he said.

LEOPOLD STOKOWSKI . . . 'contrary' views

'Politics' Cancels Concert

BERLIN (Reuters) — A planned broadcast of Leopold Stokowski conducting the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra was cancelled Sunday by the American-operated West Berlin Rias radio station "for political reasons."

A station spokesman said the concert was not broadcast because "Stokowski expressed in East Germany an opinion "which is contrary to the political point of view of the Berliners and of the people in the Soviet zone (of East Germany)."

Stokowski, in an interview with the Communist East German news agency ADN, welcomed East German Communist leader Walter Ulbricht's invitation for the foreign ministers of the United States, Britain, France and Russia to visit East Germany, the spokesman said.

Hydrophones can detect many sounds under the seas from fish and other denizens, such as schools of shrimp.

ECONOMIC TALKS

East Germans in Moscow

MOSCOW (Reuters) — An East-German delegation led by Premier Otto Grotewohl and Communist party leader Walter Ulbricht arrived here today for a two-week visit to Russia.

The delegation was met at the airport by Soviet leaders headed by Nikita Khrushchev.

The 18-man party included government and party officials, experts in economics and industry, leaders of trade unions and minor parties in the Communist-led National Front.

An East German foreign ministry spokesman said Sunday night the talks would revolve chiefly around economic relations.

He flatly denied the visit was designed to put pressure on the Geneva foreign-ministers' conference.

Reporters asked the spokesman if talks would be held on signing a separate Soviet-East German peace treaty, which both parties have threatened to do if the Western powers fail to agree to a four-power peace treaty signed by East and West Germany separately.

He replied that "topical questions" would be discussed as well as the weather "and other pleasant things."

Meanwhile, East German Foreign Minister Lothar Bolz left here today by air for Geneva after weekend consulations here on the Big Four meeting.

He said at the airport:

"We regard the situation as not at all bad. We regard the pessimism in some press organs as not in accordance with the real situation.

"Certainly there will be results and we think we shall contribute toward them."

Vancouver Grain Shipments Decline

VANCOUVER (CP) — Grain exports from Vancouver during May were fairly steady despite opening of the St. Lawrence Seaway in the east, Vancouver Merchants' Exchange has reported. Shipments for the month totalled 13,799,994 bushels, compared with the 14,348,756 bushels shipped in May of 1958.

Shipments to the United Kingdom and Continental Europe showed a considerable drop, but this was made up by increased shippings to the Oritent and Siberia, the exchange said.

ONE NEW SHIP EQUAL TO THREE OLD ONES—PEARKES

'Grave Problem' in Shipyards

It is becoming "more and more difficult" to allocate enough government shipbuilding contracts to keep all shipyards busy because of increased efficiency of vessels now being built, Defence Minister George Pearkes said here Saturday.

Destroyer-escorts, such as HMCS Terra Nova, take the place of three older type ships, he said.

"The government would very much like to keep the limited number of major Canadian shipyards going, but with rapid advances in technology, ships are becoming bigger, costlier and more efficient."

The eight or nine main shipyards are "clamoring" for work and this presented a "grave problem," he said.

Government policy, he said, is to keep RCN anti-submarine strength to 20 destroyer-escorts.

HMCS Terra Nova Saturday became the twelfth of these modern fighting ships to commission; two others in the Restigouche class will be completed by the end of the year and six more of an improved design are scheduled for construction within a few months.

Keel for one of the repeat-Restigouch ships will be laid at Victoria Machinery Depot this fall.

NO MORE

"We have nothing more on the books at the present time," the minister said.

Concerning the mooted lengthening of Patricia Bay Airport runway, sought by several civic bodies including city council, Gen. Pearkes said: "I think the policy has been reconsidered."

Work was being concentrated on strengthening the existing runway, he said, though plans have been readied to lengthen the runway if the need arises.

"If TCA and CPA have a requirement for lengthening the runways, then runways would be lengthened.

But the minister, said he could not visualize big intercontinental aircraft stopping at Patricia Bay. The need was just not here.

Questioned about the Bomarc missile, Gen. Pearkes said Canada is proceeding with installation of bases in the expectation the weapon will be available by 1961.

BEST WEAPON

"But if it does not reach expectations, we won't go ahead."

Many bases covering populated areas of Canada will be south of the border, he said. This would be the case for B.C.

"We are confident the Bomarc is the best weapon now under development to meet our needs."

He said the best prospect for an anti-missile missile to meet any threat of ICBM attack would appear to be the U.S. Nike Zeus.

The defence minister told reporters the RCN is considering use of helicopters on its destroyer-escort vessels to aid in anti-submarine detection.

He said he had himself landed in a helicopter on the deck of one of the new vessels and was impressed with the possibilities.

'Hunt-Down, Sink Missile-Hurlers'

Commissioning Saturday at Victoria Machinery Depot of the newest RCN destroyer-escort, HMCS Terra Nova, pointed up the navy's concern with possible submarine menace to coastal and inland cities.

Defence Minister George Pearkes said there is no immediate defence today against a missile once it had been launched, so it's up to ships like the Terra Nova to hunt down and sink enemy submarines before missile launching.

MAJOR THREAT

A message from Vice-Admiral H. G. DeWolf, chief of naval staff, read by Rear Admiral H. S. Raynor, flag officer, Pacific Coast, also emphasized the importance of the anti-submarine role of the RCN.

"Submarines today pose a major threat to great cities hundreds of miles inland. This threat must be met not only in coastal waters but far out to sea."

He said vessels such as the Terra Nova were "dedicated to the prevention of another world war."

Harold Husband, president of VMD, in remarks to assembled guests, said the new vessel was "acknowledged to be better than or equal to anything of its size and purpose today."

All work on the modern vessel was done at VMD, from the keel up, bearing witness, to the skill of company craftsmen and engineers.

But Mr. Husband expressed concern over lack of new ship contracts to keep yards working and retain the industry's skilled employees.

"We are hopeful," he said, "that a more equitable distribution of shipbuilding contracts from departments of the government other than the defence department will enable us to maintain these skilled workers until long-term plans for rebuilding Canada's merchant marine become effective."

Mr. Husband formally handed over Terra Nova to Rear Admiral B. R. Spencer, chief of naval technical services, who accepted on behalf of the RCN.

Admiral Spencer pointed out that 2,500,000 man-hours of labor had been spent on the ship, and that over the last 50 years the RCN had been "well-served" by VMD in both building and repairing vessels.

The Terra Nova's first captain, Cmdr. W. H. Willson, addressed his remarks to the ship's company.

"Today we are commissioning one of the finest ships in the navy, and we will face challenges from here on in. The ability to meet these challenges depends on each one doing his duty."

Following the speeches came the religious services, then lowering of the Red Ensign and raising of the White Ensign on the ship's stern.

Cmdr. Willson was piped aboard where he greeted Gen. Pearkes and other guests who were shown over the ship.

PUBLISHER ENTERTAINS NEWSPAPER EMPLOYEES

Mrs. Ross Cuts Cake for Times '75th'

FORTY-FIVE-POUND anniversary fruit cake was cut by Mrs. Frank Ross, wife of lieutenant-governor. Times publisher Stuart Keate is interested observer. All present received portion of cake, wrapped in dainty doily.

Governor Leads Ovation For 62-Year Staff Member

The 75th anniversary of Times publication was marked Sunday afternoon at a reception given by Publisher Stuart Keate and Mrs. Keate for all employees of the Victoria Press Limited plant.

Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Frank Ross were honor guests of the affair at Holyrood House.

Opening a brief ceremony Mr. Keate recalled a few anecdotes from the early life of the Times and expressed thanks of the management for the loyal service of all employees engaged in the production of the paper.

The lieutenant-governor said that the newspaper had made "a significant contribution to the life of Victoria and Canada, and published editorials which gave leadership."

In expressing the appreciation of Mrs. Ross and himself for a period of happy association with newspapers, His Honor remarked:

"We are only human beings and like all human beings, we make mistakes. The press has been very lenient with us."

As a souvenir of the occasion, Mr. Keate presented Mr. and Mrs. Ross with a new painting of Government House, specially commissioned from artist Edward Goodall.

The finders of the "Times diamond" were next honored. The $1,000 diamond and platinum ring which was the object of a "treasure hunt" three weeks ago was presented to Mr. and Mrs. George West by Associate Editor Brian Tobin. It was Mr. West, through his knowledge of stones, who unearthed, near the top of Mount Douglas, the certificate entitling him to the diamond.

He placed it on his wife's finger, along with a joyful buss.

A presentation was then made to William G. Lemm who is the longest service employee of the paper and will retire June 30.

When the audience of 250 began to applaud Mr. Lemm, the lieutenant-governor stood and led the veteran's friends in a standing ovation.

Spontaneously, the guests began to sing "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," followed by "Three cheers and a tiger."

Editor Bruce Hutchison, in expressing the paper's appreciation of the veteran's 62 years with the firm, noted that this period was almost as long as the 75 year history of the paper itself. Mr. Lemm's two daughters, Mrs. Cecil Ridout and Mrs. Alex Cudlip, were present with their husbands.

Mr. Lemm was presented with a portable TV set.

To close the ceremony, a huge birthday cake was wheeled into the hall and the first cut was made by Mrs. Ross. She was then presented with the knife used in making the cut.

The cake was made in the shape of a pile of newspapers and the top was decorated with a replica of the art work which appears on the front page of today's anniversary section. This is artist Duncan de Kergommeaux's impression of the sights and sounds of a newspaper.

TWO NOTABLE MEN here congratulate each other for their long association with the Times. Editor Bruce Hutchison, left, started in sports department 41 years ago. Bill Lemm ends 62 years with newspaper at end of month. Mr. Hutchison said Mr. Lemm helped "show me the ropes" long ago.

TO COUNTER REDS

'Political Warfare' For NATO?

LONDON (AP) — Western leaders at the Atlantic Congress today urged NATO to set up a division of counter-propaganda to fight back at Soviet political warfare.

They urged, too, that the West sponsor a new international organization to be called the Free World Association. Open to all nations, its aims would be to make clearer "the ideological aggression of totalitarian Communism" and the true value of liberty.

These proposals were among recommendations set before the congress, an unofficial NATO parliament. They came from subcommittees which have been debating for three days the course NATO should take in the next 10 years.

The subcommitte on Soviet and Western propaganda techniques reported a grave risk that deficiencies in Western propaganda may lead to defeat of the West in the cold war.

"The U.S.S.R. has set up the most gigantic machinery ever known for the purpose of enslaving public opinion," it said.

"It is to this machinery, as much as to their military might, that the Soviets owe their principal achievements, including their territorial successes."

The subcommittee proposed that a NATO counter-propaganda division expose the tricks of Soviet political warfare, devise means of forestalling them and keep the objectives of the free world before the captive nations.

The projected Free World Association, it suggested, could operate radio stations and set up education centres to train "advocates of freedom."

FRANCE WANTS ATOM SECRETS FOR NATO AID

PARIS (UPI) — President Charles de Gaulle served notice today that France is going to make no further commitments to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization unless and until the United States and Britain share their atomic secrets with this country.

De Gaulle's new flare-up with his allies became public when news leaked out that NATO fighter-bombers are being moved out of France.

The reason: France won't allow atomic weapons on its soil unless it can share control of them. Neither the United States nor Britain has been willing to share this control. So the planes must fly to Britain or West Germany to be armed.

Work in Fall On New UBC Medical Unit

VANCOUVER (CP) — Construction of a $2,800,000 medical science centre at the University of B.C. will begin Oct. 1, university president N. A. M. MacKenzie said Sunday.

Dr. MacKenzie said the centre will have four units, three to be built immediately and the fourth at a later date.

The centre will be completed in September, 1961, and will house UBC's medical faculty which has been accommodated in wooden huts since the faculty was established in 1950.

The largest unit, a four-storey structure, will house the department of pharmacology, pathology and neurological research. The others, both three storeys, will accommodate the departments of physiology, biochemistry and anatomy and the cancer research institute.

The fourth unit, when built, will house the biomedical library, lecture theatres, administration offices and a student lounge.

The construction, together with a $1,500,000 fine arts centre—now in its planning stage—and a $1,400,000 commerce and business administration buildings to be started in September, will increase the value of UBC construction projects to more than $15,000,000.

The building program is financed by grants from the provincial government, the Canada council and the UBC development fund.

TWO TEENAGERS CHARGED

Girl 'Fingered' Victim In Holdup and Slaying

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two teen-aged boys were charged with homicide today for allegedly throwing a 54-year-old man to his death from the tracks of a Brooklyn elevated station.

Police said a 15-year-old girl whose window overlooked the station had fingered the man as a hold-up victim to the two youths prowling the street below.

The body of Francis J. Fitzpatrick, a bank maintenance employee was found on the street 40 feet below the tracks early Saturday morning.

Richard Murph, 18, and Roy Meyers, 16, were arrested Sunday. The girl who allegedly pointed out the lonely robbery victim to them was not identified and not held.

Persistent patrolman, Robert Thornton, who refused to believe Fitzpatrick had either jumped or fallen from the tracks was credited with piecing together the story of his death, primarily from persons who witnessed all or part of the attack from nearby windows.

Police said Fitzpatrick had visited his estranged wife and their children on Friday evening and had left, with about $100 in his pocket, saying he planned to visit some friends.

He apparently was the only person waiting for the train at about 2.30 a.m. when the girl spotted him from a window. The youths ran up the station steps and demanded his money, police said. He refused, and they attacked him, causing him to fall to the tracks. As he lay there, police said, the boys took light bulbs from the station fixtures and threw them at him.

Fitzpatrick picked himself up, police said, and attempted to run across or down the tracks. The youths allegedly chased him, wrestled with him and threw him over the edge.

Officials found only $1.84 in his wallet.

SCIENTISTS SEALED UP 5 MONTHS IN 'MOON'?

SEATTLE (AP) — Five scientists may be sealed in a simulated moon station for five months as a research project to be exhibited at the Century 21 exposition.

The defence department and the national aeronautics and space administration are considering authorizing the $2,900,000 project, the Times said Sunday.

The plan was outlined by Francis D. Miller, deputy U.S. commissioner for the exposition in a dispatch from New York.

It calls for the construction of a 32-foot steel sphere in which conditions simulating those found on the moon would be maintained. The sphere would contain plants for food, a laboratory, animals and living quarters for the scientists.

The scientists would enter the air-tight chamber the day the fair opens in May, 1961 and would attempt to remain for five months.

Ex-CPR Chairman Dies in Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — George A. Walker, who rose from messenger boy to chairman of the Canadian Pacific Railway, died in hospital Sunday after a lengthy illness. He was 80.

He served the CPR for 68 years said to be a railroading record in Canada. He started as a 12-year-old messenger boy in Toronto, studied law in his spare time, became CPR solicitor, then a vice-president, a director, and finally, in 1948, chairman of the system.

Our Birthday Credo

TOMORROW, JUNE 9, THIS newspaper observes its seventy-fifth anniversary. In the recorded history of civilization, 75 years is little more than the wink of an eye; in Canada's story it encompasses a substantial period in the growth of this young nation.

It also represents a fair portion of the life of this 116-year-old city. Several businesses, still extant, are older than we. It is a source of pride, and pleasure, to The Times that we have come down through the years with these and newer firms, in amicable partnership, to contribute to the development of this blessed community.

We pause, in our special Anniversary Supplement, to remember those who have gone before—and to look ahead at Victoria's promising future. Our thoughts, in The Times family today, are particularly with those who helped to build the character of this newspaper: men and women like "Big Bill" Templeman, Benny Nicholas, Nancy Hodges, Bob Thomson, Archie Wills and many others. They labored devotedly to lay the foundation of today's paper.

It is a curious fact, but nonetheless a fact, that the inanimate grouping of newsprint, ink, and metal can, over the years, evolve a distinctive personality which we call "character." What is this? Perhaps the best definition is that of the late Manchester Guardian editor, C. P. Scott, who described it as "the slow deposit of past actions and ideals."

The 1884 editors of The Times expressed their aims in these terms:

"Whatever (The Times) may have to say on any subject, or whichever side it may deem proper to take on any question, will be as fairly stated as it can do so—and its opinion will be given in unmistakable language, so that the meaning cannot be misconstrued, or any uncertainty attached to it. It will always have the courage of its convictions . . . The weak need never appeal to The Daily Times in vain, nor will the backs of those who deserve the lash be spared through fear or favor. Neither friendship nor grievances of a private nature will be allowed to influence either the inserting or witholding of any article."

Honest words, these, and as valid today as they were when first written. The Times has done its best to live up to them; to be a paper of courage and integrity, of good heart and cheer and taste, and with a deep respect for the human personality.

It has sought to support and promote every worthwhile community endeavor, to remind its readers from time to time of the special delights of living in this Island home, but at the same time to foster the broader expression of a vigorous Canadianism which cannot be isolated from the rest of the world.

While liberal by tradition and in its beliefs, The Times today refuses to make any direct ties or commitments with any political party or special interest, on the grounds that the essential quality of the honest newspaper is freedom to criticize, in what it feels to be the public interest. This faith is embodied in the maxim: "The editorial columns belong to the newspaper; the news columns to its readers." This latter responsibility includes the duty of the newspaper to record faithfully opinion which it may privately abhor.

To be as accurate as humanly possible; to be fair; to be gracious: these are the standards we set for ourselves. On this anniversary occasion we thank our hosts of loyal readers for their warm support of this policy, and pledge ourselves anew to the vigorous execution of our duties in the years that lie ahead.

Bring on the Plebiscite

GREATER VICTORIA RESIDENTS should welcome the proposed opportunity to vote on fluoridation of the water supply.

There have been many arguments raised against this dental health measure, ranging from hysterical claims that the Communists are plotting to soften our brains, to more reasoned objections to provision of the protection by means of the public water supply.

Against this opposition the medical and dental associations of both Canada and the United States have taken a strongly sustained stand. Tests of the effects of fluoridation on the teeth of young children have been carried on for more than ten years—in fact, studies of this subject are said to be the most exhaustive ever given to a medical or dental problem.

Results of the tests have convinced medical and dental authorities that fluoridation has spectacularly successful results in protecting children's teeth from decay, and that no harmful effects are caused by continued use.

As of the beginning of this year, about one in every four persons in the United States served by community water supplies were using fluoridated water. Of the 41 million persons concerned, 34 million were using water to which a proper proportion of fluoride salts had been added; seven million were using water which contained an effective amount of fluoride provided by nature.

In the welter of controversy which no doubt will follow the present proposal, voters should remember three things: the whole subject has been very thoroughly explored by experts and pronounced valuable and beneficial; the cost is very small; more than half of the decay problems which now afflict children's teeth will be solved very quickly.

A plebiscite will provide an opportunity no parent should miss.

Oak Bay Stayed Home

MR. F. A. ROBINSON HAS been returned to the Oak Bay Council with a total of less than 800 by-election votes and Mr. John D. Watts has been elected to that body with just over 600.

The two gentlemen are to be congratulated on their success. The voters of Oak Bay who stayed away from the polls on Saturday deserve no congratulations at all.

Less than one-fifth of the residents entitled to mark ballots took the trouble to go to the polling station. That, as Reeve George Murdoch points out, is not good enough, is, in fact, the kind of apathy which permits democratic practice to languish.

The reeve has expressed his disgust. Well he might. What price the adult franchise if it is not worth using by four out of five people?

Honi Soit . . .

A DRAMA CRITIC IN LONDON discusses in a United States newspaper a new play, "The Pleasure of His Company", and draws from it an interesting social observation on our times and conventions.

The play presents a gay, irresponsible playboy father who has left his wife and daughter and returns to them on the eve of the girl's marriage to a very dull young fellow. Such is the father's charm and persuasiveness that he triumphantly carries the daughter off for a tour of Europe, leaving the wedding bells to jangle in vain, according to the critic's account.

This could be innocent enough. It is nevertheless a commentary on our civilization that the reviewer reports, "Two celebrated and intelligent English actors, not more than ordinarily noted for the puritanism of their outlook, are said to have declined to appear in 'The Pleasure of His Company' on the ground that its events are impossible without presupposing a state of affection between father and daughter closer than is permissible."

The critic further states that "the authors certainly have not intended that their play should be interpreted in this way. What they have written is a bright and witty comedy about the irresistible charm of a wayward rascal. . . .

"Yet," he adds, "for myself, I could not help agreeing with those two actors."

There is a famous quotation saying "To the pure, all things are pure."

The report of the drama critic on "The Pleasure of His Company" indicates that there just aren't enough "pure" people around to enjoy a witty comedy without implying an improper relationship where none need exist.

And that provides its own commentary on the times in which we live.

LOOK-ALIKES By B. A. TOBIN

Papers and People

Tobin

A NEWSPAPER, like a man, has a birth and a beginning. It has its toddling days, its adolescence and its years of maturity. But a newspaper is an institution, and although it takes on the pattern and character of the humans who control its destiny it differs greatly from them in its longevity. The probable life span of a man can be predicted with fair accuracy at his birth. His expectation of life can be reduced to statistics and graphs. It varies from country to country, but although he may fall far short of the Biblical three-score-and-ten or exceed it by a few years, it is reasonably safe to say of any newborn citizen that he will not live to be 100.

What can be said of a newspaper? The start of a journal may be accompanied by optimistic predictions that it will live forever, or it may be launched amid voices of doom which foretell a swift end.

Many a journalistic venture in the early days of British Columbia lasted only a couple of issues. At the other end of the scale are such Titans as The Times of London, which began publication more than 170 years ago. Like man, some survive, some die, some accomplish much and some do little, but they are not subject to the short lifespan which is all mankind can hope for.

Few newspapers live out their time without a change of name, a merger with some other publication, a change in ownership or policy or appearance. But through all such physical metamorphoses a paper may retain its character the intangible feel or atmosphere, the spirit of the journal.

Individual Character

It is a different thing from policy or political leaning; it may even dwarf the personalities of the human beings who own and operate the newspaper. But it is there, for better or for worse, and readily recognized by those who open its pages each day in search of news, opinion or entertainment.

In its relationship to the community also, a newspaper has many human attributes. A man may help to shape his social environment, and is in turn shaped by it. It is the same with a newspaper.

Someone has said that a community receives the type of newspaper it deserves. A slick, flashy sort of community will be reflected in a slick, flashy type of press. A steady, progressive town will have a paper to match its pace.

There is one other major way in which a newspaper's career differs from a man's. Inevitably, a man's years of activity are limited; he has his day, slows down and then retires. But a newspaper knows no such restrictions. Its vigor can increase with age, its interests broaden and its influence grow.

At 75, like this paper, it can be enjoying a peak of activity and energy, with unnumbered peaks to come. Man himself cannot match that pace for long.

No man can thrive without freedom, nor can a newspaper. The right to develop, to believe and to communicate with others is inherent in journalism, as in mankind. Any attempt to deprive the press of its freedom is an attempt to destroy it. And so, like man, the press must be continually alert for signs of tyranny.

Yesterday was Freedom of the Press Day, to celebrate which the newspapers of North and South America note in print their good fortune in enjoying freedom, or by silent protest indicate that they are muzzled and their freedom is gone.

Threat Persists

There have been occasional attempts in Canada to place fetters on the press. The Alberta press law, to compel papers to print Government replies to various news items, was disallowed and is now only a record in the files but a record which should not be forgotten. There have been several attempts in Quebec to control or prohibit the dissemination of news and opinion at least one in respect of religious matters.

But in South America the tradition has not been so well observed. Many an outspoken paper in Latin America has been closed or taken over when it offended the regime in power. The newspapers of more than one country operate under censorship, whether direct or hidden. Under such circumstances the press becomes an echo rather than a voice, a shadow instead of a body.

For 75 years The Times has enjoyed press freedom, and helped to preserve it. In the long run, it is only the public that can guarantee such freedom by refusing to permit governmental tampering when such a mistake threatens.

And it is the public that reaps the benefit of news that is not doctored by some government office, opinion that is not hushed or twisted by political leverage, space for the free expression of thoughts and beliefs where the community can read them and agree or disagree.

With such freedoms a newspaper carries equal responsibilities. By measuring up to those responsibilities it ensures continued life.

We now have an extraordinary knowledge of the history of mammals. We can, for instance, follow the process of gradual change which converts a creature about the size and something of the build and probably food habits of a pig into an elephant, over a period of some 40,000,000 years.

As Our Readers See It

Arboretum Misunderstanding

If the last meeting of the Community Planning Association was reported correctly, it appears that Mr. W. H. Warren, city parks administrator, and Mr. J. E. Bosher, vice-chairman of the Capital Region Planning Board, made a most uncalled for attack on the Victoria Arboretum Society a group which had not officially sought the aid of the association, and was not represented at the gathering.

That the neighborhood of Victoria offers unique opportunities as the site for an arboretum is a scientifically established fact. The immediate need, if an arboretum is to be established, is the securing of land for this purpose. The society has the vision to realize this, and wishes to obtain a grant of the Elk Lake property held by Victoria a proposal viewed favorably by Saanich. Eventually the society hopes to obtain federal support for a "National Arboretum." The whole plan is a long term one but "Big oaks from little acorns grow," as Mr. Warren should appreciate. Are the aims of this society so fantastic that the movement should be designated by Mr. Bosher as "misplaced enthusiasm"?

Mr. Warren states that, because of the cost, an arboretum must be associated with a university. Is he not aware that Victoria College is growing rapidly, that within a few years it will be offering four years in the liberal arts and science, and that by 1970 it will have a student body of over two thousand? The College Council has had the foresight to secure adequate lands for the day of the College's expansion into a full fledged university.

The establishing of an arboretum requires the good will and support of the entire community. It is something of which Victoria could be proud. The pronouncements of the two critics in their official capacities will carry great weight with the public. Have not these gentlemen been mistaken as to the plans of the society, and misled by the bogey of increased municipal costs, a bogey which does not exist?

Incidentally, the writer is not a member of the Arboretum Society.

Wenner-Gren and the Peace

Apropos the letter by Hugh Peters, Victoria Times, June 1, re Wenner-Gren:

Some readers also remember that on the occasion when Wenner-Gren appeared here in his "palatial yacht" (also described as a "floating laboratory" and a "floating arsenal") ostensibly for a social meeting with various persons whom he had rescued from the torpedoed Athenia, he and his yacht were put under surveillance by the RCMP who required him to give up his arms, restricted his itinerary, and shortly ordered him to leave Canadian waters.

An official plane escorting his yacht to keep him under observation, suddenly plummeted into Georgia Strait while circling his "laboratory," and was lost. Naturally RCMP gave no explanation to the public for the police watch; but the fact that there was such a watch carries its own connotations.

Some readers also recall that a little time before the incident of the Athenia, Wenner-Gren proposed to endow science research at Toronto University with a gift of $25,000. This being a pretentious sum of money in that period, the delighted president of Toronto University hastily accepted the donation and made suitable acknowledgment in the newspapers.

He was humiliated to be obliged to reverse himself in a few days: a condition of the endowment had been the University's acceptance of a scientist sponsored by Wenner-Gren to work in research in a position in the immediate neighborhood of a project already under way, so "top secret" that the president himself had been unaware of its nature. When the president declined to place the scientist sponsored by Wenner-Gren in the position suggested, Wenner-Gren accepted return of his money by the president.

Wenner-Gren not only traded with the enemy in munitions but made munitions for them in the last war.

His behavior in connection with the Toronto University affair is an interesting recollection in view of his present connection with Peace River Power Development. Company's asserted aim to use Peace power to process uranium. While processed uranium is a fuel used for atomic power plants it is also a high priority war material.

If Wenner-Gren does in fact "control" this company which has this objective, such control would appear to be an obstacle to the aim. Our public information presents us with an anomalous situation: either the statement of the aim as processing uranium is misleading, or the information that Wenner-Gren controls the company is exaggerated, or Wenner-Gren's control is temporary.

There are now 12 companies besides Wenner-Gren's company in PRPD Co., and conceivably some of them may wish to use Peace power to process uranium, who might be acceptable to the Federal Government but not in association with Wenner-Gren!

However as Premier Bennett gave Wenner-Gren a five-year monopoly of Peace sites (which he can extend) any such interest has had to accept association with Wenner-Gren to get going. To proceed, it must somehow get out of association at what price? Did Wenner-Gren foresee precisely that situation when he solicited control of the power sites?

"VOTER."

FROM WARSAW By JOSEPH ALSOP

'Boguslaw Sent Me'

Alsop

THE approach to the speakeasy is through a rubble-strewn courtyard, under a rickety scaffolding, and then up flight after flight of unswept stairs. If one of your party is known, you are admitted with no questions asked; otherwise a friend's name must be mentioned. But it is enough to murmur "Boguslaw sent me," and you are welcomed to the tiny two-room apartment. Nothing quite like this apartment exists anywhere else in the world. No single piece of furniture has not been gravely maimed or wounded at some time in its past. But this hardy matters; most of the many visitors, whether young or old, blue-jeaned or bourgeois, are content to sit on the floor.

The wares the speakeasy offers are at least hinted by the apartment's decoration.

Abstract paintings, strange and menacing constructions of wire and masking tape, great numbers of fragments of Polish baroque church sculpture, two damaged but still magical Polish-Byzantine icons, the remnants of a beautifully tender late Gothic altar piece all these and many other objects are hung or strewn about.

And indeed the speakeasy's patrons do not come for vodka but in search of art, or culture or a new esthetic insight, call it what you will.

For this is the apartment of Myron Bialoszewski, the most hermetic, the most experimental, and among the youths the most admired of the newer Polish poets.

Satiric Plays

Even before the Stalinist times ended, Bialoszewski began to offer clandestine readings of his poetry and performances of his satiric plays at an earlier apartment-theatre. It was illegal then. It is legal now. Yet the speakeasy atmosphere survives from the early times.

Nor is this atmosphere wholly false, since the fruit consumed though not forbidden, so to say, is at least strongly disapproved.

The performance itself is a minor marvel of style and ingenuity. Sacking and black paper make a backdrop, designed by a leading Polish abstract painter. The curtain is sacking, too. The menacing constructions of wire and masking tape turn up as quite wonderful mask-headdresses that transform the actors into faceless bureaucrats for a Kafka-touched dramatic poem.

Bert Brecht, Kafka, Dada in its first day, Jean Cocteau when he was young —these are the reminiscences one feels. According to my earnestly intellectual university friends, Alex and Marious, who call themselves "metaphysical existentialists," Bialoszewski is also "obsessed by suburbs," so perhaps there is also a touch of John Betjeman.

Young Bialoszewski himself and a pretty artist-engineer actress, Ludmilla Mutanska, are the chief mimes. Both have great talent.

The whole performance is quite plainly marked by a strange mixture of wry, near-lunatic wit, deep world-sadness, and Alexandrian hospitality to all imaginable cultural influences. So much is legible in the general style. But of course one cannot read the true meaning of highly experimental work in another language.

In any case, the important point about this semi-speakeasy of culture is not the literal meaning of the plays and poems that are mimed there twice a week to a tiny but full house. The important point is simply that such an institution should exist on this side of the grim line that divides the world, here in Communist-ruled Poland.

As Bialoszewski's poetic and dramatic writing is wholly political, the existence of his apartment-theatres is perhaps less surprising than the existence of the "Stodola".

Experimental Writing

This is another theatre, supported by the Warsaw Polytechnic students, of all people, erected by another brilliant younger poet, Cheinski, and housed in a barn that defiantly faces Stalin's monstrous gift to Warsaw, the Palace of Culture. Here, in the frightful shadow of the old tryant's ghost, as it were, plays are offered that briskly mingle the most experimental writing with sharp political satire.

The "Stodola" in turn is still less surprising than the recent enormously successful publication of the book on Spinoza called "Antimonies of Freedom," by the leading Polish philosopher, Leszek Kolakowski.

Around his study of his mighty predecessor, Kolakowski has woven a bold dialogue on freedom, morality, and government. His book, reportedly, is a seminal and innovating masterwork. The West will soon be able to test this judgment, since French translation and publication of the book have already been arranged.

This is not to say that the intellectual life of Gomulka's Poland is wholly free. The poet Adam Vazyk, has been denied a passport to travel abroad; and so have two or three other writers. The censor sometimes wields a heavy hand, especially on writing that is judged "too sad."

Moreover, the party authorities, whose taste in the arts must rather closely resemble the taste of Presidents Eisenhower and Truman, are quite visibly bewildered and horrified by Poland's rich intellectual and creative life. But it must be admitted that the minister of culture himself strongly recommended a visit to the "Stodola."

Visiting Russians

By the same token, the Russian intellectuals who come here are either shocked and frightened out of their wits or totally intoxicated. Many Russians have learned Polish, in order to reach such writers as Kafka and Joyce who have only been published in Polish in the Communist world. Visiting Russians continuously sweep Warsaw clean of the reproductions of modern Western painters that are produced here.

As for the Poles, one wonders whether their intellectual and creative life is not so rich and vivid precisely because they are stimulated by "fear of the great desert on the edge of which we live," as one of them put it to me.

"When I stayed there last summer, I always did the dusting, and sometimes I didn't put things back exactly right. Aunt Julia used to check it after I was finished. Very sweetly, mind you, so I wouldn't know what she was doing. Just an inch this way or that way. It was as good as a play to watch."

Daphne laughed. "What about the tea kettle?"

"Oh, that was going fairly well. Uncle Robert still insists that if you fill it with hot water, it takes less time to boil and therefore the annual saving of electricity is quite considerable. Aunt Julia's stopped struggling over that one. She fills it with hot water when he's there, but she makes her little protest by murmuring that the cold water's fresher and makes a better cup of tea. But they still have trouble over the butter."

"The butter?"

"Yes, the butter must be on the righthand side of the fridge. Not the bottom shelf, but the next-to-bottom shelf. Uncle Robert's very apt to put in on the lefthand side after he's had his little bedtime snack. Worse still, when he's drying the dishes, he sometimes hangs the little silver cream jug on a brass hook instead of putting it beside the sugar basin on the little tray. Aunt Julia's much too sweet to scold him, of course, but there's usually a buzzing murmur about how she does wish Robert would remember, and it's so tiresome when things aren't in their proper place."

"Remember the oak leaves in the fall?" said Daphne. "Uncle Robert always used to take them from the driveway to the border."

Miriam nodded. "Yes, and Ted told him that it was crazy to do that on a day when the wind was blowing from the border to the driveway. Ted was never his favorite nephew, but after that day he was definitely out!"

"It's mean of us to laugh," said Daphne. "Because we're beginning to be just the same. I'm quite fussy about the scissors on the little hook in the kitchen. It always fusses me to see John use them and not put them away."

"String," said Miriam. "I can't bear to see good string cut. It should be undone carefully, wound round the fingers, and tied off neatly with a special little loop."

"Ridiculous," said Daphne. "I couldn't feel violently about string. But not putting the cap back on the toothpaste is a really serious crime. Hanging's too good for anyone who leaves the top off the toothpaste."

"Squeezing it from the middle is worse," said Miriam.

"I can see them coming," Daphne said. "All the funny little ways. Isn't it queer? And when we were young, we never dreamed we'd be like that."

LONDON LETTER By WALLACE REYBURN

British Like Dr. Salk

Reyburn

LONDON — Names in the news . . . Dr. Jonas Salk, on a visit here, has earned great admiration from the British. Not only of course for his discovery of the polio vaccine named after him, but because he turns out to be very modest about it and because they've learned that he has not made a penny out of it.

"That doesn't interest me," he says. "That is not the reason for my work."

It has been suggested that such a benefactor to the British should be given a knighthood by the Queen. An American being knighted? It's not unique. Honorary knighthoods have been bestowed on President Eisenhower, General Omar Bradley, Admiral Chester Nimitz and, strangely enough, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.

Bea Lillie has set us a whom-do-we-believe poser. Her reason for her version of Auntie Mame folding up: high royalties demanded by the U.S. owners of the show crippled it. Reason given by the producer: Bea Lillie's contract couldn't be extended. Reason with the ring of truth to it, from the Jack Hylton management, who put on the play: Auntie Mame is closing for the reason all plays close. The house is empty. It's not doing business.

A bit unfair of the management to issue a blunt statement like that. Usual thing in the London theatre, when a play with anyone as celebrated as Bea Lillie in it has to close, is to let the artist concerned cover up with "excessive American royalties," "other commitments" or one of the other old standbys such as "that long hot spell killed it" or "it was in the wrong sort of theatre."

Sandy Macpherson, of Paris, Ont., looked very much the tweedy English gentleman when I bumped into him. Not surprising when he told me he had now clocked up 30 years in England, 20 of them playing theatre organ programs for the BBC—and still going strong.

Godfrey Winn, that darling of the women's magazine, has been writing about marriages yet again, this time on the angle of whether or not it helps the Queen's marriage to have Prince Philip away globe-trotting for 100 days.

Seeing Godfrey Winn, very much a bachelor, sounding off once more on marriage, someone expressed his feeling of nausea. To which a friend of mine remarks: "When dear Godfrey writes about marriage, it's science fiction."

Ginger Rogers, now 47, flew in to make a singing-dancing come-back that will please those who remember at first hand the old Astaire-Rogers musicals. But those without nostalgia to help them, may find her television appearance (for a British record £2,500) a bit disappointing.

The vehicle is a TV version of a tired old stage musical called Carissima, written, by coincidence, by Eric Maschwitz, newly appointed head of BBC light entertainment.

HOME GARDEN By HILDA BEASTALL

Vacation-Time Jottings

Hilda

Summer vacations are in sight for most people. For those with gardens there is more to it than travelling as quickly as possible from one point on the map to another.

While the home garden is left temporarily in the care of a good neighbor, the interest of the vacationist is readily attracted to plants noticed along the way.

Much enjoyment can be gained if the whole family keeps a sharp lookout for public parks and unusual plants in private gardens.

Parks officials in most cities are willing to provide names and other information concerning plants which are perhaps not labelled.

It is necessary to make a note of the correct botanical name, because plants are, unfortunately, known under different common names in various parts of the country.

When a particularly interesting plant is found, a brief description of it will help you to recall it more clearly when the holiday is over.

Notes made on cigaret packets, or, as my husband does, on the inside cover of the cigaret paper booklet, are not really permanent enough to survive a trip. A pocket notebook is more durable.

If the chief interest is in trees and shrubs, their general habits should be noted, together with ultimate height and width, as well as whether the chief interest is in their foliage or flowers. Also whether the foliage is evergreen or if the branches are left bare for the winter.

This summer get more from your vacation by adding information which may be used for improving your garden.

UNTIL ACOUSTICON TOOK CARE OF MY HEARING STRAIN

I just didn't hear clearly, couldn't seem to understand some words. They sounded blurred, fuzzy. I had to strain to hear.

People thought I was deaf. But then Acousticon took care of my hearing strain. I was amazed at how clearly I could hear again—without strain or doubt! I haven't heard this well in years.

There's a new booklet that tells all about hearing strain and what you can do about it. It's FREE. No obligation. Write for it.

ASSASSINS BUNGLED

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — A bungling attempt on the life of President Luis Somoza was made Saturday night by four or five men firing rifles at his palace, informed sources reported Sunday.

The informants said national guardsmen captured the riflemen a few miles away. The shots did not endanger Somoza, the informants said.

LABOR AND MANAGEMENT

'Hold-the-Line' Urges CMA Chief

(Canadian Press Business Editor)

ST. ANDREW, N.B. (CP)—A national tariff policy "which puts Canadian interests first" was urged today by Ian F. McRae, president of the Canadian Manufacturer's Association, in an address to the association's annual meeting.

Coupled with this, Mr. McRae asked management, labor and government to make an all-out assault on production costs.

Labor, he said, must realize that to go on as it has been doing is to invite still higher prices and still more unemployment.

"Nothing organized labor can do would contribute more to slashing the ranks of the jobless than to commit itself for a limited period let us say two years—to holding the wage line.

THREAT OF CONTROLS

"I am not asking unions to abdicate their functions—I am saying that there can be no price stability and no prospect of a great increase in job opportunities unless they join in a national offensive to reduce costs. Unless we get some such commitment, the country itself might very well insist that government step in and impose controls which neither management nor labor would find to their liking."

Mr. McRae, president of Canadian General Electric, told management that on its part it must apply itself, with greater determination than ever, to improving efficiency.

Government's part, said Mr. McRae would be to promote an economic climate that is right for expansion without runaway inflation.

"It must," he added, "provide industry with the incentive for expansion by refraining from imposition of crippling taxes which retard company growth. It must assure industry of an expanding domestic market by following vigorous and unapologetic immigration and tariff policies."

HAVE REACHED PEAK

He said Canadians should admit that their living standards have gone about as high as they can for the time being.

In regard to tariffs, Mr. McRae said:

"We still have not the complete overhaul of the tariff structure which the Gordon commission recommended to the Liberal government well over two years ago. Thus far, in this respect at any rate, the change of government has not meant any great change of fundamental policy."

Mr. McRae said many unions are well led and have demonstrated maturity and responsibility.

"The pity of it is," he added, "that these unions get tarred with the same brush as those which are anything but mature and responsible."

"As a result there have been signs of late that public opinion is in fact coming to the conclusion that the union tail is wagging the national dog. I think most Canadians are sick and tired of strikes and the threat of strikes."

TODAY'S GRAIN

WINNIPEG

WINNIPEG (CP)—Reports of disappointing rains in dry areas of the Saskatchewan and Alberta grain belt prompted commission house demand in all commodities on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today.

Offerings were light and prices generally were firm in quiet trading.

There were no reports of export business.

Export loadings of Canadian wheat for last week were reported as including: Russia 950,000 bushels; Japan 900,000; United Kingdom 820,000; South Africa 450,000; West Germany 130,000; Belgium 115,000, and Ireland 30,000.

Lakehead prices for Class Two, IWA and Domestic wheat all were unchanged from Friday.

CHICAGO

CHICAGO (AP)—A good demand for rye futures sent that grain well ahead today on the Board of Trade but the market otherwise was mixed most of the time. Wheat and oats generally were firm to strong.

India bought 250,000 bushels of hard wheat and undisclosed amounts of soybeans were sold for shipment to Europe.

Wheat closed ½-⅛ cents a bushel higher on 1959 crop months, July $1.85⅛-.84 and the 1960 crop months ⅛-¼ higher, July $1.78¾.

Western Oils Hit Low

Western oils sank to a 1958-59 index low at Toronto today, while other issues slipped off slightly in a mixed-to-poor market.

Wall Street showed a moderately lower market today, too. Tobaccos led the decline.

AT TORONTO—Industrials recovered from their low of the session but remained down a few decimal points. Base metals also were up from their low as seniors strengthened, but down a few decimal points on index. Golds dipped almost one-half.

Western oils lost one point, reducing their index to 122.33 as 10 of the 15 index issues lost, two gained. Calgary and Edmonton was off ½ at 27½, while Home B and Pembina dipped ¼. Canadian Husky and Pacific Pete eased ⅛.

AT NEW YORK volume was estimated at 2,600,000 shares compared with 2,800,000 Friday.

Pivotal issues were down from fractions to about 2 points. Numerous stocks were unchanged and there were scattered gainers.

Zenith dropped 6 points. Garrett Corp. was up more than 2. United Aircraft advanced more than a point.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off 50 at $225.30 at noon.

AT MONTREAL prices were mixed to weaker in moderate early afternoon trading.

A recent winner, Steinberg's A, was off ¾ at 34. Other merchandising issues were also down as Loblaw's at 34½. Reitman's at 35 and Morgan's at 34 were each off a point. But Dominion stores gained ¾ at 75¾.

Industrial volume was 66,500 shares, mines and oils, 296,400.

AT VANCOUVER 11 a.m. prices were unchanged and trading quiet.

Peace River Pete moved 2,800 at 74. Giant Mascot traded 6,000 at 25. Mid West Copper moved 1,500 at 20. Trojan traded 2,000 at 13.

AT LONDON profit-taking caused fairly widespread losses among industrials.

Breweries, textiles, stores and electricals were mainly easier.

IT'S JUSTIFIED, SAYS DUNCAN PRINCIPAL

Graduation 'Fanfare' Backed

DUNCAN—Graduation ceremonies at high schools have the support of Lieut.-Col. Richard M. Lendrum, principal of Cowichan Junior-Senior High School here.

Speaking to graduates of his own school at their ceremony Friday night, he said such events are justified when it is realized that only 50 per cent of students who start grade 7 actually finish their high school courses through grade 12.

Coun. D. C. Morton of North Cowichan, guest speaker, told the 80 graduates before a crowd of 1,000 to "follow the accepted ways only to a degree," and to "go out and keep on learning."

Class valedictorian Donald Walmsley promised: "We will use our learning to the best of our abilities."

Highlight of the ceremony was the presentation of scholarships as follows: Arthur Roland Stanley Stanley-Jones, MacMillan and Bloedel Ltd. university program scholarship of $400 and Duncan Rotary Club scholarship; Beatrice Elizabeth Thorarinson, M and B general program scholarship of $250.

Rosemary Elaine Wood, Cowichan Registered Nurses' Association bursary; Thelma Louise Cardiff, Duncan Business and Professional Women's Club bursary; Margaret Ethel McKee, Women of the Moose Duncan lodge bursary, and Dogwood Chapter IODE scholarship; Judith Louise Norcross, Cowichan RNA bursary.

Grace Helen Jones, Cowichan RNA scholarship; Donald Walmsley, Cowichan Parent-Teacher bursary; Duncan Leslie Atchison, Cowichan Branch 53 Canadian Legion scholarship.

CHEMAINUS — Hard-working youngsters have big appetites, according to Harry Ewart, chairman of Chemainus park committee.

A total of 61 high school students turned out Sunday afternoon to a work party at the community park now under development at Fuller's Lake. Armed with rakes and shovels, the youngsters cleared and levelled the picnic area.

They also found time between them to dispose of 200 hot dogs, 100 Dixie cups and 240 bottles of soft drinks served to them by members of the Kinette Club.

Logger Feared Drowned Upcoast

ALERT BAY (CP) — A search continued late Sunday without success for Nick Zaiec, 41, of Richmond, B.C., who disappeared last Wednesday. Zaiec, a logger, left his camp here during the night and it is believed he may have drowned in the nearby inlet.

Charges were as high at 92 cents on single letters from England to Quebec by packet boat in 1820.

RARE TREAT FOR RESIDENTS

Bishop Hill Tours Remote Coast Towns

TOFINO — Roman Catholic parishes on the west coast of Vancouver Island have enjoyed a rare treat in the past week in a tour by Most Rev. James M. Hill, Bishop of Victoria, due to end with his return to the capital city Wednesday.

Travelling by plane, automobile and boat, he administered the Sacrament of Confirmation and said Mass at each village, and blessed several new churches.

His first call was at Kyuquot June 1, and on June 2 he blessed the new church of St. Peter's at Queen's Cove. It was built by Rev. T. Lopsinger, AMI, assisted by Indians of the Ehattisat Band, who voluntarily donated proceeds from one day's catch of fish toward the project.

June 3 he blessed St. Paul's Church at Nuchalitz, which had been moved there from Ceepeecee by Fr. Lopsinger, and June 4, in the presence of RCMP and naval personnel, he blessed the historic Church of St. Pius X at Friendly Cove.

The little church marks the first Christianized spot on the Island's west coast, and boasts a letter from its namesake.

Bishop Hill was at Tahsis Friday, June 5, to bless the new Church of St. Joseph, only completed two years ago. Saturday the new Church of the Immaculate Conception at Hot Springs Cove received his blessings.

Sunday he celebrated High Mass at Christie's Residential School at Kakawis, near here, and confirmed 75 children from the school at the village of Opitsate. Later the same day he blessed the new St. Laurence Church at Ahousat, built three years ago by Rev. D. J. Pruner, OMI, and two carpenters.

He rested at Christie's School today, where he is the guest of the principal, Rev. M. D. Kearney, OMI, and on Tuesday will confirm 18 children from Ucluelet, Port Albion, Kennedy Lake, Long Beach, Ucluelet Reserve, and Tofino.

Wednesday morning he will leave by plane for Victoria.

Committee in charge will include Harry Nichols, long-time soccer enthusiast and coach; Jim Wickens, sports director and teacher at the school; and Tom Dobson, former Royal Canadian Navy soccer player.

B.C. Air Lines to Get Coast Runs From PWA

B.C. Air Lines, operators of regular service and charter flights on Vancouver Island, Queen Charlotte Islands, and mainland coastal areas, will take over certain services of Picific Western Airlines on June 15.

Announcement of the change was made jointly today by Karl J. Springer, president of Pacific Western, and Francis G. Winspear, president of B.C. Air Lines.

TRANSFERRED

Under the new arrangement the separate daily flights by PWA to Tofino, Tahsis and Ocean Falls will be transferred to B.C. Air Lines. Included will be the operation of regular and charter operations out of Port Alberni and Tahsis covering a wide area of the west coast of the Island.

B.C. Air Lines will in addition acquire the 10-passenger amphibious aircraft which now fly from Vancouver to the terminal points, as well as a number of float-equipped aircraft handling regular and charter flights beyond. The sale of terminal equipment, offices and docking facilities at some of these points also is involved.

BIG EXPANSION

"Pacific Western Airlines is presently preparing for a large expansion which involves the taking over of the Canadian Pacific Airlines scheduled routes in the Mackenzie River district, north of Edmonton, early this summer," said Mr. Springer, "and expansion, if it is to be sound and healthy, must also involve some consolidation."

Mr. Springer said scheduled airline routes now play a predominant part in the company's services, and that "the transfer of certain coastal licences, in keeping with our policy of continuing consolidation, is advantageous to both companies."

The sale increases the aircraft fleet of B.C. Air Lines to 26, making it the largest carrier operating solely in British Columbia.

NO DISRUPTION

"Now that the transfer has been approved," said Mr. Winspear, "the change-over will be made without any disruption of service or inconvenience to the flying public."

Arrangements for ticketing and passenger handling will be virtually unchanged, Mr. Winspear noted, "and since the flying operation will be identical, there will be no lessening of the service to the public."

Extensive flight familiarization procedures of the aircraft BCA are taking over, have been underway for several weeks.

NANAIMO (CP) — George Trobridge, longtime prominent participant in Nanaimo veterans' affairs and sporting activities, has resigned as second vice-president of the Canadian Legion Nanaimo branch and chairman of the branch sports committee because of ill health.

Under his direction the committee completed a $17,000 project at Westwood Lake and contributed $3,000 towards cost of equipment and uniforms for local sports teams.

Judge's Knuckles Rapped by A-G

Attorney-General Robert Bonner Saturday criticized a Vancouver magistrate for his comments on impaired drivers.

Magistrate Oscar Orr said in court last Thursday most drivers charged with impaired driving are guilty, whether or not the charge is proved.

"It is a comment that should not have been made," said Mr. Bonner. "The question of guilt or innocence is to be decided by the court, purely on the basis of evidence, and not one's opinion."

Magistrate Orr made the remark in dismissing a charge of impaired driving against Edgar Cline, 39, of Vancouver.

Vancouver criminal lawyer Angelo Branca said he "disagreed violently" with the magistrate and added, ". . . there are too many convictions on insufficient evidence."

Fluoridation Blitz Waged by City MHO

A blistering offensive in the fluoridation battle was opened by medical health officer Dr. Elizabeth Mahaffy over the weekend.

Most fluoridation opponents are drawn from the ranks of "publicity seekers, persons with commercial interests; the uninformed, misguided champions and food faddists," she said.

Her stand was backed to the hilt by Esquimalt Coun. G. K. Sammon who is expected to bring up the possibility of a fluoridation referendum at a Victoria-Esquimalt health board meeting Tuesday.

Coun. Sammon, former chairman of the board, who was defeated in 1956 on a fluoridation platform said "I'm going to support it again if there is a referendum."

CHILDREN SUFFER

Dr. Mahaffy said "ill-informed opponents" are denying children the advantages of the tooth decay preventive which she described as "perhaps the soundest public health measure ever proposed."

Endorsed by medical and dental associations, fluorides have been introduced into water systems serving more than 35,000,000 people in North America, including 16 B.C. communities.

Common sense tells us that this many persons cannot be drinking water containing rat poison or substances that will cause cancer or heart disease, things attributed to it," she said.

She urged parents to demand fluoridation protection for their children in order to defeat "the campaign of the irresponsible, ill-advised anti-fluoridation faction of our community."

SOMETHING DIFFERENT in local newspaper production was brought into play for the special anniversary section of the Times appearing in this issue today. Mechanical staff is shown stitching and trimming the supplement marking 75th birthday of the paper.

WHY NO SPECIAL COIN FOR VISIT OF QUEEN?

Victoria Numismatic Society president Gordon Hunter Saturday criticized the federal government for failure to mint a special coin to commemorate the forthcoming royal visit.

"The visit has been planned for more than a year and there is no excuse that way. There should be a special striking of some kind," he said.

For the 1939 visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth, the Canadian mint struck a special silver dollar, two bronze medals and a large silver medal.

Theft of $160 in Canadian and U.S. currency and a five-pound Australian note from a freighter docked at Ogden Point Friday was reported to city police.

The money was taken when a drawer in the captain's cabin aboard Ss Waihemo was jimmied shortly after noon.

Police said the chief steward had spoken to a man minutes earlier after the stranger had asked to see the captain and was told he was not available.

The steward described the stranger as about 30, five feet 10 inches tall, with sandy hair, wearing glasses, a light brown coat and shirt without a tie.

When told the captain was not in, the man said his visit was not important and apparently he left the vicinity of the cabin.

Emil Bartanus, faller hurt at Jordan River Thursday and reported originally to have suffered a broken leg, is being treated in Royal Jubilee Hospital for three broken vertebrae.

His condition is good despite the fact that he had to be carried a long distance through the bush by stretcher.

He was hurt while attempting to remove two slabs left on the stump of an old cedar he had felled some years before, which towered to 40 and 60 feet and were waving in the wind.

He felled another tree against the slabs, but one of them, instead of breaking off, snapped back and struck before he could run to safety.

Plan to Draw World's Top Researchers

VANCOUVER (CP)—Plans for a $200,000 institute designed to attract the cream of the world's research chemists were discussed here by government, business and university men.

Dr. Har Gobind Khorana of the University of British Columbia faculty of graduate studies, and an eight-man research team designed the institute for the B.C. research council.

The men working there will have complete freedom to do basic research at the "highest level."

Dr. R. H. Wright, head of the council's chemistry section, said in an interview "we hope to attract a permanent core of high-level scientists from the United States, Europe and elsewhere."

The federal government will be asked to pay half the cost of the institute with provincial and private grants making up the rest.

Dr. Khorana is expected to head the institute.

Bald Chickens Put on Weight

TOKYO (AP)—A Japanese teacher has come up with the theory that bald chickens make for fatter chickens. The English-language Japan Times said the teacher found that 15-day-old chicks, shorn of their feathers, in two months put on 20 per cent more weight than chicks with feathers cropped only halfway.

WOULD CUT 5 PER CENT

UBC Group Asks Standards Upped

VANCOUVER (CP) — The faculty of arts and sciences of the University of British Columbia has asked the university senate to consider raising entrance standards.

Under the faculty's plan high school students who graduated with a matriculating average of 58 per cent or less would be excluded.

A university spokesman said the change from the present system of allowing all matriculation students to enter university would eliminate about five per cent of arts and science applicants. He said most of that five per cent fails university examinations. Such a change would not be made before 1961.

S. N. F. Chant, dean of arts and sciences, said today it would not necessarily affect provincial matriculation examination pass marks.

Meanwhile, it is reported president N. A. M. MacKenzie is opposed to any such scheme.

Land Promotions To Be Policed By 'Investigators'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two investigators have been engaged by the B.C. Real Estate Council to aid in policing land promotions.

They are former RCMP Sergeant R. T. Hockridge and P. D. Murphy, a recent arrival from Ireland.

The two have been engaged as assistant secretaries and investigators and will work with council secretary Irwin Davis in screening applications for land development agent licences.

The provincial government has named the Real Estate Council to administrate the granting of such licences under regulations passed recently to control land development schemes.

KID SHOW DRAWS 30 ENTRIES

Victoria Goat Champion

Choice of the young goats in British Columbia were on exhibition at the Saanichton Fairgrounds on Saturday.

The lower Vancouver Island branch of the B.C. Goat Breeders' Association helds its second annual "Kid Show" which attracted 30 entries of four breeds.

Exhibitors included children who are members of the Saanich 4-H Goat Club. Their entries were outstanding and in some cases equal to those of the senior section.

Judged the grand champion doe of the show was a Toggenberg kid owned by Mr. and Mrs. E. Smart, Glanford Avenue, Victoria, owners of one of the finest goat herds of the province.

A Toggenberg kid owned by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Maule, of Saanichton, was judged the grand champion buck. Mrs. Maule is leader of the Saanich 4-H Groat Club.

Two new breeds which haven't been shown on Vancouver Island for several years, attracted considerable attention a Nubian kid, Delilah, owned by 12-year-old Wendy Baker of Mount Douglas, and a French Alpine kid, Carla, owned by Rose Couling of Sooke.

The two were judged in a special class and Wendy's long-eared Nubian was given the top award.

Her black and tan "baby" was also judged the grand champion kid in the 4-H section. Wendy capped a busy day by winning the junior judging competition of the show.

Other prize winners follow:

Doe Class—Mr. and Mrs. E. Smart, purebred Saanens, senior and junior section; Jean Money, purebred Toggenberg; Rhodena Cronk, grade Saanen, senior section; Philip Howe, junior section.

Buck Class—Mrs. E. Smart, purebred Saanens; Charles Maule, purebred Toggenberg; T. Money, junior section.

Prize winners in the 4-H Club Division were:

Showmanship, senior section, John Shiner; junior section, Bruce Gordon.

Prizes were donated by T. Eaton Co., Hudson's Bay Co., Health Food Shop, Clark & Cordick, Scott & Peden, Buckerfields, Brackman-Ker Milling Co., Ellison Co. of Victoria, and Cowichan Creamery, Cobble Hill.

Miss Rose Smart, 3965 Glanford Avenue, was judge of all classes.

CONGRESS ASKED TO BOOST DEBT CEILING

Ike Seeks Bond Rate Hike

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower today asked Congress to scrap the interest ceiling on government bonds, both long and short term. He also called for an increase in the national debt ceiling.

In a special message, Eisenhower said such steps are necessary for successful management of the public debt, now at a record $286,000,000,000.

"The public debt must be managed so as to safeguard the public credit," Eisenhower told Congress.

"It must be managed in a way that is consistent with economic growth and stability."

The President cited reasons why he believes the removal of the interest ceiling on government bonds is necessary at this time.

Rapid growth in borrowing demands of corporations, individuals, state and local governments tends to diminish the amount of funds available for investment in direct federal government securities, he said.

6 KILLED AS GUN FEUD ROCKS PARIS

PARIS (UPI)—Rival Moslem gunmen shot it out this weekend in the streets of Paris and the final toll was the worst for any 48-hour stretch since the Algerian war began.

Police listed six Moslems killed. Five more persons were injured, four of them French bystanders who stopped wild bullets.

Three big Moslem gun battles erupted inside the city during the past two days. The middle-line daily Paris-Journal, which says this city might be nicknamed "Chicago-on-the-Seine," called it "Paris' Red Weekend."

The clashes were between the National Liberation Front and the rival Algerian National Movement.

Canada's crude oil production averaged 453,514 barrels daily in 1958, a 9-per-cent decrease from 1957.

Wilhelm Racks Up Ninth Straight As Surprising Orioles in Second

By UP International

Hoyt Wilhelm already has made believers of American League hitters and now the Baltimore Orioles are trying to do the same with the experts.

Wilhelm's 9-0 record and astounding 0.99 earned run average speak for themselves and manager Paul Richards insists the Orioles' second-place standing ought to do the same.

"We can go all the way," Richards has been preaching since the start of the season. "We'll go as far as our pitching will take us."

Well, Sunday Wilhelm's pitching took the Orioles into second place via a 3-0 victory over the Kansas City Athletics. The eastwhile ragamuffins of the league are only one game behind the first-place Chicago White Sox and are a half-game ahead of the third-place Cleveland Indians, both of whom split their Sunday doubeheaders.

White Sox scored a 9-4 victory in their opener but lost the nightcap to the Boston Red Sox, 4-2, and New York Yankees bounced back from a 7-5 setback to beat the Indians, 4-3, before 59,823 at Cleveland. Detroit Tigers made it 23 out of 33 under Jimmy Dykes with a 6-4 win over the Washington Senators.

In the National League Milwaukee Braves increased their first-place margin to two games by beating the Los Angeles Dodgers, 8-2. Chicago Cubs beat the Pittsburgh Pirates, 4-2 and 1-0; St. Louis Cardinals downed Philadelphia Phillies, 2-0, after an 11-9 defeat, and the Cincinnati Reds defeated San Francisco Giants, 7-1, after a 5-3 setback.

Gus Triandos hit a two-run homer and Billy Klaus singled home Baltimore's other run as Wilhelm scored his third shutout. The lowest American League E.R.A. for a complete season is 1.01 by H. B. Leonard of Boston in 1914 and the league record for consecutive victories is 16 shares by Walter Johnson, Joe Wood, lefty Grove and Schoolboy Rowe.

LADDER DERBY

You could have qualified in the second week of the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association ladder derby with a minnow—and a number of anglers came close to that.

Only 39 salmon were weighed in all week, which meant that all of them qualified and one slot was left over. The smallest entry weighed only one pound, six ounces.

Ragan Takes Eastern Open

BALTIMORE (CP) — Dave Ragan, 23, of Chattanooga, Tenn., fired a two-under-par 70 in Sunday's final round to win the $20,000 Eastern Open Golf Tournament with a 72-hole total of 273.

A four-foot birdie putt on the 16th hole of the last round enabled him to win his first professional championship after a nip-and-tuck battle with Gene Littler who ended up with 65-67—71-71—274 and second-prize money of $1,900.

Ragan collected $2,800.

Don Whitt of Borrego Springs, Calif., and Henry Ransom of St. Andrews, Ill., tied for third place with final scores of 275. Each got $1,300.

Drivers' Team Play Cools Hot 'Jimmy'

Dick Varley can't afford to lose. On the other hand, rival drivers at Western Speedway can't afford to let him get in front.

Varley, driver of owner-mechanic Grant King's astounding "Jimmy," the hottest stock car seen on Vancouver Island for a long time, has been banned from racing in Nanaimo and must make up all his points in Victoria, if he hopes to win the Island point championship this year.

But the other drivers, while they are sympathetic to his cause, cannot afford to let him get ahead because it has been proven that once he is in front of the pack he cannot be caught.

On Saturday, for the second straight week, two drivers teamed up to keep Varley to the rear in the first heat.

The result was that veteran Dave Cooper scooted home in front. But Varley, who had earlier taken the trophy dash, didn't let himself get boxed in for the 25-lap main event and won handily.

Trophy dash—1. Dick Varley; 2. Al Smith; 3. Phil Lambrick.
First heat—1. Dave Cooper; 2. Dick Varley; 3. Dick Willoughby.
Second heat—1. Bud Hopkins; 2. Bill Temple; 3. Al Smith.
Third heat—1. Phil Lambrick; 2. Hank Neilson; 3. Jim Milner.
Fourth heat—1. Red Burke; 2. Oscar Taylor; 3. Harry Roberts.
Main event—1. Dick Varley; 2. Dave Cooper; 3. Bill Temple.

Last-Minute 'Sickness' Adds to Crime Puzzle

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Rueben Vargas' mother and manager say they have received mysterious phone calls demanding to know where to find the heavyweight fighter.

The calls added fuel to a fire lit last week in Los Angeles when matchmaker Jackie Leonard was severely beaten.

Manager Bert Brodose said Saturday night that Vargas' elderly mother was called three or four times, always at midnight. The caller was quoted as saying:

"Brodose has been giving us the run-around but we don't expect the same from you.

"Come on now, where's Vargas? It will be better for everybody if you tell us."

Brodose said neither he nor Mrs. Vargas gave any information. He did not notify police but said he would report the calls to the State Athletic Commission at its Wednesday meeting here.

He added he would bring up the matter of a deal by which Hank Sinacola, an associate of singer Frank Sinatra, acquired an interest in Vargas last summer.

Brodose claims Sinacola and Ralph Gambina, another Sinatra associate, agreed to pay him $10,000 for a piece of Vargas' contract. Brodose says he got only $500.

Gambina is the California manager of Larry Boardman, Boston lightweight who has pulled out of a Saturday night fight at Hollywood Legion Stadium.

Don Chargin, Legion promoter who received an anonymous threatening call in Oakland Thursday, said Boardman's father called him Saturday night to tell him the fight was off.

"This is it," Chargin said. "Leonard was told by those guys that some of the fighters would get sick at the last minute."

Jackie Leonard, Legion Stadium matchmaker, was severely beaten by unknown assailants Wednesday night. He told a hospital press conference in Los Angeles Saturday that Frankie Carbo, an eastern underworld character, was responsible.

Chargin said he had police protection while in Los Angeles and expected the same on an "off and on" basis in Oakland.

He said Boardman's father told him Larry had a bad hand. After the call Art Ramponi of Oakland, the other main eventer, bowed out, contending he was ill.

Commission secretary Clayton Frye said Ramponi would be suspended unless he shows a doctor's certificate proving illness.

HOW TO PICK WINNERS:

In Technicolor, Yet!

SLOUGH, England (UPI) — Mrs. Gay Coombs said today she's found the perfect system for beating the horses.

She feeds her husband cheese the night before a race, and he dreams the winner. In technicolor!

"Frank came down to breakfast on Derby day after having had a cheese supper the night before," Mrs. Coombs said. "He had a color dream in which the most prominent colors were red and white."

Mrs. Coombs scanned the list of runners, picked the one with red and white colors and collected on Parthia.

"I pumped Frank with cheese the night before Oaks. He had a chocolate-colored dream, so I backed Petite Etoile. We won," she said.

"It's perfectly true her husband added. "I can't give any explanation for it.

"Anyway, I love cheese."

Mounties Topple Front-Runners

By The Associated Press

Sacramento Solons, who make a habit of scattering losses, dropped their first doubleheader of the season Sunday but only one game from their Pacific Coast League baseball lead.

Vancouver Mounties came up with effective pitching to defeat Sacramento 5-1 and 6-1 while Spokane, winning the first 4-2 and losing the second 5-4.

The day's action cut the Solon's PCL advantage to 2½ games.

Salt Lake City scored six runs in the wild eighth inning of its nightcap to beat Seattle 10-5 after the cellar-dwelling Rainiers had won the opener 13-7.

And Portland unleashed 19 hits to beat Phoenix by another 13-7 score, in the only single game of the night.

Former Sacramento thrower Bud Watkins gave the Mounties the advantage in the first game, holding his ex-mates to seven hits. Vancouver jumped on starter Winston Brown in the third and Charlie White finished off the four-run inning with a bases-loaded triple off Noel Mickelsen.

Shirley Leads Gorge Ladies To Repeat Win

NANAIMO — Mrs. Shirley Naysmith of Gorge Vale, Sunday won low gross honors with a 40-35—75 in the Women's Mid-Island golf tournament here.

Mrs. Terry Jackson of Nanaimo was runner up with a 40-40—80.

Low net score of 68 was turned in by Mrs. Carol Jansch of Mount Brenton while Bea Ashdown of Colwood was runner-up.

Gorge Vale captured the team trophy for the second straight year, finishing 11 strokes ahead of Nanaimo with a combined score of 348.

Seventy-one golfers took part in the 18-hole medal play tournament.

McNeill Hasn't Lost Prolific Firing Power

For the second year in a row, 11-year-old Don McNeill is running away with the Peewee Division scoring race in the Greater Victoria Minor Lacrosse Association.

McNeill set a record last season with 152 points on 102 goals and 50 assists. This season, with only nine games played, he has a total of 40 goals and 18 assists for 58 points.

His total got a healthy boost Saturday as Saanich Tigers walloped Victoria City 17-5 with McNeill belting home nine goals and assisting on three others. Right behind the leader, with five goals, was Ken Alexander.

In the Bantam Division, Punjab United registered a 7-3 win over Victoria City with Barry Richardson and Charn Dhillon each contributing two goals to the win.

Scorers:

Saanich Tigers—Don McNeill 9, Ken Alexander 5, Dale Spooule 2, Frank Alexander. Total 17.
Victoria City—Paul Tucker 4, Steve Majorki. Total 5.
Punjab United—Barry Richardson 2, Charn Dhillon 2, Nirmal Dhillon, Tej Dhillon, Cliff Watt. Total 7.
Saanich—Vern Black 2, Tom Terrance. Total 3.

Practicin' Pudge Ready to Cash In

Fanthorpe Leads Amateur Scramble By Two Strokes

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Dave (Pudge) Fanthorpe is ready to make his hours of practice pay off now.

The two-handicapper from Gorge Vale, a fixture on the practice fairway during midweek evenings, came up with a steady performance Sunday to grab a two-stroke lead in the City Amateur golf championship.

The 29-year-old golfer fired a pair of two-over-par 74s on his home course to build up his margin over a trio of challengers — defending champ Laurie Kerr of Colwood, Gorge Vale junior Al MacLeod and big Vince Clarkson of Colwood.

WINDUP NEXT SUNDAY

The low 24 (and ties) will complete the 54-hole medal tournament next Sunday. In all, 26 qualified for the final round at Gorge Vale. A 36-hole count of 160 or better was needed to get under the wire.

Fanthorpe displayed most of his strength in his short-iron game as he topped the starting field of 65. He shared morning medal honors with three others and then matched that performance in the afternoon on a day that saw only two players match the Gorge's tough regulation figures. No one beat the course.

MacLeod and husky Doug Munro, 20-year-old UBC student who plays out of Oak Bay, were the only golfers to turn in a par card. Both did it in the afternoon.

Clarkson fired a 77 in the morning and then closed in on the leaders with a 73 in the afternoon, thanks to a hot 35 coming in. Big Vince was the only golfer to break par on the treacherous back nine.

It was the tough back nine that prevented Kerr, seeking his third straight city crown, from moving into the lead. Laurie carded 40 blows on the back nine in the morning for a first-round 76. He scored 74 in the afternoon.

Another two strokes behind at 152, and very much in the running for the title, are Colwood's Bill McColl, runner-up for the past two years; Gorge Vale veteran Fred Painter, and lanky Jim Swanson of Duncan. Bill Wakeham of Gorge Vale carded rounds of 80 and 73 to rest five strokes off the pace.

YOUNGSTER SHINES

Sharing the day's limelight with Fanthorpe was Gary Smith, a 14-year-old smoothie from Colwood. Smith, who takes a handicap stroke for each of his 14 years, came up with a brilliant 75 gross in the afternoon to take a commanding lead in the handicap division.

The three-over-par 75 went along with a morning round of 88 for net total of 135 and a five-stroke edge over his nearest rival. Gorge Vale's Roy Jago is next with 140, two strokes better than clubmate Bert Saxon..

SHORT CHIPS: Fanthorpe, runner-up to Art Donaldson in the Cowichan Open last year, has never won a title apart from the Gorge Vale club championship . . . he credited "good companions" for making his rounds Sunday "very delightful" . . . Pudge played in a trio with Uplands junior Dave Humphries and Freddie Painter . . . Fanthorpe might have taken the morning medal but for the fact he went four over from the 12th to the 18th . . . Fred Painter, regarded as the tournament's dark-horse, finished with bogeys on the 17th and 18th to wind up with a 78 in the afternoon.

Gorge Vale's John Merriman, one of the pre-tourney favorites, ran into most of his grief on the back nine . . . he took 40 blows each time he travelled that nine . . . Wakeham, the Times Island Open champion, was far from happy with his weekend showing . . . "I can't see any reason for jumping with joy when I broke 80 only once in four rounds," he said . . . he took an 80 Sunday morning and had rounds of 84 and 82 in the city junior event Saturday . . . the newly-crowned junior champ, Dick Munn carded a 75 Sunday morning and then sky-rocketed to an 86 in the afternoon . . . it was simply a case of fatigue.

MUNN JUNIOR CHAMP

Dickie Not Alone But His Ride Free

Dickie Munn picked up the free ride Saturday and the performances of his rivals at the weekend promises to provide Victoria with one of its strongest representations ever in the B.C. junior golf championships.

Munn, 16-year-old Gorge Vale member who first started swinging at Cedar Hill, earned the expenses-paid trip to the B.C. junior championships by taking the city title at Colwood Saturday.

The B.C. playoff will be played at Vancouver's Marine Drive July 6 and 7.

And if the Victoria District Association approves the proposal, Bill Wakeham and Alan MacLeod may also get a free ride to the provincial event. That will give Victoria a solid one-two-three punch in hopes of landing the provincial crown again.

Munn beat out his clubmates by handy margins in Saturday's 36-hole city junior playoff. Dick tallied rounds of 77 and 82 for a 159 total and his four-stroke edge over MacLeod. The highly favored Wakeham, succumbing to a bad case of "the hooks," finished in a tie for fourth with Colwood's Gary Smith.

Bill Carlow, another one of Gorge Vale's standout juniors, took third with 85-80—165.

MacLeod and Wakeham, both of whom were favored over Munn in the junior scramble, regained lost prestige by scoring hotter rounds in Sunday's City Amateur play. MacLeod had a 72 and Wakeham a 73 in the second round of the senior event at Gorge Vale to indicate both were well below form in the junior chase.

Extra-Inning Decision Puts Vets in Command

Naval Vets are back in the saddle in the Senior Amateur League.

Saturday the Gerry Parker-coached crew beat their way to a clear-cut lead in the four-team league after relinquishing it for a week.

Vets had to go an extra inning in Saturday's doubleheader finals to beat Pages 9-8 as Bill Munday doubled Vic Skinner home with the winner.

In the opener, Art Worth's Eagles slammed the door on Wakeman-Trimble, 4-0, with Steve Bishop fashioning a two-hitter for the win.

Tuesday, Pages and Wakeman-Trimble will meet at Royal Athletic Park in an attempt to join Eagles in second place.

Game time Tuesday is 7 p.m.

Touring Scots Hard-Pressed

(From CP Reports)

Dundee, the touring Scottish League soccer team, had a "rough go" despite the fact they won one of two weekend exhibitions.

Dundee scored its victory Sunday, beating a surprisingly strong Chicago All-Star team 1-0 on a goal by Jim Bonthrone.

West Bromwich Albion of the English First Division stopped Dundee 4-2 in Toronto before 17,000 fans Saturday night.

MUSIAL NEARING END OF CAREER?

Slumping Stan Hoping

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Stan Musial hinted Saturday he might quit baseball at the end of the season unless he can get back on the beam as a $100,000 hitter.

"But there is still a long way to go," said the 38-year-old St. Louis Cardinals star, making a face at his present .246 average.

Musial, seven times a batting champion and three times the National League's most valuable player, refused to blame his batting woes on the five-game-week regimen prescribed for him by the Cards manager, Solly Hemus.

"If you'll remember," Stan said, "I was a pretty tired ball player at the end of last season. It was tough for me to play a night game and come back and play the next afternoon.

"That's when it was decided I would take a day off. I think it should help me in the long run. The big trouble with me so far is that I haven't been able to get going.

"I can't explain it. I'm doing everything I know to snap out of it. Some of the other fellows are watching me swing. I've taken extra practice. I'm practically being analyzed in order to snap out of this slump—one of the worst in my career.

"All I want to do is try to help the club, and I'm not doing it. But I haven't given up hope, not by a long shot."

Evcoes' Hopes Left at Posts

Halecos 1, Evcoes 0

The visitor in Victoria Evcoes' dressing room had a point.

"What you need," he informed coach Willie Hamilton, "is to start legislation and get those goal posts moved out about six inches more."

Moving the goal posts will not erase any past losses, but it might help Evcoes to more Pacific Coast Soccer League successes in the future. Hamilton's charges have developed an agonizing habit of bouncing many of their good scoring chances off the posts.

The post-hitting habit was never better demonstrated than at Macdonald Park Saturday. Evcoes bounced four shots off the posts in dropping a 1-0 verdict to Vancouver Halecos.

The heart-breaking setback, helped in no way when a Victoria defender accounted for the game's only goal by scoring in his own goal, knocked Evcoes out of the running for the Shrine Cup.

Halecos now meet either Continentals, their cross-town rivals, or New Westminster Royals in the final at Callister Park next Saturday.

THE EASY WAY

The fact that only one victory was needed to get into the final supplied a greater sting to Saturday's loss. Evcoes and Halecos were drawn against each other in a semi-final contest after receiving first-round byes.

Evcoes have managed only one goal in each of their last three starts. When it comes to hitting goal-posts, however, they are without peers. They have rattled shots off posts at least three times in each of their last three games.

Bill Abbott, George Guckel and Hal Holroyd and George Paul all had drives bounce off uprights Saturday.

The lone goal credited to Haleco outside right Tony Canta was scored after 17 minutes of play. Canta's drive, heading well outside of the goal, was knocked home by fullback Ron Jenkin.

Royals Draw But Advance To Semifinal

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Continentals and New Westminster Royals Saturday moved into the semifinals of the Shrine Cup competition.

In a first-round double bill before 1,200 fans Continentals defeated Vancouver Carlings, 2-1, while New Westminster tied Vancouver Labatts, 1-1, and advanced on the strength of a 7-3 corner kick advantage.

Outside right Robbie Chalmers scored first for Continentals and Royals' centre forward Roy Nosella tied the game after 27 minutes.

Continentals scored the winning goal when Alex Pedersen headed in following a goalmouth melee.

Luck Didn't Smile On All Mound Aces

Pitchers were warmer than the weather in many of Victoria's minor baseball leagues Sunday, but not all the authors of mound gems ended up with victories.

Take the Carnarvon Park Pony League struggle between Cosmopolitans and Mawson-Gage. Bob McLaren spun a one-hitter over seven innings for Cosmos and didn't end up with a win although his mates collected seven blows. Nor did he end up with a loss when Mawsons squeezed out a 2-1 win in eight innings. Defeat was charged to Brian Harvey, who took over for McLaren in the extra frame because league rules decree a pitcher cannot toil more than seven innings.

Bob Strom, who relieved Mawson starter Garry Scott in the eighth for the same reason, was credited with the win.

Russ Tyrrell had better luck in the second half of the Carnarvon twin bill, blanking Rotary on one hit and coasting to 9-1 win as his Oak Bay fire department squad unleashed a nine-hit assault.

In the Victoria Babe Ruth League, Larry Johnston of Eagles yielded only two hits but dropped a 5-4 decision to UCT's George Hemming, who gave up three hits and got errorless support.

In the other Victoria Babe Ruth tussle, Murray Pastuk fashioned a one-hitter on the mound for Teamsters but came out on the short end of a 3-2 count against Bill McAdams of Evening Optimists, who carefully spaced four hits.

EXCITING DUEL

Perhaps the most exciting duel of the day was staged by a pair of relief pitchers in the American Little League argument between Kinsmen and Automecs.

Bob McEwan took over hurling chores for Kinsmen with the score tied 2-2 in the fifth, the same inning that Gary Robertson started his pitching stint with Automecs.

That was the end of scoring for the game, which was called with the score tied at the end of nine innings, the maximum distance allowed under Little League regulations.

Net Tourney Almost Benefit for Barclays

WEST VANCOUVER (CP) — Former Canadian Davis Cup member Larry Barclay of Vancouver Sunday captured the men's singles crown at the second annual Far West Invitational tennis championships here with a five-set victory of Bill Rose of Portland.

Barclay rallied after dropping the first two sets to upset the favored Rose 4-6, 5-7, 9-7, 6-3, 6-3.

It was his second straight tournament victory. Last week he captured the B.C. public parks title and next week attempts to take his third in a row in the Vancouver City championships.

The Far West Invitational was almost a Barclay family affair, as Larry's sister Ann captured the women's singles crown with an easy 6-2, 6-2 victory over Claire Lovett of Vancouver.

Miss Barclay and Mrs. Lovett then joined forces and whipped Marg McLean and Bev Danby Schwab of Vancouver 2-6, 6-3, 6-2 in the women's doubles.

SHARON UPSET

Rose and Louis Surville of Vancouver downed Barclay and Jack Pedlar of Vancouver 8-6, 6-3 in the men's doubles final.

Saturday Barclay upset second-seeded Surville 6-2, 3-6, 6-2 to enter the final against Rose who whipped Art Jeffery of Vancouver 6-3, 6-0.

Miss Barclay reached the women's final with an upset win over first-seeded Sharon Whittaker of Victoria 6-4, 6-2.

Jay Just Breezed To Fourth Victory

Larry Jay chalked up his fourth straight pitching victory in section one of the Open Softball League Sunday, doling out six hits as Morrisons scampered to a 10-3 triumph over Navy.

After allowing the Sailors one run in the opening frame, Jay spun six scoreless innings before relief pitcher Don Bota tagged him for a two-run homer in the eighth frame.

Morrisons chased five runs across the plate in the first inning and made it easy for Jay to coast to the victory.

Bats were ringing a merry tune at Heywood Avenue as Duncan outlasted Macnutts in 19-14 slugfest Sunday afternoon and Farmer Construction unleashed a 19-hit attack against Pat Bay Navy in an evening tussle.

Errors were also a dime a dozen in the afternoon clash. MacNutts banged out 12 hits but also came up with nine bobbles in the field. Duncan, which got its 19 runs on 15 hits, chipped in five fumbles.

Jokers Battle To 9-9 Tie Against Irish

Big names don't scare the Jokers.

Although Junior Shamrocks had several of the Inter-City Lacrosse League Shamrocks in their lineup at Stevenson Park Sunday night, the Jokers battled the Irish to a 9-9 deadlock in the senior "B" lacrosse league clash.

The split in points enabled the pace-setting Junior Shamrocks to hold their two-point bulge over the runner-up Jokers.

Stew Smith, Tom Wyatt and Jack Phillips each tallied twice for the young Rocks and Bob McKee, Ed Kowalyk and John Hansen each counted once.

Paul Calve, Lewis and Wilf Scott each scored twice for Jokers, who got single tallies from Whitey Wakelin, Red Larsen and Norm Parker.

Shamrocks 9, Labatts 9

There was a time in the Inter-City Lacrosse League when Victoria's odd-man play was a devastating weapon for the Shamrocks.

Goals are still being scored this season when the Rocks have a man advantage, but there's a difference—a lot of them are being scored by the opposition.

Nanaimo Labatts, who have taken particular pleasure in catching the Irish with their defences down on the odd-man play, scored four goals while shorthanded at Nanaimo Saturday to squeeze out a 9-9 overtime tie.

Although they showed they still haven't worked out a reasonable facsimile of their former power play, the Irish again proved they don't need to take a back seat to any club in the loop in the way of hustle and determination.

They battled the hard-checking Nanaimo crew all the way and only missed out on the victory that would have snapped a deadlock with Labatts for first place when they neglected defence chores while Labotts were shorthanded.

The lead changed no less than seven times, and until the final four minutes of regulation time there was never more than one goal separating the two clubs.

THREE FOR BERTOIA

Shamrocks finally built up a 7-5 lead late in the fourth quarter and appeared home free when Labatts had a man sent to the penalty box. But John Lumley and Gary Moore broke away from the Irish power play to send the game into overtime.

Bert Bertoia, who led all scorers with three goals, and Tom Collett again moved the Irish two goals ahead early in overtime session. Then, with the Irish again enjoying a manpower advantage, Skip MacKay sliced the margin at 4.40 and Arnie Dugan tied it up for keeps 10 seconds later.

Nanaimo goalie Fred Fulla injured his leg late in the second period and was replaced by rookie Gerry Shires. With the youngster in the nets, Labatts appeared to buckle down to more effective checking and gave Shires good support the rest of the way.

Fulla stopped 12 shots while in action and Shires came up with 15 saves. Geordie Johnston turned in an outstanding game in the Shamrocks nets, and turned aside 29 shots.

Irish rookie Jim McNeill received a broken nose when cross checked by Lumley in the opening minutes. McNeill completed the game and is expected to be in action at Memorial Arena Wednesday night when the Shamrocks make another attempt to take over sole possession of first place in a game against Jack Bionda and the New Westminster O'Keefe's.

Without Colic Miseries, Black Hills Is Threat

Black Hills is over his tummy ache and they'll have to reckon with the King Ranch colt in next Saturday's running of the Belmont Stakes.

Ridden cleverly by Eddie Arcaro, Black Hills upset Preakness winner Royal Orbit Saturday in the Peter Pan Stakes before 36,486 Belmont Park fans, who backed Royal Orbit down to 1-2 favoritism and watched the big California chestnut finish third.

Black Hills, which missed the big races this spring because of colic, went under the wire two lengths ahead of Bagdad, another California raced colt. Royal Orbit was another two lengths back.

The Irishman, only other horse in the race for three-year-olds, was last. All four are eligible for the $120,000 added Belmont, final jewel in racing's triple crown, which includes the Kentucky Derby and Preakness.

Black Hills paid $13.10. Because of the small field, there was win betting only.

At Inglewood, California, Saturday, Hillsdale staged a thrilling run through the stretch to score his sixth straight stakes victory.

Packing the heaviest weight of his career — 128 pounds — Hillsdale burst under the wire with a comfortable margin after overhauling Fleet Nasrullah in the stretch. How Now was third.

The triumph was worth $31,650 and boosted the big bay colt's earnings for the year to $301,900, top figure for the nation.

Calumet Farm's On-and-On set a six-furlong track record Saturday in winning the $28,275 Sheridan Stakes at Chicago by one length.

Soundly whipped by jockey Steve Brooks, the tempermental son of Nasrullah was timed in 1.08 3-5 to snap the 1.09 mark owned by Sun David and Fightin Indian.

Fightin Indian finished fifth in Saturday's field of 13 horses. Little Tytus was second and Coltrane ran third.

DRAWS WITH INCOGS

Oak Bay Slips Into Top Spot

Defeat was too close for comfort, but Oak Bay now holds a slim lead in the Victoria and District Cricket Association league race.

Teetering on the brink of defeat against Incogs at Windsor Park Sunday, the Bays held on for a draw to break a three-way tie for the top spot and pull one point ahead of Five C's and Albions.

Getting 42 runs from Reg Wenman and 34 from Jeff Rooper, Incogs rans up 112 runs as they batted first.

Despite a well-played innings of 48 by Paul Gadban, Oak Bay had lost nine wickets for 94 runs when time ran out, leaving each club with one point for the draw.

In a pair of low-scoring games Saturday, Albions and Five C's pulled even with Oak Bay.

Jim Richards of Five C's captured five wickets for nine runs to pave the way for a seven-wicket victory over Alcos at Windsor Park. Alcos managed only 36 all out and the C's passed the total with only three wickets down.

Don Hughes flashed some deadly bowling at Beacon Hill as Albions coasted to a nine-wicket triumph over Cowichan. Hughes took seven wickets while yielding only nine runs as Cowichan managed 35 runs while batting first.

Albions, helped by Keith Bickmore's 21 runs, lost just one wicket before reaching 36 runs.

Fans' Choice Had Troubles At Lansdowne

VANCOUVER — Outsiders had a field day at Lansdowne Park Saturday, romping to victories in five of the eight opening-day races.

Lord Renraw was one of the few betting favorites to get down in front. Running before 8000 fans, the five-year-old bay came from behind in the stretch to finish the Inaugural Handicap in front of Kronje and Hi Drive.

In winning the six-furlong feature for four-year-olds and up, Lord Renraw paid $7.20, $4.50 and $2.70.

Longest price of the day was paid in the fourth race, in which Ned's Freedom paid $31 for $2 win ticket.

Hope Heel Fly got down in front in the one-mile second race to return $30.10 for a win ducat and combined with Flying On, the first race winner, for a $232.40 daily double.

Longshot Hasty Van captured the eighth race and combined with Lovely Van for a quinella of $51.90.

PITCHING SENSATION

Austin, Tex. (AP) Raymond Culp, 17-year-old Austin high school pitching sensation, got $100,000 to sign a contract with Philadelphia Phillies of the National League Saturday.

HE GIVES AWAY GRAND PRIZES

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 15-volume set of Compton's Pictured Encyclopedia (Canadian edition) and of the second question a Hammond Atlas or Globe.

Address your questions to "Ask Andy," Victoria Daily Times.

Andy sends a complete, 15-volume set of Compton's Pictured Encyclopedia to Steven Roberts, age 12, of Charleston, West Virginia, for his question:

How Old Are the Himalayas?

The lofty Himilayas are the world's tallest mountains and among the youngest of the great mountain ranges. They are high enough to look down upon their elders, the Rockies, the Andes and the Appalachians. What's more, we have evidence that the lofty Himalayas have not yet reached their full height. They are still in the growing stage.

All mountains are at constant war with the wind and weather. Erosion, wear and tear on their peaks and crests, begins as soon as a new range humps up its spine. Young mountains grow faster than the weather can wear them down. But the tide of battle turns when a range reaches its full height and grows no more. The conflict between a growing range and the final wearing down by the weather takes many millions of years.

The older ranges are way past the growing state and countless years of weather have worn down their peaks. We cannot be certain how high the Appalachians, the Sierra Nevada and the Rockies were in their prime. But it may well be that our present Himalayas are the tallest peaks that ever existed on earth—and still growing.

A human life is but a wink in the long history of the earth. The geologists divide earth's past into long periods lasting tens of millions of years. The Himalayas, we are told, began to rise in the Tertiary Period, which opened some 60 million years ago. It closed but a million years ago when everything was made ready at long last for the human family to live on this luxury planet.

Prepared for Human Race

The Tertiary was a period of great upheaval, just as though Mother Nature attended to a lot of last-minute housekeeping details. She was, after all, expecting intelligent guests for the first time. The human family could admire, appreciate and, perhaps, criticize her work. The last of the clumsy dinosaurs were evicted. Modern mammals were given every chance to prepare themselves. The horse grew from a timid, spaniel-sized fellow to the great noble animal who was to become man's good friend. In all the hustle-bustle a few last-minute changes were made on the face of the earth. Europe and Asia were given a new series of lofty peaks and rolling mountain slopes. The steep Alps poked up their sharp noses. The Pyrenees, the Appennines and the Caucasus humped up their sloping shoulders. And the great Himalayas grew tall enough to look down on these and all other mountains in the world.

Seas flushed over the land, creating oil in Texas and California. Etna and Vesuvius erupted time and again to build their lofty peaks. Floods of lava built the Columbia Plateau in the northwest United States. Grand Canyon and Yellowstone were added as breath-taking spectacles. As mountains, the Himalayas are but babies merely 60 million years old. They most likely, as did the other great ranges, grew from a hole in the ground — a long, shallow sea called a geosyncline.

Annual general meeting and election of officers will be held by the James Bay PTA Tuesday at 8 p.m. in South Park School.

This will be the final meeting of the current school year.

IT HAPPENED LAST NIGHT

By EARL WILSON

Debbie Reynolds invited Eddie Fisher's split-up parents up from Philadelphia to see their grandchild, Carrie Frances, and spend the day. Debbie, who rushed off to the Waldorf Roof the other night with Bob Neal to cheer Count Basie and Ella Fitzgerald, later admitted that some producer character's sending her a single but different-colored rose each day. "I don't know what to do with just one rose," she said, baffled. "I just put it with my other roses."

Jackie Gleason announces "I feel like working!" unusual for him—then says that besides playing the drunken uncle, Sid Davis, in the Broadway musical version of "Ah, Wilderness," he's going to film a new TV series about a B'way press agent titled "Jack O'Hara Associates." They're rewriting the "Wilderness" script, making him the star over Walter Pidgeon and giving him the top songs. (Confidentially, we hear he can sing better even than Ed Sullivan.)

SHOPPING CENTRES!

A New Industry . . .
. . . for VICTORIA

In Canada's postwar expansion, one of the most striking changes in our pattern of living has been "The Great Trek to Suburbia."

This trend has become almost a mass migration —transforming semi-rural areas on the fringes of our major cities into thriving suburban communities.

Progressive merchants were quick to realize that here was a vast new market—new business mushroomed while downtown stores rushed to establish suburban branches—and thus the Shopping Plazas were born—to supply the continuous flow of goods and services demanded by the swelling suburban population, in an atmosphere of convenience, spacious comfort and wide selection.

After careful analysis of present population, potential population growth, income per capita and traffic patterns, by independent economic consultants, the Colwood and Saanich districts were selected as the choice sites in Greater Victoria for Shopping Centre Developments. This thorough research indicates their combined populations of 27,000 will spend over $25,000,000 on retail purchases this year.

Residents of Greater Victoria will delight in their shopping excursions to Colwood Plaza and Shelbourne Plaza later this year—especially the fascinating wonderland of the gigantic SHOP-EASY Super Markets.

SHOP-EASY . . .

Where Wonderful Things are Happening in Food Merchandising . . .

Brings you the look of Tomorrow in two great new SHOP-EASY family food stores.

Your new Shop-Easy stores will be last word in shopping ease and convenience . . . with color and carefully planned decor to bring sparkle and warm personality to your shopping hours.
Shop Easy management and staff are proud of these fine modern new stores and are pleased to have this opportunity of bringing famous Shop-Easy quality and service to your communities.

Rounding out this ultimate in modern retailing will be one each of the following merchandisers of goods and services:

- Bakery
- Barber Shop
- Beauty Shop
- Coffee Shop
- Children's Wear
- Drug Store
- Dry Cleaners
- Furniture Store
- Hardware
- Sporting Goods
- Jewelry and Gifts
- Ladies' Ready-to-Wear
- Men's Wear
- Shoe Stores
- Shoe Repair
- TV Repair and Record Bar
- Variety Store
- Real Estate Office
- Pets and Hobby Shop
- Medical-Dental Centre

Applications for some of the above premises are still being accepted from progressive business men who are qualified to recognize the current revolution in consumers' shopping habits. Those who are anxious to avail themselves of generous parking lay-out combined with advantageous traffic pattern and choice site location are assured of singular success.

ONE FOR COLWOOD, ANOTHER ON SHELBOURNE

$1 Million in Shopping Plazas

Two new shopping plazas for Colwood and Saanich will cost $1,000,000.

One will be built at Colwood Corner on the Sooke Road; the other will stand on six acres bounded by Cedar Hill Cross Road, Shelbourne and Pear Street, where work has started.

Details of the two projects were announced on the weekend by A. H. Prior, project engineer for Capital Holdings Ltd. of Vancouver.

Each will have a 15,000 square foot Shop Easy Food Market, a bank, drug store, service station, medical-dental centre, large car park and 14 goods and services stores.

MORE HOMES

Construction of the Colwood centre, covering seven acres, is scheduled to be completed next fall and seven homes will have to be moved to make room for it.

It is expected to serve a population of 10,000 within easy driving range. Applications to lease the stores are now being accepted.

Supervising architect on both projects is Allan Menzies of Vancouver, while the principal contractor is A. and B. Construction of Nanaimo.

Pemberton Holmes Ltd. of Victoria handled property transactions for the Colwood project and Town and Country Homes Ltd. the Saanich development.

It is expected the Saanich plaza will serve the day-to-day needs of a 17,000 population in the adjacent area.

THIRD PROJECT

A third shopping plaza is to be constructed at Port Alberni by Capital Holdings.

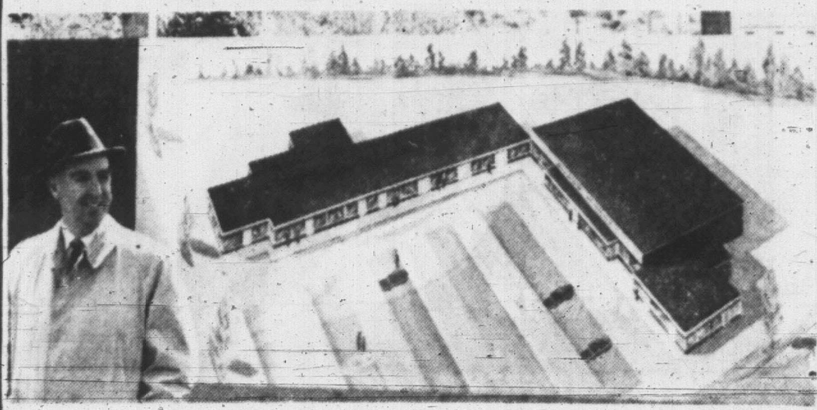
"We believe shopping centres are the greatest need of the west," said Lynden Thomas Hurst, president of Capital Holdings. "The town plazas we build embody the town square atmosphere of early Canadian living."

NEW TREND

Herbert E. Baker, spokesman for Capital Holdings, said the new plazas are "a new trend in merchandizing."

"They are the result of overcrowded cities and a move to the roomier fringe areas by an ever-growing percentage of our population."

"Large parking areas are a notable feature of these plazas."



LANGFORD AND METCHOSIN ARE GOING AHEAD

Shop-Easy Stores, through their purchasing agent, J. Bonar Law, working with Pemberton, Holmes Ltd., are pleased to announce the finalization of plans to build at the Colwood Corner.

This is the first step in the building of a full size shopping centre in the Langford area. The need for full scale shopping facilities has been growing steadily with the development of this popular community, and these two progressive firms are looking to its future with confidence.

We of Pemberton, Holmes know this area will continue to grow rapidly, and are most interested in working with people who share this feeling.

"You mean to say—just 3-a-day may send backache away!"

Sounds good! Logical, too! You see the normal job of the kidneys is to remove excess wastes and acids—so often the cause of backache—from the system. Dodd's Kidney Pills stimulate the kidneys in this function and so may bring you that welcome relief from backache they have many others. Try just-3-a-day. You can depend on Dodd's—in the blue box with the red band. 64

Professors Approve Crowe's Resignation

SASKATOON (CP) — The Canadian Association of University Teachers has formally agreed with Prof. Harry Crowe that he had no choice but to resign from United College.

A resolution passed by the CAUT at its annual meeting Sunday night noted that Prof. Crowe felt that the board of regents of the Winnipeg college had broken faith because it did not reinstate, along with him, three professors who had resigned when he was dismissed last fall.

"He concluded that as a man of honor he had no alternative, but to resign. In this latter conclusion we concur," the resolution said.

The CAUT criticized the board for not taking action that would have allowed Prof. Crowe to remain.

'Shameless' Act CCFer Charges

CLARE MAPLEDORAM
. . . slashes back

By The Canadian Press

Some of the harshest charges of the Ontario election campaign were heard in the North during the weekend as stumping politicians eyed the June 11 deadline.

Clare Mapledoram, former lands and forests minister, battered at the Liberals in a speech at Fort William.

CCF Leader Donald MacDonald struck out at the Progressive Conservative government for "shamelessly using the public treasury in a bid for votes."

Liberal Leader John Wintermeyer spoke in Strathroy and won a convert in an unsuccessful candidate for the Progressive Conservative nomination in Elgin riding.

PRAISE FOR PREMIER

Mr. Mapledoran praised Premier Frost for his knowledge of the North—unlike Mr. Wintermeyer "he didn't stop by for only 48 hours and tell us what our problems were."

"I'm sick and tired of hearing this drivel," he shouted. He said the Liberals were making ignorant statements about Northern Ontario, talking of cars becoming mired in roads that were already paved.

Premier Frost, in an interview, confirmed that the federal government is planning a defence establishment at the James Bay centre of Moosonee but didn't know whether an airport or a missile base was under consideration.

He also read to reporters a statement in defence of Mr. Mapledoram, who resigned from the cabinet last year after it was disclosed he made about $200,000 in Northern Ontario Natural Gas stock. The statement was part of his prepared speech but was not used by him. He said it was an oversight.

Mr. MacDonald quoted a newspaper advertisement to back up his charge of public money used to buy votes.

GASOLINE - POWERED WINCH winds in cable attached to sail plane, sending it aloft for free flights. Glider can be seen here trying its wings for the first time over Cassidy Airport south of Nanaimo. Winch launches the plane at 60 miles an hour, and sends it to an altitude of 1,000 feet.

GLIDER CLUB AIRBORNE

It's Smooth Plane Sailing

The Victoria Soaring Club is airborne.

The club's first glider went through its tests with flying colors Sunday at Cassidy Airport, Nanaimo.

The big glider a two-seater intermediate high performance plane, was launched by a 3,000-foot cable attached to a winch.

"There were no hitches," said Bob Knapp, president. The plane climbed to more than 1,000 feet in height, made a complete circuit of the airfield and came to rest.

The man who took the plane aloft on its test flight was Hal Ford, a 58-year-old English-born glider instructor.

Sunday's meet at Nanaimo brought to an end months of hard work for 13 members of the club who bought a damaged sail plane in Seattle a year ago. They completely rebuilt it with the assistance of the Fairey Aviation Company of Canada.

Mr. Knapp said the club will fly every Sunday.

"With the exception of Mr. Ford, none of our members are yet experienced in flying sail planes," he said. "Once we get the know-how we will be able to fly during week-days.

Mr. Knapp said the club plans to have the sail plane towed by a powered aircraft to nearby hills where conditions seem to be ideal for soaring.

"We believe that thermal conditions are such in the mountainous part of Vancouver Island that will enable the sail plane to stay aloft for several hours," he said.

Victoria Soaring Club sail plane was taken off the ground by Hal Ford, in rear cockpit seat. With him are other members of club who will be coached by the 58-year-old Ford in handling the rebuilt plane. Ford is a former glider instructor from Malaya, now resident here.

Fast Verdict Promised On Irrigation Fight

Lands Minister Williston today promised an early decision on the appeal of Nanaimo civic properties and recreation commission against granting of a water licence to Recreation Minister Earle Westwood and his brother near Nanaimo.

Evidence provided at an appeal hearing in Mr. Williston's office this morning indicated water drawn off for irrigating the Westwood farm would have little effect on the flow of the Millstone River.

The river flows through Nanaimo's Bowen Park. The civic group suggested the water licence granted the Westwoods would cause drying of the stream in summer.

Water rights branch district engineer Charles Errington said although the stream could dry up, as it did last summer, the normal flow would not be adversely affected between April 1 and June 30, the period when the Westwood farm may draw 60 acre-feet of water.

"It is my conviction there is ample water to the end of June," he stated. He cited figures available for neighboring Hazzam Creek, a similar-sized stream, to prove his point.

Mr. Williston said he did not see how there could be more water in summer months if water was not diverted to irrigation in the spring unless a storage dam was built to regulate the flow. The spring run off would still flow downstream and could not be saved for drier periods.

BORN ON FARM

Mr. Westwood said he was born on the farm in question and could speak with authority on the matter. More water flows from other sources on his farm into the river than he could ever take out, he said. He could use this water for irrigation but it requires less piping to pump from the Millstone.

He asked Mr. Errington to substantiate that the Westwood application had been handled through normal channels and that the water rights branch decision was based on the merits of the case.

He wanted it made clear that there had been no attempt to use influence of his cabinet position, which he said had been implied.

Mr. Errington agreed.

No Production Cut for B.C. Plywood Plant

Officials of B.C. Forest Products plywood plant here joined with other major B.C. plants in stating today that they will not follow the lead of U.S. firms which announced production cutbacks last week.

The companies said output will continue at full pace. They did not see a weakening in market conditions. B.C. Forest Products vice-president Alex Rankin said from Vancouver, "We have no plans to make changes. It is astonishing the difference that exists in the industry here and in the south."

Although some sales reductions are noticeable among west coast plywood plants in the U.S., home construction needs are still high in Canada.

President Ralph Shaw of MacMillan & Bloedel Ltd. said "it seems that in America they can't get the orders to equal their rate of production."

President John Bene of Western Plywood Company Ltd. said he felt B.C. plants would continue to operate at capacity until the end of the month.

NONE INJURED AS AIRCRAFT HITS DITCH

A taxiing plane hit a shallow ditch at Patricia Bay airport Saturday, bending its propeller and damaging its undercarriage, but no one was injured.

The aircraft is a provincial government survey plane which carries a three-man crew. The ditch had been dug in connection with a reconstruction project now underway.

Boy, 10, Badly Burned In Gas-Fed Log Blast

'Very Poor Condition' After Shower of Flames

By DAVID COWLISHAW

The 10-year-old son of a German immigrant is in "very poor" condition in St. Joseph's Hospital today after a smouldering log doused with gasoline exploded and showered him with flames near his Saanich home Sunday.

Wolfgang Bradasch, 6052 Bear Hill Road, suffered first and second-degree burns to his hands, arms, face, legs and the front part of his body; third-degree burns to part of his back.

Most of his clothes were scorched off him, in spite of efforts by two brothers to pull him from the blaze.

He was apparently trying to burn out the core of the log to make a boat.

The tragedy came just two days after his 38-year-old mother came home from hospital after giving birth to her seventh child. The father, Willi Bradasch, a 40-year-old welder turned farmer, is in jail awaiting sentence for false pretences in connection with $450 welfare funds.

According to Saanich police and a brother, Helmut, 4, Wolfgang had been working on a felled log about a mile from the rickety frame Bradasch home.

"He was making a boat," Helmut said. "But it wasn't getting along too good so he decided to burn the middle bit out. That's when he got the gasoline."

Wolfgang took the case from a shed on the family's six-acre property used for storing gas and oil for his father's small tractor.

He got a can full, went back through the dense bush and splashed it over the log. Then he set fire to it. He had apparently made an earlier attempt to burn the log core out because it was still smouldering.

BOYISH DESIRE for boat of his own led to tragedy for 10-year-old Wolfgang Bradasch, pictured at left with two of his six brothers and sisters.

Muffled Explosion . . . 'A Screech'

There was a muffled explosion, Helmut said, then "a screech."

It was also heard by a Red Cross nurse, at the home to assist Mrs. Bradasch in looking after the new baby.

"And it was a loud screech," she said. "Then Wolfgang came out of the bushes with all his clothes burning. His hands were on fire and his face was scorched.

"Two other brothers Horst, 8, and Hans-Joachin, 7, said they had tried to pull Wolfgang from the fire and had made him roll over on the ground to put the flames out."

The nurse sent the oldest Bradasch boy, Gerhard, 15½, to a house a mile away to call for police and firemen.

Saanich resuscitator crew attended but was not needed.

The burned lad was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital for emergency treatment.

His father was escorted from city jail to visit him, then returned to custody.

Today the mother, Ilse Bradasch, looked sadly around the green and black wood home. In language that was part English, part German, she said they had been 2½ years in Canada, first in Victoria, the last seven months in Saanich.

"Willi was trying to grow mushrooms," she said between tears. "He couldn't get a job as a welder after he lost the one he had at Yarrows.

Receive $20 Weekly in Welfare

"We have six chickens — they give us eggs. And two goats for milk."

The Red Cross nurse said the family received $20 a week welfare money as their only income.

"We brought them some groceries the other day," she said. "They had only bread for breakfast before not even a knife to cut it with.

"All this is pretty hard on the mother. Not home more than a couple of days from the hospital and then this happens."

The new baby is a girl, Sylvia. The other Bradasch daughter is Marianne, aged 15 months, presently being cared for by a neighbor.

Outside the kitchen window a collie dog, Duke, romped around the grounds. Rain dripped off apple and cherry trees. In the front of the home an old car stood, mud up to the axles.

The mother, a slim apprehensive woman, clutched her 10-day-old baby and wandered out on the veranda littered with clothes and metal tubs.

A solitary bush of red Inspector Lavergne peonies caught her eye and she stood there, staring at it.

"Everything, all at once," she said quietly, turned and walked back inside the house.

Ex-Victorian Succumbs In Vancouver

Mrs. Catherine Crawford, former resident of Victoria and widow of William Marr Crawford, Empire Stevedoring Co. Ltd. official, died in Vancouver Saturday after an illness of several weeks.

The former Catherine Lawson, she was born in Scotland; and married here in 1911. She and her husband built a home on Dallas Road and lived there until 1916, when he became president of the company and moved to Vancouver.

Eventually Mr. Crawford became majority stockholder in the company, and after his death in Vancouver in 1942 Mrs. Crawford continued as a director of the company, and at one time was chairman.

Surviving is a nephew, William Crawford, in Vancouver.

Top Insurancemen Here Tuesday For Conference

Small Vote Elects Robinson, Watts

Former councillor Fred A. Robinson and John D. Watts Saturday were elected to fill the two vacant seats on Oak Bay council by a mere 17.61 per cent of the municipality's eligible 7,600 voters.

It had been a five-man race, notable only for the apathy of electors which drew the ire of Reeve George Murdoch.

"I'm disgusted," he said today.

"After all, whether there are one or six councillors in the election, they are still representatives of the people and handle $1,500,000 or more a year."

Final count was Mr. Robinson, 785 votes; Mr. Watts, 612; John A. de Bourcier, 586; Norman Pittam, 328, and H. J. F. Rose, 286.

The by-election was necessitated by the resignation of one councillor and temporary property disqualification of Mr. Robinson.

16-Ship Sailpast Here Next Week

The biggest sailpast in the history of the RCN Pacific Command will be seen here Tuesday, June 16.

Sixteen fighting ships will participate.

"There will be six destroyer-escorts of the St. Laurent class, each 2,800 tons with 210 officers and men; eight frigates of the Prestonian class, each 1,570 tons with 140 personnel; and two minesweepers, Bay class, each 400 tons with a crew of 40.

The destroyer-escorts and frigates will rendezvous at the Swiftsure light ship and steam down the strait at 12½ knots to Race Rocks where they will be joined by the minesweepers at about 11.45 a.m.

They then move off in three column formation towards Victoria and arrive at a point one mile south of Trial Island between 1 and 1.15 p.m. There the course will alter to the west and formation changed for the sailpast to a point a half-mile south of Brotchie Ledge.

The destroyer-escorts will lead, followed by the frigates and then the minesweepers.

The impressive spectacle will be easily seen from any waterfront vantage point.

COINCIDENCE

The sailpast will be brought about by a fortunate coincidence as all ships will just "happen" to be in the area at that time.

The destroyer escorts of the Second Canadian Escort Squadron will be returning from Portland, Ore., where they took part in Oregon's centennial observances; three of the eight frigates of the Fourth Canadian Escort Squadron will be returning from Pearl Harbor while the others have been participating in local exercises; the minesweepers will leave Esquimalt harbor for the occasion.

45 MINUTES

It is expected the sailpast will take three-quarters of an hour.

Ships will be destroyer escorts Assiniboine, Fraser, Skeena, Margaree, Saguenay and St. Laurent; frigates Sussexvale, Stettler, Ste. Therese, Beacon Hill, Jonquiere, New Glasgow, New Waterford and Antigonish, and minesweepers Fortune and Cowichan.

NAVAL SHIP MOVEMENTS

Fortune and Cowichan return Wednesday at 9 a.m.

New Waterford, Jonquiere and Antigonish return June 16.

Sussexvale, Ste. Therse, Beacon Hill, New Glasgow and Stetler return June 16.

Assiniboine, St. Laurent, Saguenay, Skeena, Fraser and Margaree return June 16.

THE NAVY REGRETS

No Miss Victoria To Rose Festival

Miss Victoria and her two princesses will not be able to take part in the Portland Rose Festival this week.

An invitation from the festival authorities was turned down "with regret" today by Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce, sponsors of the Miss Victoria contest.

The Jaycees decided they could not afford to pay the girls' expenses but no mention of this was made in the telegram they sent to Portland.

Earlier, it was suggested that Miss Victoria, 19-year-old Vivi Petersen, and her princesses should travel to Portland with the fleet of six RCN destroyer escorts which are taking part in the festival.

The Royal Canadian Navy regretfully turned down this suggestion.

"We could not get clearance from Ottawa to take women on board the ships at such short notice," an RCN spokesman said. "Secondly we could not provide the necessary accommodation in time."

BUS FARE OFFERED

On Saturday Victoria travel agent George Willis offered to donate free bus travel if someone would pay the girls' hotel expenses in Portland.

The Jaycees decided they could not meet these expenses, although acting Mayor Arthur Dowell said the city council would consider footing part of the bill if the Jaycees paid the rest.

"It is a great pity," said Cy Porter, assistant commissioner, Victoria and Island Publicity Bureau. "We should not have to turn down invitations to be represented at an important event like the Portland Festival.

"This is the sort of thing that could only happen in Victoria."

The RCN fleet of six destroyer escorts will be led by HMCS Assiniboine and commanded by Capt. J. C. Pratt, commanding officer of the Assiniboine.

RCN personnel and the Naden Band conducted by commissioned Officer W. Gordon will take part in all major parades.

ASK The TIMES

Q. How did the Metchosin area get its name? F.S.

A. Years ago—date inexact—a whale was stranded there, and cut up by the Indians for blubber. The area and the Indians smelled for some time after and the area was called "smets-shosin" or "the place of oil." It also means "smelling of oil."

Q. What's Victoria's annual rainfall? To a visitor it seems awfully wet. H.J.J.

A. Annual rainfall averages 27 inches, the same as Brighton, England. It's not so wet; Halifax rainfall per year is 57 inches average, and even Toronto has 32.

Bring Grins From Father . . . On His Own Special Day

By PENNY SAVER

Don't look now, but Father's Day is just around the corner. In fact, it's practically here! June 21 is the day.

There's something special about Father's Day. Maybe because for most of us it's one of the few chances we get to really show Dad just how much we think of him.

A little gift is one of the ways to please him. Especially if it's something small that he's always wanted, but would never really think of getting for himself. Victoria shops are full of little items to lift the spirit of any father—you just have to have your eyes peeled.

Does he have a new camera? Too expensive, you say. Not this one. I've found a first rate box camera, with flash attachement (for professional looking snaps, every time) that costs $5.95—flash unit included.

Fully guaranteed, camera takes 620 film, produces a dozen generous size snaps from each roll.

Is he a pipe smoker?

Special lighters for the pipe smoker have wick on end of an extended stem—puts flame right down into bowl of pipe. Stem is retractable, for regular cigaret lighting when necessary. In handsome case, it has good lighter fluid capacity, for a minimum of refilling.

Take a glance at Dad's old wallet:

Has it definitely seen better days? Why not buy him a new one, for a Father's Day surprise? I know where you will find beauties of genuine Morocco leather, in black or brown, for 98 cents.

Phone me at EV 2-3131 and I'll tell you where the shops are that have these items.

LOUISE DAVIS

ON ETIQUETTE

Louise

Wedding gift exchange:

I gave a very dear friend of long standing a set of every-day dishes for a wedding present. She asked for permission to exchange them. We both went "exchange shopping" and she selected an electric frying pan! The other day she invited my husband and me to her apartment for dinner. One of her first remarks was, "How do you like my new set of every-day dishes which I recently purchased?" Am I wrong in considering this as an affront to my taste?

Louise Davis answers:

I think you are misinterpreting the motive. The bride is a very dear friend of long standing and, on that basis, I think she felt that she knows you well enough to be frank in suggesting an exchange. That in itself is flattering, though a bit disappointing after you had taken pleasure in selecting something you thought she would like. No doubt at the time she felt she needed the frying pan more than she did the china. And perhaps the pattern wasn't exactly what she liked, which is understandable, for some people have definite likes and dislikes. I think that as time went on she decided she wanted some china after all, so got it. Something tells me that when you went there for dinner she forgot for the moment about your original gift, and, if she remembered it afterwards, she must have been a very embarrassed and upset young woman for making such a tactless remark, even unwittingly. I would be charitable about this if I were you. Friendships like yours have been well tested and I would make allowances for this episode, which I am certain is no cause for offence. In a way it was unfortunate, but I can see how such a thing can happen. I am sure that your friend would be sick at heart if she had any idea that you were offended.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Relax, Let Yourself Go—Vacation From Routine

This is the time of year when we all get an itching foot, when new places and faces and experiences beckon so enticingly. Even if we do not plan to leave home, we have an urge for a change of pace, a wish to forget all responsibilities for a while and do what we feel like at the moment, for a lot of moments.

Relaxation is a delightful and necessary companion to prolonged youthfulness and to best physical, mental and emotional vigor. It is not healthful to go round and round in our squirrel cages of daily routine for too long without escaping for a bigger view and more emotional and mental stimulation. This change is also beneficial to health.

We do not become exhausted because of the work we do, but because of the strains and pressures, the hurry and worry which go along with it. Actually, fascinating work and eager interest in a job to be done have kept many men and women alive for years longer than their doctors thought possible.

Yet men and women sometimes take themselves and their jobs so seriously that they fail to give themselves the essential breaks. Men may go for years without a vacation feeling they do not have time for one or cannot leave their work only to be removed from the daily scene by a serious or long illness. When this happens they find that they are not indispensable and that it was foolish to have treated themselves in this way. In the long run it isn't even good for the career.

A woman may be so conscientious about her house and her children that she cannot leave them for an afternoon, to say nothing of a week or so, even when they are left in the best hands.

People were not meant to live in such a manner, fenced in and heckled by duties and responsibilities from morning to night, day after day and year after year.

For the good of your health, for the good of your happiness, for the good of your career, whether it be in the home or in an office, take some kind of a vacation this year!

DEAR ABBY . . .

Put Your Faith in Your Husband!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a milkman and I am expecting our fifth child. My sister-in-law told me that there's a lady on his route who is just wild for him. She answers the door in her shorty nightgown and he has a key to her back door and comes in and puts the milk in her refrigerator. It's only two quarts. I asked my husband about this. He said it's all true but this woman is a little unbalanced; and if he were going to play foot-loose and fancy-free, she'd be the last on his list. I am very upset over this. Can I trust my husband? UPSET.

DEAR UPSET: Of course, you can trust your husband! It's your sister-in-law you've got to watch out for.

DEAR ABBY: We aren't the kind of parents who impose on our children but we get lonesome for them and our grandchildren and drive out to see them about once a month. We call first. We live in the country about 65 miles from them. I know my daughter-in-law has lots of work to do, but wouldn't you think she'd prepare a little something to feed us when she knows we are coming? Four times now we sat and she never offered us a cup of coffee or a cracker. Pa has an ulcer, and he had to ask her for a glass of milk. My son jumps all over us if we say anything against his wife. Pa says next time we are bringing sandwiches and a thermos of milk. Would it be insulting? MA.

DEAR MA: Parents should not have to pack a lunch when visiting their children. Your daughter-in-law is ignorant and lazy, and your son is no better. Limit your visit to a brief stay, and plan to eat elsewhere.

DEAR ABBY: Many people write in to your column and criticize kids for going steady. "Going steady" is just going with one person instead of many, but if a girl gets into trouble she blames it on going steady. There are lots of kids who go steady and never get into trouble. I would much rather go with one decent boy all the time than to go out with a lot of bums. Thanks for letting me get my two cents' worth in.

GOING STEADY.

DEAR GOING: How about going with a lot of decent boys instead of just one? Limiting yourself to one boy only (even a decent one) can lead to a dangerous cozy relationship. "Nice" girls frequently get into trouble with "decent" boys when the heart rules the head.

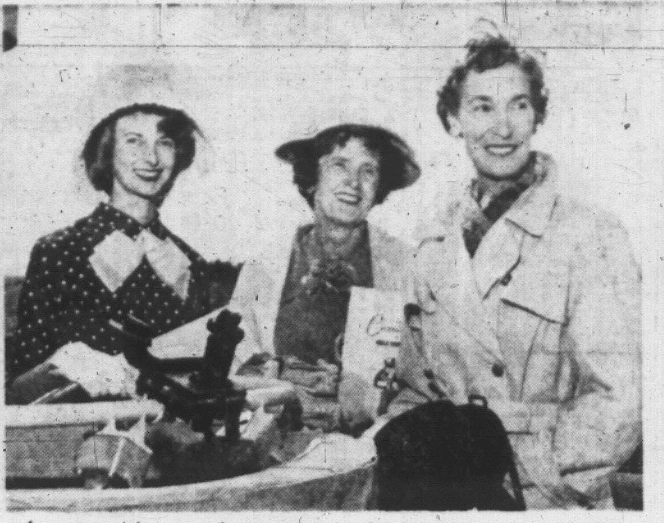
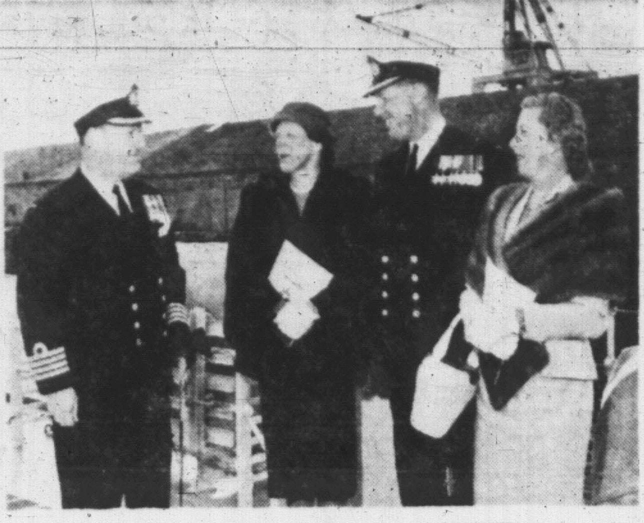
At a special ceremony following commissioning of HMCS Terra Nova at Victoria Machinery Depot, Saturday afternoon, Commander W. H. Wilson, DSC, CD, RCN, presented plaques with the ship's badge to the three feminine members of the commissioning party, from the left, Mrs. George Pearkes, wife of the Minister of National Defence, Mrs. Harold Husband, wife of the VMD president, and Mrs. J. C. Hibbard, who had christened the ship.



Among special guests who inspected the ship following the commissioning and then went on to a reception in the VMD offices were, from the left, Miss Marilyn Taylor, Mrs. Drummond Taylor and Mrs. H. S. Hammill. Miss Taylor's hat, a Paoli model straw from Italy, came in for much admiration This attractive young lady, who completed training at Victoria College this year was announcing excitedly that she had just been assigned to her first teaching position in a school.



Capt. J. C. Pratt, commanding officer in HMCS Assiniboine and Mrs. Pratt, and Capt. J. C. Gray of the Flag Officer's staff in HMC Dockyard, and Mrs. Gray were guests at the commissioning. Capt. Pratt will bring Her Majesty the Queen and Prince Philip from Vancouver to Nanaimo in HMCS Assiniboine in July. (Photos by Jorgen Svenesen).

BETWEEN OURSELVES

Girl Fridays Loom Bright In Story of Woman's Page

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Elizabeth

This is a day of remembering for Times staffers. The more years individual members have had with the paper the more memories. They blend into a colorful tapestry where faces of those who have worked with us appear clearly etched in the pattern.

My memories for the past 14 years, at least, centre in the women's department of the Times, and around the clever and pretty young girls who have worked with me since I became editor.

Each one played a part, however brief, in the story of this newspaper. Each one took a pride in her work. Each one gave unstintedly in time and talent, to bring added prestige and popularity to this department.

Fair-haired, blue-eyed Marge McDougall handled the women's pages alone around the end of the Second World War. When she talked of getting married I was drafted from the advertising department to take her place. We worked together for about a year. Then Marge became Mrs. George Young. George was a well-known photographer with one of the Vancouver dailies and the Youngs lived in that city for several years. Today you'll find them on Salt Spring Island, raising chickens and sheep.

My next assistant was a quick moving, quick thinking young lass named Marguerite Hancock, ("Maggie" to the staff).

She had been a messenger in the editorial department for a year. Wide-eyed and eager, she was filled with a dream of being a reporter. Nothing was too hard for Maggie. She'd tackle any assignment and she'd do a good job.

I had her for another year. Then she changed her name to Mrs. Ronney Dalziel.

Today, Mr. and Mrs. Dalziel have an attractive home just outside New Westminster and two darling youngsters Ronney and Robin. "Maggie" is still doing a good job only now it's as wife and mother.

Marriage Ends Career

Next came Maureen Stuart Yates, descendant of a pioneer Victoria family and fresh out of University of British Columbia, with a Bachelor of Arts degree.

Maureen assured me she did not intend to get married "for years" and I heaved a sigh of relief. It was short-lived, however, for it wasn't long until a tall, fair-haired youth with blue eyes and ingratiating smile, was appearing quite regularly in our office door.

At the end of a year, Maureen became Mrs. Jack Duffus and went off to Ottawa to live. While Jack took a professorship at Carlton College, Maureen joined the women's department of the Ottawa Citizen. She gave this work up when Jack received a fellowship at Oxford.

Dr. Duffus joined the staff of Pacific Naval Laboratory at Esquimalt. Maureen has continued to keep up her newspaper work by substituting when extra help is needed on the women's department but her main interest today is centred around her home and her young son, Robert John.

Dawn Van Norman followed Maureen. I made the bad mistake of sending her to get a story from the representative of a United States airline company, who was in the city to interview good-looking girls for stewardess jobs.

I lost an assistant. The airlines gained a very attractive stewardess.

Dawn eventually married a pilot and was grounded. Today, she is working in an airlines office in Seattle.

Florence Larinde followed Dawn. Tall, with olive skin, brown eyes and black hair, "Flo" was the darling of the office. She had a particularly droll sense of humor and it found an outlet when she took on the assignment of writing our first "Penny Saver" columns.

Flo had a yearning to see something of the world and when Maureen Duffus left the Ottawa Citizen, she applied for the job and got it. Soon she was one of their women editors. She met Herb Taylor in Ottawa, a clever young photographer with the Canadian Films Board. They were married and since then she has travelled with her husband on assignment to many out-of-the-way places in Canada, to the British Isles and to Europe.

Baby son Laurence was born in England this year. Now the young family is back in Ottawa and preparing to go to Indonesia where Herb has been assigned to do work in audio visual aid with the Colombo Plan.

Red Hair and Black Hair

Kitty Dixon came to the women's department when Florence went to Ottawa and, because the department was growing and a second assistant was needed, Terry French moved in, too.

Kit was red-headed, Terry had black hair. Both loved singing and in their off hours were to be found either striving for parts in Gilbert and Sullivan productions or for good adjudications in musical festivals.

We were a threesome for a year, then Terry decided to spend some time abroad. In the same breath Kitty was accepted for Theatre Under the Stars in Vancouver.

So, for a matter of five months I lost my regular assistants and gained two charming substitutes Dee Lavoie and Anne Mayhew.

Dee had been in newspaper work—in Victoria and in London, Eng.—for several years. She had all the qualifications for a newspaperwoman but she wanted to be a librarian.

When she left us at the end of summer, 1957, she went back to Victoria College. In September she receives her BA degree at University of British Columbia.

Anne Mayhew, on the other hand, was fresh out of Oak Bay High School and she dreamed of journalism as a career.

Today, a top student at Victoria College and with many special awards to her credit, Anne has changed to clinical psychology. She will enter McGill University in September.

A summer with TUTS didn't give Kitty Dixon any great desire for theatre lights. She came back to The Times women's department and was with us for another year. Then she went off with a group of girls to see Europe.

Today she is on the staff of The London Daily Express—and making good at it.

When Terry French returned to Victoria, she continued her writing in the advertising department of the T. Eaton Company and her singing career with G and S.

My current assistants, Judy Nicholson and Marie Milburn, young and enthusiastic, bring the count to 11. One other makes it an even dozen—fashion editor Nona Damaske. Her column, "In Step With Style," was born over a luncheon table in Oak Bay Beach Hotel five years ago. "I can't write," Nona told me, "but I'll try . . ."

Today, Nona's column is watched and read and followed by hundreds of clothes-conscious Victoria women.

Twelve assistants in 14 years. I salute each one of them!

And I want them to know that today, in my remembering, I am thinking of them!

BRIDGE LESSON

By OSWALD JACOBY

The trump coup consists of shortening yourself in trumps so that you won't have to lead up to an opponent. There are all sorts of trump coups but this one as played by Ginna (Mrs. William) Potts of Midland, Tex., is most unusual.

Opening lead—♦ K.

My only comment on the bidding is that it was interesting and that the final contract was a good one.

West opened and continued diamonds. East discarded a heart on the second diamond and Gina ruffed. She continued with a club to dummy and a successful spade finesse followed. The hand would have been easy if she had simply gone back to dummy for another finesse but she was afraid that the second club would be ruffed. So, Ginna played the ace of spades and East was left with the ace of hearts and two apparent spade tricks.

They were only apparent; the coup took care of one of them. All Ginna did was to run dummy's clubs and discard a heart on the fourth lead of that suit. On the fifth club lead East had three losing choices; he could ruff high, ruff low or discard. He chose to discard.

Ginna discarded another heart and led a diamond. Again East had three losing choices. He discarded again. Ginna ruffed and threw East in with the king of hearts to force him to play spades to her.

T.V. with Lee

James Thurber's 'Christabel' at 9.30; Lucy Comedy at 10

By PHIL LEE, Times TV Editor

DISAPPOINTING Everyone by this time will have made up his or her mind why Playhouse 90's "The Killers of Mussolini" was so disappointing.

For what they are worth, here are my reasons:

First of all Nehemiah Persoff simply didn't look like the late Italian dictator. This wasn't Persoff's fault. Whereas Hitler is relatively simple to impersonate Il Duce was of such a build that there could be only one mould. Jack Oakie might have looked more the part but his acting ability for this type of drama might have been open to some question.

TV TEE-HEES

"Do they give an Emmy for pain?"

The ability of an actor to look his part as well as act it is immensely important in the semi-documentary. Possibly that is why Playhouse 90's excellent although controversial "The Plot to Kill Stalin" was so impressive, each from Melvyn Douglas down looked startlingly like the man he was impersonating.

Secondly, I wish A. E. Hotchner who scripted "The Killers of Mussolini" had written in more newsreel shots of Il Duce in his glory. This might have taken away from the one and two-dimensional character built up by Persoff. The man in defeat, in shame and in flight would have been in staggering contrast to the vain, bantam rooster-strutting Benito haranguing the masses from his balcony. The newsreel also could have shown Italy's armed might parading the streets —another contrast from the chaotic ruins Mussolini left his country in.

Thirdly, I believe that a drama of this nature should stick to facts, otherwise it is taking liberties with history. Therefore to my mind the love affair between the partisans and the double-cross that saw them killed took away from the over-all effect rather than aiding it.

All of which is written with regret for, quite obviously, everyone did his or her best. It was simply not Playhouse 90's night.

THE FIGHTS Both Wednesday and Friday night fights were disappointing last week for different reasons.

The Wednesday-night title affair between Champion Joe Brown and challenger Paola Rosi for the world lightweight crown ended justly owing to Rosi's badly-cut eyes. But up until then the official score card had them all even and one can't help but conjecture how it might have ended if the fight had run its natural course.

Friday night's middleweight scrap between Rory Calhoun and British Empire champion Dick Tiger was a scorcher, one of the best set-to's in weeks. To this untalented eye it appeared as though the Tiger had the best of it almost from beginning to end and when the result was announced to be a draw one began to wonder what you had to do in this peculiar game to win a decision.

However, doubtless there will be a re-match and then we shall see what we shall see.

CARROLL RIGHTER'S ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

TUESDAY, JUNE 9, 1959

ARIES (March 21 to April 19)—It is possible now to make those changes in your surroundings, add artistic perfect pieces that will express your own personality and good taste. Then set up a workable bookkeeping system based on experience so far.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20)—Good day to be with regular associates to discuss future plans and get what is rightfully coming to you. Be specific and firm. Tonight is then ideal for having fun with bosom pals and entertaining them with your fine talents.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21)—Raise your consciousness today to where you know how to command a greater income and have more than your needs, a lot more. Also, be sure you get TV, radio, other important appliances running in tiptop condition.

MOO CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21)—Dress beautifully this a.m. Then, using most friendly manner, contact those people who can assist you in your career. Speak frankly. P.M. excellent for social fun and frolic. Laugh and be merry.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21)—Much backing can be yours if you will just let your hair down and let closest friends know what you want. Then exercise philanthropy where most needed and be of service to worthy individuals. P.M. just fine for romance.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22)—Many opportunities present now to be with intimates in order to work out any joint plans of a constructive and remunerative nature. P.M. forget about finances and enjoy sports, amusements that most suit your mood.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)—Much progress can be made today toward fame and fortune if you tackle your work and contacts in most direct and determined fashion. Be certain you are dressed in excellent taste.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)—By simply making the effort to get away from rather dull existence you have carved out for yourself, you can meet interesting people and start a whole new and exciting pattern for living. Read newspaper for ideas. Grow.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)—Today you have a fine opportunity to get a whole new plan of action outlined for you by those who are expert in the field that interests. Listen carefully to understand every detail and then full speed ahead.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20)—Be about actively with associates, have long conversations and start things humming, whether in business or personal affairs. You will get results almost immediately and to a greater extent and affluence than you dreamed possible.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19)—Tackle all chores and tasks with real vim and enthusiasm now and you accomplish what is almost Herculean in nature. This applies to work indoors, at business or out of doors, whichever is most pressing today.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20)—After doing the work that is necessary early in a.m., the day is fine for having a glorious time at the amusements that most please. Be sure to dress nicely and impress others with your excellent presence.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TUESDAY . . .

The child born Tuesday, if guided properly, will have such an inner glow that it will be felt by all with whom he or she comes in contact, and be a boon to society. An excellent chart then for the artist, the entertainer who pleases all, young and old alike. See that a wonderful smile ever adorns the face of your delightful youngster. Great spirituality here.

HI LO TRAILER SALES LTD.

UP TO $3000 ALLOWANCES FOR COMPLETE HOUSEHOLD FURNITURE AND APPLIANCES IF OF GOOD QUALITY AND IN GOOD CONDITION IN TRADE ON OUR LARGER MOBILE HOMES.

WE CAN GIVE YOU A GOOD ALLOWANCE BECAUSE WE HAVE OUR OWN FURNITURE STORE ON OUR TRAILER SALES LOT AND WE RE-SELL THIS FURNITURE ON VERY, VERY EASY TERMS. WHY RENT A HOUSE WHEN YOUR USED FURNITURE WILL PROBABLY MAKE A DOWN PAYMENT ON OUR ALREADY FURNISHED MOBILE HOME? SEVERAL 50' MODELS IN STOCK.

IF YOU'VE GOT CASH, MAKE US A CASH OFFER ON ANY OF OUR MOBILE HOME UNITS.

While we have non-transient mobile home parks for our customers only, there are a number of nice independent mobile home parks with available spaces. Free delivery to anyone you choose.

SPECIAL USED 45'
1 bedroom Provincial Decor with Salem hardwood interior, colored fixtures, wall-to-wall rugs, wall oven, oil heat (thermostat) and hammered copper hardware. New price $8,500 now $5,500, and will take furniture as down payment, discount for cash.

Large stock of quality mobile homes, stripped models—Economy models — Medium-priced lines — Luxury models! All sizes!

NOTE—We are Victoria's original mobile home dealership.

To tell a good mobile home, look at cabinet doors and drawer construction. All our new units have fiberglas insulation PLUS ALUMINUM FOIL HEAT REFLECTING BARRIERS AND VAPOR BARRIERS. All our new units use hard metal plumbing, not plastic. All our new units have SHEET METAL HEAT DUCTS, not crinkly aluminum foil like that used for food wrapping, and just as collapsible.

Many times a person buys an article because the wrapping is pretty. Remember in a lot of cases the old saying, "Beauty is only skin deep." We will be glad to drop a light fixture for any serious prospect and show you the insulation or to remove any heat duct outlet cover so you can run your hand far enough back to see we use sheet metal ducts even where you can't see them.

ATTENTION MAINLAND U.S.A. PRAIRIE INVESTORS

Due to the lack of foresight and interest in local progress many properties with a future are being overlooked by local investors. Most of these properties hold strategic positions in the near future development of Victoria. Our expansion over the past ten years has only been a slow process of trying to maintain and keep something that exists only in the minds of a few. The wave of interest in progress and expansion that always begins in Eastern Canada and spreads slowly but surely west will not be stopped because of a narrow body of water, or any one of the many reasons that local interests try to create and prolong in the minds of the local people. Look back ten years and think how easy it was to find a parking space for the car that you paid $1,000 less for than the car you bought within the past year. This condition will increase ten-fold within the next 10 years. "You can't see the forest for the trees if you are standing too close." Millions of dollars are being spent to improve the local beauty spots with an eye to the future development of the community, but very little is being spent to increase the services for the expected increase in population. Get in on the ground floor of an expansion that time and our way of life demands will come about. For information on properties and locations that will build a profit for you, contact C. Mallett, EV 2-2157 anytime. Western Homes Ltd.

'FAN PLANE' CAN TAKE OFF STRAIGHT UP

TORRANCE, Calif. (AP)—An airplane with a fan on each wingtip takes off and lands like a helicopter and flies horizontally.

Its successful test flights for the army were disclosed by Doak Aircraft Company Sunday.

Here's how the Doak 16 works:

The ducted fans on the wingtips rotate through 90 degrees. When pointed straight up, they lift the plane with no need for a runway.

In the air, the pilot rotates the ducts forward and the plane goes into horizontal flight.

When he wants to land, the pilot rotates the ducts back and the craft descends vertically.

The army is financing the development.

Let's talk REAL ESTATE

By Don Whyte

This week I had the very enjoyable experience of talking Real Estate to a group of Graduating High School Students. I hope my talk was as interesting to them as it was to me.

We discussed the advisability of purchasing a home against renting similar accommodation. I pointed out the compulsory saving aspect of each month paying principal and interest on a mortgage, as against paying out the same amount in rent. In 10 years $85.00 per month (figured on a 5½% basis) amounts to $13,132.86, this amount could be rent receipts or equity in a home which can be sold. We compared financing a home against financing furniture, appliances and automobiles, the interest rate on home mortgages at 6-7% on a descending balance as against 8-18% on the entire amount financed on automobiles, appliances, etc.

We discussed what should be considered in purchasing a home: neighborhood, distance from work, proximity of schools, shopping, bus, beach and church. What should be looked for in a new home: tax structure, i.e. amount of improvement taxes, design and amount of landscaping to be finished. The renovations needed to bring an older home up to standard, and the costs involved.

The important factor of the extras to be paid over and above the down payment, for example, mortgage fees, solicitor's fees, land registry fees and adjustments on insurance, taxes and fuel. These extra amounts can be crippling to the young couple buying their first home, who have spent their entire savings for a down payment.

I was very impressed with the interest of the students and their well-thought-out questions, which indicated to me that today's teenagers are a well-informed group.

BRITISH 'HOVERCRAFT' TESTED

Flying Saucer Really Flies

LONDON (AP) — Britain's secret "flying saucer" made a successful first flight Sunday.

The saucer, an oval disk of polished aluminum 30 feet long and 24 feet wide, has been under trial on the Isle of Wight off the south coast for several months.

It is designed to skim along a few feet above the earth's surface on a cushion of air forced downwards from the machine itself.

Details of the flight were limited, in keeping with the secrecy which has surrounded the entire project. But it was learned that the saucer officially named the Hovercraft—weighed two tons and was capable of a speed of 40 miles an hour.

Robert Stanton-Jones, chief designer on the project, said the machine made three flights, each lasting 30 minutes.

On the first flight it was tethered, on the second it was let off the leash after becoming airborne and on the third it was completely untethered, he said.

"The saucer hovered about a foot above the surface," Stanton-Jones said. "This is what we were aiming for. The machine came absolutely up to expectations."

The saucer's designers believe bigger versions could be used for ferrying passengers and cars across the Channel to France. It has also been pictured as a future vehicle for trans-Atlantic flights.

The trials were made by Peter Lamb, test pilot for Saunders-Roe. He was able to control the machine perfectly in the confined space of a yard at the company's plant at Cowes.

One Out of 8 For Open Garage Hours

Only one Esquimalt service station out of eight wants wide open hours to apply in the municipality.

A bylaw will go before the council tonight which, if passed, will allow stations to stay open 24 hours on application.

Also before the council is a letter from the other seven operators protesting the bylaw.

The lone lessee, Ed Griffith of the B.A. Craigflower and Tillicum Road station, said today that the district warrants 24-hour service.

Mr. Griffith said he could "do a lot better than I am doing now."

Other station operators and owners in Esquimalt said they were opposed to the bylaw since they felt that Esquimalt did not warrant a 24-hour service and the expense would be prohibitive.

There is a feeling among municipal officials and service station operators that the present 6.30 p.m. closing law protects the small lessee dealer from being pressured by the oil companies to stay open continuously.

HOW YOUR LIVER BILE BREAKS DOWN FAT

Laboratory tests have now proved that liver bile emulsifies fat . . . actually breaks it down. It is an established medical fact that when liver bile is added to fatty solids, the fat is broken down and forms a smooth, easy-flowing mix.

In your body, precious liver bile helps break down fat the same way. Many foods reach the digestive tract as undigested fatty solids. Your golden liver bile helps break down this fat . . . unblocks it . . . for easier and more complete digestion.

Carter's Little Liver Pills exclusive formula of natural, vegetable ingredients relieves irregularity gently and effectively. At the same time, it actually improves the flow of liver bile needed to break down fat in your body.

So when you feel sluggish, headachy, nervous and need a laxative, get Carter's Little Liver Pills. Remember, Carter's not only relieves irregularity, but actually improves the flow of liver bile needed to break down fat. Only 43¢.

Boy, 4, Steals Pistol, Shoots 3 Neighbors

SALEM, Ind. (AP)—Police said Sunday a four-year-old boy opened two locks to reach a pistol, loaded it, then playfully shot down three neighbor children.

Two of the children were in critical condition.

Troy Hoggatt, the boy with the pistol, "doesn't understand what he did," said his father, Malcolm Hoggatt. "I thought I had put away the revolver where the children couldn't reach it. I didn't hide it well enough.

He said Troy took a key ring out of his father's pocket Saturday night while the elder Hoggatt was taking a bath.

The boy unlocked the trunk of the family auto, then unlocked a box in which the .22 calibre pistol was kept. He opened the breach of the weapon and inserted six cartridges.

The youngster fired one or two shots in the air and a group of neighbor children gathered. Then he began pointing the pistol at them.

"He was holding it in both hands, and I thought it was a cap pistol," 12-year-old Curtis Hammond said.

Troy's aim was accurate. One bullet passed through the abdomen of Randy Hinton, 5, puncturing his liver. Another knocked Dawn Short, 10, from her bicycle, piercing her spleen, stomach and liver. A third slug passed through both cheeks and the tongue of Ricky Hinton, brother of Randy, knocking out five teeth.

'SIR WALTER' FOR MARGARET IN PORTUGAL

NAZARE, Portugal (Reuters)—Guitar music, dancing children and a cheering crowd of 1,000 fishermen greeted Princess Margaret when she arrived here Sunday during a long sight-seeing drive into Portugal's countryside.

As the princess got out of her car three young women students, one with a Union Jack gripped in her teeth, laid their cloaks in front of the princess.

She wore no hat in the bright sunshine. She had on a flowered dress with a gray wollen cardigan thrown over her shoulders and wore sun glasses.

Sect Parents Chant, Pray At School

(Compiled from CP)

NEW DENVER — A group of 50 Sons of Freedom Doukhobor parents chanted and prayed for an hour Sunday outside the provincial dormitory school where their children are confined. The demonstration followed cancellation of visiting hours at the school.

Eight RCMP officers were stationed inside the school as a precaution against violent demonstrations, but the parents left without any effort to enter the institution or talk to officials.

School principal John Clarkson said Friday visiting privileges had been cancelled because a girl was smuggled out of the school during Victoria Day celebrations May 23. He said the ban would remain in force until the girl was returned.

EARLY BIRDS GET LOOT THAT 'GROWS' ON AUTOS

TORONTO (CP)—Money might grow on trees but in the north end of Toronto it appears to be growing on automobiles.

Motorists on Albertus Ave., who often get up to find all night parking tags on their cars now are finding $10 and $20 bills instead. The cash has shown up the last two nights tucked under bumpers and windshield wipers.

The motorists must be early birds to catch the cash; if they aren't, the neighborhood children get it first. Police said children had turned in about $150 so far. If no one claims it, the children who found it will get it back.

Police were at a loss to explain the mystery donations.

AIR CLASHES

New Tension In Mid-East

CAIRO (CP)—Fighter plane clashes, border troubles and interference with shipping in the Suez put President Nasser's United Arab Republic in the midst of new tension in the Middle East Sunday.

The incidents involved Israel and Jordan and emphasized that there is no peace in the household between Arab and Arab and Arab and Jew.

Israeli and U.A.R. jet fighters clashed in a brief air battle over the Negev Desert—third such incident in the area this year.

An Israeli military spokesman said two Israeli fighters drove off four U.A.R. jets which penetrated Israeli air space. There was a five-minute dogfight but no reports of casualties.

In Cairo, a U.A.R. military spokesman said two Israeli fighters attacked U.A.R. planes on a training flight inside U.A.R. boundaries. One Israeli plane was hit and the two planes fled back to Israel.

LODGED PROTEST

The U.A.R. spokesman said his country had lodged a protest with the United Nations mixed armistice commission.

The U.A.R. also protested against alleged Turkish violations of Arab air space. Informed sources said the protest was conveyed to Turkish government representatives at a Turko-Syrian border meeting Sunday. They claimed that Turkish planes violated Syrian air space more than three times last week.

Egyptian officials brushed off border troubles between Syria and Jordan as purely a local issue that Jordan's King Hussein "is trying to blow up into a big international incident."

TO MOSCOW?

Evangelist Billy Graham said in London today he may fly to Moscow for a few days to meet religious leaders there. Friends, earlier, said he had been invited to Russia by leaders of the Soviet Baptist Church. Graham said he believed "the Russian people are basically religious."

Pastor Fired For Pleading Race Harmony

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP)—The minister of the First Presbyterian Church was dismissed from the pulpit Sunday in an action that climaxed several years of dissension over the racial question.

A judicial commission on the southwest Georgia presbytery announced that Rev. Robert B. McNeill was being relieved of his pastoral obligations because "the interests of religion imperatively demand it."

The 44-year-old pastor was the author of an article in Look Magazine in 1957 in which he discussed ways of bringing racial harmony to the south through "creative contact between leaders of both races."

Canada Envoy Meets Big 4 Ministers

GENEVA (Reuters) — Escott Reid, Canadian ambassador to West Germany, had a private meeting here today with Christian Herter, United States secretary of state.

Reid had informal luncheon talks during the weekend with Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd.

Reid will lunch today with West German foreign minister Heinrich von Brentano in a continuation of what a senior Canadian official described as a visit to learn as much as possible about the progress of the East-West talks.

The official said the Canadian government was "intensely interested" in trying to follow in various ways what was happening at Geneva. The Geneva conference was a "legitimate concern of the Canadian government."

Trial Off For 1 Week

MAILLARDVILLE, B.C. (CP) — Basil Joe, 22, was remanded in custody for one week when he appeared in police court here today to face a charge of attempting to murder an RCMP constable.

Joe was charged after Constable John D. S. Clark was shot in the chest while investigating a brawl May 30 at the Colony Farm Indian Reserve at nearby Coquitlam.

Sub-to-Land Missile Mail Delivered by U.S. Rocket

Diefenbaker

CATAPULTED OVER FISSURES

Climbers Hurtle 1,800 Ft. Down Icy Mountain Slope

LONGVIEW, Wash. (AP)—Three Tacoma mountaineers, who suffered broken ankles and other injuries Sunday in a terrifying 1,800-foot slide down a steep snow slope on Mt. St. Helens, were rescued early today.

Sixty-four climbers from Washington and Oregon, taking part in a mountain rescue seminar at Mt. Hood, sped to the scene and participated in the massive mercy mission.

Victims of the accident near the top of 9,671-foot peak was George Cashman, 40, leader of the team; Mrs. Joe Cockrell, 37, and Jim Stelling, 14.

Cashman broke both ankles and also suffered an ankle dislocation. Mrs. Cockrell and young Stelling each fractured an ankle. All were badly cut and bruised, and were treated for shock before they were transferred to Tacoma hospitals.

The three were among 28 members of the Tacoma Mountaineers who had gone Saturday to the Cascade Mountain peak 60 miles northeast of here.

The group split up into climbing teams of threes and set out at 1.30 a.m. Sunday to ascend the mountain.

Cashman said after his rescue that one of the teams ahead lost footing at about the 8,000-foot level and slid a short distance on the icy, sheer slope. He said Mrs. Cockrell, making her first major climb, became frightened and the three decided to turn back.

They had gone only a short distance when one of them slipped and all three plummeted down the crevasse-laced slope, held together by their climbing ropes. They could not check their slide with ice axes and picked up so much speed they catapulted over the fissures.

Did Margaret Say 'No' To Australian Visit?

LONDON (Reuters) — Australian Prime Minister Robert Menzies Sunday denied as "completely untrue" a Sydney newspaper report that Princess Margaret refused to visit Australia "as a political football."

The Sydney Sunday Mirror, in a story from London, said Menzies suggested at a luncheon here last week that Margaret and Queen Mother Elizabeth visit Australia in 1961 — just before the next general elections.

The Mirror quoted Margaret as telling Menzies that she would not become a party to vote-catching and limelight-seeking by Australian politicians. It added that Margaret indicated she did not find prospects of an Australian tour "terribly appealing."

ON WORLD TOUR

Menzies, here on a world tour, said "the report is completely untrue" when informed of the story. "I will make no comment on any discussions I may have with the Royal Family."

Make or Break Berlin Talks By Big Four

GENEVA (Reuters) — The Big Four foreign ministers met in private today at the beginning of a "make or break" week of talks on Berlin.

The East-West ministers were reported to have reached a crisis point in their month-long negotiations here. Most observers predicted that they will produce a temporary agreement on Berlin that would pave the way for a summit meeting later this summer.

Today's meeting was at the villa of Foreign Minister Gromyko. The three Western ministers met for an hour with Heinrich von Brentano, West German foreign minister, before going to Gromyko's villa.

Meanwhile, American, British and Soviet delegates returned to work on their negotiations to bring a permanent end to nuclear tests. The two sides already have agreed on 17 articles of an international treaty to ban the tests.

The chief British delegate, David Ormsby-Gore, said he thought the new series of talks would "see the conference as far as we can take it."

"After that there will be some points for settlement by the heads of government. A great deal depends on what the Soviet delegate tells us."

FRANCE MOST HOPEFUL

In the foreign ministers' talks, the feeling inside the Western delegations appeared to have changed since the start of the conference with France replacing Britain as the most optimistic member.

Nevertheless, it seemed clear that Britain regarded a summit meeting as a foregone conclusion in view of Ormsby-Gore's statement.

The time and place of a summit parley have not been discussed, but the general feeling is that it would be in Geneva in the second half of next month.

Historic Test Proves Success

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States post office department today announced the first successful mail delivery by guided missile.

The missle, a Navy Regulus I, was launched by a U.S. submarine in the Atlantic and landed at the auxiliary naval air station at Mayport near Jacksonville, Fla.

The submarine was the Barbero, a missile vessel.

The distance the missile travelled was not disclosed. The department said only that the submarine was "somewhere at sea."

The navy, however, estimated that straight-line distance at about 100 miles.

The Regulus flies around 600 miles an hour and today's run took 22 minutes, which would indicate a total flight of well above 100 miles, including any changes of course and the landing manoeuvres. The Regulus is controllable in flight.

The cargo of 3,000 letters included one addressed to President Eisenhower.

Other messages in the cargo were for the postmasters-general of the 99 other countries which are members of the Universal Postal Union.

The missile was fired at 8.10 a.m., MDT, and landed safely at 8.32 a.m., the department said.

PERFECT LANDING

Postmaster-General A. E. Summerfield, describing the event in a telephone conversation with the Washington Evening Star, said the wheeled missile made a perfect landing on the runway, trailing a parachute to slow it down. The weight of the payload was not disclosed.

Postal workers unloaded the mail, processed it and sped it on its way.

Last Jan. 23 Summerfield predicted regular missile mail.

In an address to the annual awards dinner of National Business Publications, Inc., the postmaster-general said that before man reaches the moon "your mail will be delivered within hours from New York to california, to England, to India or to Australia by guided missiles."

ROCKET SHIP IN PERFECT GLIDE TEST

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP)—The rocket ship X-15, expected some day to carry man 100 miles high at 4,000 miles an hour, successfully made its first glide test today.

A brief announcement said everything went as planned.

This meant that the ship was dropped at 38,000 feet from a B-52 mother plane, glided for four or five minutes, and landed on a dry lake bed at 230 miles an hour.

Later this year the X-15 will undergo tests with jet engines. Next year all-out flight with rocket engines is planned.

Soviet Team To Visit Parliament

By VICTOR J. MACKIE
Times Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA—A visit to Canada will be made this month by five Russian deputies to the Supreme Soviet following prolonged discussion on whether an exchange of Canadian and Russian parliamentarians could be organized.

The Russian deputies will be the guests of Soviet Ambassador Aroutunian.

Arrangements are now being completed in the Soviet for the deputies to leave for Canada.

In Ottawa facilities probably will be provided by the Canadian government for the Russian deputies to see parliament in action.

Tentative arrangements are being made for the group to visit Niagara Falls, Toronto and Montreal where they will attend a performance given by the Bolshoi Ballet.

A plan for an exchange of parliamentarians between Canada and Russia was first proposed in Moscow four years ago. It was considered by Canadians but nothing ever came of it.

The Russian group will carry with them, it is understood, an invitation to Canadian parliamentarians to visit Russia.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Sixteen Mexican farm laborers were killed and 32 others were injured when a crudely fashioned truck-bus crashed into a tree and exploded near here today.

The highway patrol, which had difficulty determining the number of charred bodies in the twisted wreckage, listed the figures as official but said there might be more dead. Many of the injured were reported in serious condition with burns and broken bones.

'Two-Time Dad' Has Quads And Double Trouble Wives

(Times News Services)

NEW YORK—Ciro Bravata, four times proud when he became the father of quadruplets, also has double trouble. The New Jersey mother of his quads doesn't know he has a wife in New York City.

The quads — three healthy boys and a girl were born Saturday at East Orange, N.J., hospital to Louise Bravata, 31.

Bravata, a railroad freight conductor who will be 41 on June 21, Father's Day, said all he wants is to do right by all six children.

Bravata said he met Louise several years before he left his wife, Grace, in Hollis, Queens. They have two children.

"I always intended to legalize it," he said. "My intentions were honorable. But how was I supposed to know we'd have quadruplets? If we'd had twins this wouldn't have happened."

Interviewed Sunday in his neat, four-room East Orange apartment, Bravata dolefully told reporters he planned to tell Louise about Grace today.

Asked how he thought Louise would take the news, he replied: "She's a sensible person."

Bravata said he and Grace were separated 2½ years ago.

He said he already had been to a lawyer to try and unscramble his difficulties. Asked how he planned to resolve things, Bravata said, "I don't know, that's up to the lawyer."

In a bitter mood and under sedation at her home, Grace Bravata lay limply in bed, her eyes red-rimmed and dark-circled. Asked about her husband, she moaned: "Oh, he's a fine one."

The new mother and all four quadruplets were reported doing fine.

ANOTHER STEP toward alleviating Victoria's downtown parking problem is taken here with excavation for new Hudson's Bay Co. 'Parkade', to provide space for 470 cars, half of them on an "upper deck" at the Blanshard Street level. Entrance to lower level will be on Fisgard. Work on the $450,000 structure is expected to be completed by fall.—(Times Photo.)

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's exports took a spurt during April, climbing by more than seven per cent to $404,633,000 from $376,903,000 a year ago.

Exports to the United States rose in the month to $254,994,000 from $226,158,000, pushing the four-month total to $887,564,000 from $862,048,000. Those to Britain increased to $55,404,000 from $51,324,000 in April and to $216,547,000 from $207,886,000 in the four months.

GASOLINE - POWERED WINCH winds in cable attached to sail plane, sending it aloft for free flights. Glider can be seen here trying its wings for the first time over Cassidy Airport south of Nanaimo. Winch launches the plane at 60 miles an hour, and sends it to an altitude of 1,000 feet.

GLIDER CLUB AIRBORNE

It's Smooth Plane Sailing

The Victoria Soaring Club is airborne.

The club's first glider went through its tests with flying colors Sunday at Cassidy Airport, Nanaimo.

The big glider—a two-seater intermediate high performance plane was launched by a 3,000-foot cable attached to a winch.

"There were no hitches," said Bob Knapp, president. "The plane climbed to more than 1,000 feet in height, made a complete circuit of the airfield and came to rest."

The man who took the plane aloft on its test flight was Hal Ford, a 58-year-old, English-born glider instructor.

Sunday's meet at Nanaimo brought to an end months of hard work for 13 members of the club who bought a damaged sail plane in Seattle a year ago. They completely rebuilt it with the assistance of the Fairey Aviation Company of Canada.

Mr. Knapp said the club will fly every Sunday.

"With the exception of Mr. Ford, none of our members are yet experienced in flying sail planes," he said. "Once we get the know-how we will be able to fly during week-days.

Mr. Knapp said the club plans to have the sail plane towed by a powered aircraft to nearby hills where conditions seem to be ideal for soaring.

"We believe that thermal conditions are such in the mountainous part of Vancouver Island that will enable the sail plane to stay aloft for several hours," he said.

Victoria Soaring Club sail plane was taken off the ground by Hal Ford, in rear cockpit seat. With him are other members of club who will be coached by the 58-year-old Ford in handling the rebuilt plane. Ford is a former glider instructor from Malaya, now resident here.

Boy, 10, Badly Burned In Gas-Fed Log Blast

'Very Poor Condition' After Shower of Flames

By DAVID COWLISHAW

The 10-year-old son of a German immigrant is in "very poor" condition in St. Joseph's Hospital today after a smouldering log doused with gasoline exploded and showered him with flames near his Saanich home Sunday.

Wolfgang Bradasch, 6052 Bear Hill Road, suffered first and second-degree burns to his hands, arms, face, legs and the front part of his body; third-degree burns to part of his back.

Most of his clothes were scorched off him, in spite of efforts by two brothers to pull him from the blaze.

He was apparently trying to burn out the core of the log to make a boat.

The tragedy came just two days after his 38-year-old mother came home from hospital after giving birth to her seventh child. The father, Willi Bradasch, a 40-year-old welder turned farmer, is in jail awaiting sentence for false pretences in connection with $450 welfare funds.

According to Saanich police and a brother, Helmut, 4, Wolfgang had been working on a felled log about a mile from the rickety frame Bradasch home.

"He was making a boat," Helmut said. "But it wasn't getting along too good so he decided to burn the middle bit out. That's when he got the gasoline."

Wolfgang took the case from a shed on the family's six-acre property used for storing gas and oil for his father's small tractor.

He got a can full, went back through the dense bush and splashed it over the log. Then he set fire to it. He had apparently made an earlier attempt to burn the log core out because it was still smouldering.

Muffled Explosion . . . 'A Screech'

There was a muffled explosion, Halmut said—then "a screech."

It was also heard by a Red Cross nurse, at the home to assist Mrs. Bradasch in looking after the new baby.

"And it was a loud screech," she said. "Then Wolfgang came out of the bushes with all his clothes burning. His hands were on fire and his face was scorched.

"Two other brothers—Horst, 8, and Hans-Joachim, 7, said they had tried to pull Wolfgang from the fire and had made him roll over on the ground to put the flames out."

The nurse sent the oldest Bradasch boy, Gerhard, 15½, to a house a mile away to call for police and firemen.

Saanich resuscitator crew attended but was not needed.

The burned lad was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital for emergency treatment.

His father was escorted from city jail to visit him, then returned to custody.

Today the mother, Ilse Bradasch, looked sadly around the green and black wood home. In language that was part English, part German, she said they had been 2½ years in Canada, first in Victoria, the last seven months in Saanich.

"Willi was trying to grow mushrooms," she said between tears. "He couldn't get a job as a welder after he lost the one he had at Yarrows.

Receive $20 Weekly in Welfare

"We have six chickens—they give us eggs. And two goats for milk."

The Red Cross nurse said the family received $20 a week welfare money as their only income.

"We brought them some groceries the other day," she said. "They had only bread for breakfast before not even a knife to cut it with.

"All this is pretty hard on the mother. Not home more than a couple of days from the hospital and then this happens."

The new baby is a girl, Sylvia. The other Bradasch daughter is Marianne, aged 15 months, presently being cared for by a neighbor.

Outside the kitchen window a collie dog, Duke, romped around the grounds. Rain dripped off apple and cherry trees. In the front of the home an old car stood, mud up to the axles.

The mother, a slim apprehensive woman, clutched her 10-day-old baby and wandered out on the veranda littered with clothes and metal tubs.

A solitary bush of red Inspector Lavergne peonies caught her eye and she stood there, staring at it.

"Everything, all at once," she said quietly, turned and walked back inside the house.

BOYISH DESIRE for boat of his own led to tragedy for 10-year-old Wolfgang Bradasch, pictured at left with two of his six brothers and sisters.

16-Ship Sailpast Here Next Week

The biggest sailpast in the history of the RCN Pacific Command will be seen here Tuesday, June 16.

Sixteen fighting ships will participate.

There will be six destroyer escorts of the St. Laurent class, each 2,800 tons with 210 officers and men; eight frigates of the Prestonian class, each 1,570 tons with 140 personnel; and two minesweepers, Bay class, each 400 tons with a crew of 40.

The destroyer escorts and frigates will rendezvous at the Swiftsure light ship and steam down the strait at 12½ knots to Race Rocks where they will be joined by the minesweepers at about 11.45 a.m.

They then move off in three column formation towards Victoria and arrive at a point one mile south of Trial Island between 1 and 1.15 p.m. There the course will alter to the west and formation changed for the sailpast to a point a half-mile south of Brochie Ledge.

The destroyer escorts will lead, followed by the frigates and then the minesweepers.

The impressive spectacle will be easily seen from any waterfront vantage point.

COINCIDENCE

The sailpast will be brought about by a fortunate coincidence as all ships will just "happen" to be in the area at that time.

The destroyer escorts of the Second Canadian Escort Squadron will be returning from Portland, Ore., where they took part in Oregon's centennial observances; three of the eight frigates of the Fourth Canadian Escort Squadron will be returning from Pearl Harbor while the others have been participating in local exercises; the minesweepers will leave Esquimalt harbor for the occasion.

15 MINUTES

It is expected the sailpast will take three-quarters of an hour.

Ships will be destroyer escorts Assiniboine, Fraser, Skeena, Margaree, Saguenay and St. Laurent; frigates Sussexvale, Stettler, Ste. Therese, Beacon Hill, Jonquiere, New Glasgow, New Waterford and Antigonish, and minesweepers Fortune and Cowichan.

NAVAL SHIP MOVEMENTS

Fortune and Cowichan return Wednesday at 9 a.m.

New Waterford, Jonquiere and Antigonish return June 16.

Sussexvale, Ste. Therse, Beacon Hill, New Glasgow and Stetler return June 16.

Assiniboine, St. Laurent, Saguenay, Skeena, Fraser and Margaree return June 16.

THE NAVY REGRETS

No Miss Victoria To Rose Festival

Miss Victoria and her two princesses will not be able to take part in the Portland Rose Festival this week.

An invitation from the festival authorities was turned down "with regret" today by Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce, sponsors of the Miss Victoria contest.

The Jaycees decided they could not afford to pay the girls' expenses but no mention of this was made in the telegram they sent to Portland.

Earlier, it was suggested that Miss Victoria, 19-year-old Vivi Petersen, and her princesses should travel to Portland with the fleet of six RCN destroyer escorts which are taking part in the festival.

The Royal Canadian Navy regretfully turned down this suggestion.

"We could not get clearance from Ottawa to take women on board the ships at such short notice," an RCN spokesman said. "Secondly we could not provide the necessary accommodation in time."

BUS FARE OFFERED

On Saturday Victoria travel agent George Willis offered to donate free bus travel if someone would pay the girls' hotel expenses in Portland.

The Jaycees decided they could not meet these expenses, although acting Mayor Arthur Dowell said the city council would consider footing part of the bill if the Jaycees paid the rest.

"It is a great pity," said Cy Porter, assistant commissioner, Victoria and Island Publicity Bureau. "We should not have to turn down invitations to be represented at an important event like the Portland Festival.

"This is the sort of thing that could only happen in Victoria."

The RCN fleet of six destroyer escorts will be led by HMCS Assiniboine and commanded by Capt. J. C. Pratt, commanding officer of the Assiniboine.

RCN personnel and the Naden Band conducted by commissioned Officer W. Gordon will take part in all major parades.

Fast Verdict Promised On Irrigation Fight

Lands Minister Williston today promised an early decision on the appeal of Nanaimo civic properties and recreation commission against granting of a water licence to Recreation Minister Earle Westwood and his brother near Nanaimo.

Evidence provided at an appeal hearing in Mr. Williston's office this morning indicated water drawn off for irrigating the Westwood farm would have little effect on the flow of the Millstone River.

The river flows through Nanaimo's Bowen Park. The civic group suggested the water licence granted the Westwoods would cause drying of the stream in summer.

Water rights branch district engineer Charles Errington said although the stream could dry up, as it did last summer, the normal flow would not be adversely affected between April 1 and June 30, the period when the Westwood farm may draw 60 acre-feet of water.

"It is my conviction there is ample water to the end of June," he stated. He cited figures available for neighboring Hazzam Creek, a similar-sized stream, to prove his point.

Mr. Williston said he did not see how there could be more water in summer months if water was not divirted to irrigation in the spring, unless a storage dam was built to regulate the flow. The spring run-off would still flow downstream and could not be saved for drier periods.

BORN ON FARM

Mr. Westwood said he was born on the farm in question and could speak with authority on the matter. More water flows from three sources on his farm into the river than he could ever take out, he said. He could use this water for irrigation but it requires less piping to pump from the Millstone.

He asked Mr. Errington to substantiate that the Westwood application had been handled through normal channels and that the water rights branch decision was based on the merits of the case.

He wanted it made clear that there had been no attempt to use influence of his cabinet position, which he said had been implied.

Mr. Errington agreed.

NONE INJURED AS AIRCRAFT HITS DITCH

A taxiing plane hit a shallow ditch at Patricia Bay airport Saturday, bending its propeller and damaging its undercarriage, but no one was injured.

The aircraft is a provincial government survey plane which carries a three-man crew. The ditch had been dug in connection with a reconstruction project now underway.

No Production Cut for B.C. Plywood Plant

Officials of B.C. Forest Products plywood plant here joined with other major B.C. plants in stating today that they will not follow the lead of U.S. firms which announced production cutbacks last week.

The companies said output will continue at full pace. They did not see a weakening in market conditions. B.C. Forest Products vice-president Alex Rankin said from Vancouver, "We have no plans to make changes. It is astonishing the difference that exists in the industry here and in the south."

Although some sales reductions are noticeable among west coast plywood plants in the U.S., home construction needs are still high in Canada.

President Ralph Shaw of MacMillan & Bloedel Ltd. said "it seems that in America they can't get the orders to equal their rate of production."

President John Bene of Western Plywood Company Ltd. said he felt B.C. plants would continue to operate at capacity until the end of the month.

Ex-Victorian Succumbs In Vancouver

Mrs. Catherine Crawford, former resident of Victoria and widow of William Marr Crawford, Empire Stevedoring Co. Ltd. official, died in Vancouver Saturday after an illness of several weeks.

Eventually Mr. Crawford became majority stockholder in the company, and after his death in Vancouver, in 1942 Mrs. Crawford continued as a director of the cmpany, and at one time was chairman.

Surviving is a nephew, William Crawford, in Vancouver.

Top Insurancemen Here Tuesday For Conference

Top agents of the New York Life Insurance Co. from all parts of Canada and the United States are coming to Victoria for a three-day meeting in the Empress Hotel starting Tuesday.

Small Vote Elects Robinson, Watts

Former councillor Fred A. Robinson and John D. Watts Saturday were elected to fill the two vacant seats on Oak Bay council by a mere 17.61 per cent of the municipality's eligible 7,600 voters.

It had been a five-man race, notable only for the apathy of electors which drew the ire of Reeve George Murdoch.

"I'm disgusted," he said today.

"After all, whether there are one or six councillors in the election, they are still representatives of the people and handle $1,500,000 or more a year."

Final count was Mr. Robinson, 785 votes; Mr. Watts, 612; John A. de Bourcier, 586; Norman Pittam, 328, and H. J. F. Rose, 286.

The by-election was necessitated by the resignation of one councillor and temporary property disqualification of Mr. Robinson.

ASK The TIMES

Q. How did the Metchosin area get its name? F.S.

A. Years ago—date inexact—a whale was stranded there, and cut up by the Indians for blubber. The area and the Indians smelled for some time after and the area was called "smets-shosin" or "the place of oil." It also means "smelling of oil."

Q. What's Victoria's annual rainfall? To a visitor it seems awfully wet. H.J.J.

A. Annual rainfall averages 27 inches, the same as Brighton, England. It's not so wet; Halifax rainfall per year is 57 inches average, and even Toronto has 32.

AIR CLASHES

New Tension In Mid-East

CAIRO (CP)—Fighter plane clashes, border troubles and interference with shipping in the Suez put President Nasser's United Arab Republic in the midst of new tension in the Middle East Sunday.

The incidents involved Israel and Jordan and emphasized that there is no peace in the household between Arab and Arab and Arab and Jew.

Israeli and U.A.R. jet fighters clashed in a brief air battle over the Negev Desert—third such incident in the area this year.

An Israeli military spokesman said two Israeli fighters drove off four U.A.R. jets which penetrated Israeli air space. There was a five-minute dogfight but no reports of casualties.

In Cairo, a U.A.R. military spokesman said two Israeli fighters attacked U.A.R. planes on a training flight inside U.A.R. boundaries. One Israeli plane was hit and the two planes fled back to Israel.

The U.A.R. spokesman said his country had lodged a protest with the United Nations mixed armistice commission.

The U.A.R. also protested against alleged Turkish violations of Arab air space. Informed sources said the protest was conveyed to Turkish government representatives at a Turko-Syrian border meeting Sunday. They claimed that Turkish planes violated Syrian air space more than three times last week.

Egyptian officials brushed off border troubles between Syria and Jordan as purely a local issue that Jordan's King Hussein "is trying to blow up into a big international incident."

2,000 PEASANTS RIOT OVER POTATO PRICES

MARIGLIANO, Italy (Reuters)—About 2,000 peasants protesting against low potato prices stormed into Marigliano today, set fire to the town hall, cut all telephone lines and set up road blocks.

The rioters were demonstrating against the low price they get for potatoes.

Crucial Session On Berlin

GENEVA (Reuters) — The Big Four foreign ministers met in private today at the beginning of a "make or break" week of talks on Berlin.

The East-West ministers were reported to have reached a crisis point in their month-long negotiations here. Most observers predicted that they will produce a temporary agreement on Berlin that would pave the way for a summit meeting later this summer.

Today's meeting was at the villa of Foreign Minister Gromyko. The three Western ministers met for an hour with Heinrich von Brentano, West German foreign minister, before going to Gromyko's villa.

Meanwhile, American, British and Soviet delegates returned to work on their negotiations to bring a permanent end to nuclear tests. The two sides already have agreed on 17 articles of an international treaty to ban the tests.

The chief British delegate, David Ormsby-Gore, said he thought the new series of talks would "see the conference as far as we can take it."

"After that there will be some points for settlement by the heads of government. A great deal depends on what the Soviet delegate tells us."

FRANCE MOST HOPEFUL

In the foreign ministers' talks, the feeling inside the Western delegations appeared to have changed since the start of the conference with France replacing Britain as the most optimistic member.

Nevertheless; it seemed clear that Britain regarded a summit meeting as a foregone-conclusion in view of Ormsby-Gore's statement.

The time and place of a summit parley have not been discussed, but the general feeling is that it would be in Geneva in the second half of next month.

Canada Envoy Meets Big 4 Ministers

GENEVA (Reuters) — Escott Reid, Canadian ambassador to West Germany, had a private meeting here today with Christian Herter, United States secretary of state.

Reid had informal luncheon talks during the weekend with Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd.

Reid will lunch today with West German foreign ministers Heinrich von Brentano in a continuation of what a senior Canadian official described as a visit to learn as much as possible about the progress of the East-West talks.

The official said the Canadian government was "intensely interested" in trying to follow in various ways what was happening at Geneva. The Geneva conference was a "legitimate concern of the Canadian government."

CATAPULTED OVER FISSURES

Climbers Hurtle 1,800 Ft. Down Icy Mountain Slope

LONGVIEW, Wash. (AP) — Three Tacoma mountaineers, who suffered broken ankles and other injuries Sunday in a terrifying 1,800-foot slide down a steep snow slope on Mt. St. Helens, were rescued early today.

Sixty-four climbers from Washington and Oregon, taking part in a mountain rescue seminar at Mt. Hood, sped to the scene and participated in the massive mercy mission.

Victims of the accident near the top of 9,671-foot peak was George Cashman, 40, leader of the team; Mrs. Joe Cockrell, 37, and Jim Stelling, 14.

Cashman broke both ankles and also suffered an ankle dislocation. Mrs. Cockrell and young Stelling each fractured an ankle. All were badly cut and bruised, and were treated for shock before they were transferred to Tacoma hospitals.

The three were among 28 members of the Tacoma Mountaineers who had gone Saturday to the Cascade Mountain peak 60 miles northeast of here.

The group split up into climbing teams of threes and set out at 1.30 a.m. Sunday to ascend the mountain.

Cashman said after his rescue that one of the teams ahead lost footing at about the 8,000-foot level and slid a short distance on the icy, sheer slope. He said Mrs. Cockrell, making her first major climb, became frightened and the three decided to turn back.

They had gone only a short distance when one of them slipped and all three plummeted down the crevasse-laced slope, held together by their climbing ropes. They could not check their slide with ice axes and picked up so much speed they catapulted over the fissures.

16 Killed In Bus Crash

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Sixteen Mexican farm laborers were killed and 32 others were injured when a crudely fashioned truck-bus crashed into a tree and exploded near here today.

The highway patrol, which had difficulty determining the number of charred bodies in the twisted wreckage, listed the figures as official but said there might be more dead. Many of the injured were reported in serious condition with burns and broken bones.

Soviet Team To Visit Parliament

By VICTOR J. MACKIE
Times Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA—A visit to Canada will be made this month by five Russian deputies to the Supreme Soviet following prolonged discussion on whether an exchange of Canadian and Russian parliamentarians could be organized.

The Russian deputies will be the guests of Soviet Ambassador Aroutunian.

Arrangements are now being completed in the Soviet for the deputies to leave for Canada.

In Ottawa facilities probably will be provided by the Canadian government for the Russian deputies to see parliament in action.

Tentative arrangements are being made for the group to visit Niagara Falls, Toronto and Montreal where they will attend a performance given by the Bolshoi Ballet.

A plan for an exchange of parliamentarians between Canada and Russia was first proposed in Moscow four years ago. It was considered by Canadians but nothing ever came of it.

The Russian group will carry with them, it is understood, an invitation to Canadian parliamentarians to visit Russia.

Perfect Landing For Historic 22-Minute Cargo

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States post office department today announced the first successful mail delivery by guided missile.

The missile, a Navy Regulus I, was launched by a U.S. submarine in the Atlantic and landed at the auxiliary naval air station at Mayport near Jacksonville, Fla.

The submarine was the Barbero, a missile vessel.

The distance the missile travelled was not disclosed. The department said only that the submarine was "somewhere at sea."

The navy, however, estimated that straight-line distance at about 100 miles.

The Regulus flies around 600 miles an hour and today's run took 22 minutes, which would indicate a total flight of well above 100 miles, including any changes of course and the landing manoeuvres. The Regulus is controllable in flight.

The cargo of 3,000 letters included one addressed to President Eisenhower.

Other messages in the cargo were for the postmasters-general of the 99 other countries which are members of the Universal Postal Union.

The missile was fired at 8.10 a.m., MDT, and landed safely at 8.32 a.m., the department said.

PERFECT LANDING

Postmaster-General A. E. Summerfield, describing the event in a telephone conversation with the Washington Evening Star, said the wheeled missile made a perfect landing on the runway, trailing a parachute to slow it down. The weight of the payload was not disclosed.

Postal workers unloaded the mail, processed it and sped it on its way.

Last Jan. 23 Summerfield predicted regular missile mail.

In an address to the annual awards dinner of National Business Publications, Inc., the postmaster-general said that before man reaches the moon "your mail will be delivered within hours from New York to California, to England, to India or to Australia by guided missiles."

ROCKET SHIP IN PERFECT GLIDE TEST

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP)—The rocket ship X-15, expected some day to carry man 100 miles high at 4,000 miles an hour, successfully made its first glide test today.

A brief announcement said everything went as planned.

This meant that the ship was dropped at 38,000 feet from a B-52 mother plane, glided for four or five minutes, and landed on a dry lake bed at 230 miles an hour.

Later this year the X-15 will undergo tests with jet engines. Next year all-out flight with rocket engines is planned.

Pastor Fired For Pleading Race Harmony

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — The minister of the First Presbyterian Church was dismissed from the pulpit Sunday in an action that climaxed several years of dissension over the racial question.

A judicial commission on the southwest Georgia presbytery announced that Rev. Robert B. McNeill was being relieved of his pastoral obligations because "the interests of religion imperatively demand it."

The 44-year-old pastor was the author of an article in Look Magazine in 1957 in which he discussed ways of bringing racial harmony to the south through "creative contact between leaders of both races."

Did Margaret Say 'No' To Australian Visit?

LONDON (Reuters) — Australian Prime Minister Robert Menzies Sunday denied as "completely untrue" a Sydney newspaper report that Princess Margaret refused to visit Australia "as a political football."

The Sydney Sunday Mirror, in a story from London, said Menzies suggested at a luncheon here last week that Margaret and Queen Mother Elizabeth visit Australia in 1961 — just before the next general elections.

The Mirror quoted Margaret as telling Menzies that she would not become a party to vote-catching and limelight-seeking by Australian politicians. It added that Margaret indicated she did not find prospects of an Australian tour "terribly appealing."

ON WORLD TOUR

Menzies, here on a world tour, said "the report is completely untrue" when informed of the story. "I will make no comment on any discussions I may have with the Royal Family."

England Beats India

NOTTINGHAM, Eng. (Reuters)—England whipped India by an innings and 59 runs today in the first of five cricket test matches to be played between the two countries this summer.

'Two-Time Dad' Has Quads And Double Trouble Wives

(Times News Services)

NEW YORK—Ciro Bravata, four times proud when he became the father of quadruplets, also has double trouble. The New Jersey mother of his quads doesn't know he has a wife in New York City.

The quads — three healthy boys and a girl—were born Saturday at East Orange, N.J., hospital to Louise Bravata, 31.

Bravata, a railroad freight conductor who will be 41 on June 21, Father's Day, said all he wants is to do right by all six children.

Bravata said he met Louise several years before he left his wife, Grace, in Hollis, Queens. They have two children.

"I always intended to legalize it," he said. "My intentions were honorable. But how was I supposed to know we'd have quadruplets? If we'd had twins this wouldn't have happened."

Interviewed Sunday in his neat, four-room East Orange apartment, Bravata dolefully told reporters he planned to tell Louise about Grace today.

Asked how he thought Louise would take the news, he replied: "She's a sensible person."

Bravata said he and Grace were separated 2½ years ago.

He said he already had been to a lawyer to try and unscramble his difficulties. Asked how he planned to resolve things, Bravata said, "I don't know—that's up to the lawyer."

In a bitter mood and under sedation at her home, Grace Bravata lay limply in bed, her eyes red-rimmed and dark-circled. Asked about her husband, she moaned: "Oh, he's a fine one."

The new mother and all four quadruplets were reported doing fine.

EARLY BIRDS GET LOOT THAT 'GROWS' ON AUTOS

TORONTO (CP)—Money might grow on trees but in the north end of Toronto it appears to be growing on automobiles.

Motorists on Albertus Ave., who often get up to find all night parking tags on their cars now are finding $10 and $20 bills instead. The cash has shown up the last two nights tucked under bumpers and windshield wipers.

The motorists must be early birds to catch the cash; if they aren't, the neighborhood children get it first. Police said children had turned in about $150 so far. If no one claims it, the children who found it will get it back.

Police were at a loss to explain the mystery donations.

Legion Sponsors School Soccer On Salt Spring

GANGES — Salt Spring Island Branch 92, Canadian Legion, has decided to sponsor a local school soccer team to compete against other B.C. junior football teams as part of its public service program.

Salt Spring soccer teams once were well known in British Columbia Leagues, but in recent years the game has been confined mainly to after-school contests.

The new team will consist of Salt Spring School students. The Legion will equip the team and pay travelling expenses. The first season, it is expected that 14 games will be played off-Island and about seven at home.

Committee in charge will include Harry Nichols, long-time soccer enthusiast and coach; Jim Wickens, sports director and teacher at the school; and Tom Dobson, former Royal Canadian Navy soccer player.

TO MOSCOW?

Evangelist Billy Graham said in London today he may fly to Moscow for a few days to meet religious leaders there. Friends, earlier, said he had been invited to Russia by leaders of the Soviet Baptist Church. Graham said he believed "the Russian people are basically religious."

IT'S JUSTIFIED, SAYS DUNCAN PRINCIPAL

Graduation 'Fanfare' Backed

DUNCAN—Graduation ceremonies at high schools have the support of Lieut.-Col. Richard M. Lendrum, principal of Cowichan Junior-Senior High School here.

Speaking to graduates of his own school at their ceremony Friday night, he said such events are justified when it is realized that only 30 per cent of students who start grade 7 actually finish their high school courses through grade 12.

Coun. D. C. Morton of North Cowichan, guest speaker, told the 80 graduates before a crowd of 1,000 to "follow the accepted ways only to a degree," and to "go out and keep on learning."

Class valedictorian Donald Walmsley promised: "We will use our learning to the best of our abilities."

Highlight of the ceremony was the presentation of scholarships as follows: Arthur Roland Stanley Stanley-Jones, MacMillan and Bloedel Ltd. university program scholarship of $400 and Duncan Rotary Club scholarship; Beatrice Elizabeth Thorarinson, M and B general program scholarship of $250.

Rosemary Elaine Wood, Cowichan Registered Nurses' Association bursary; Thelma Louise Cardiff, Duncan Business and Professional Women's Club bursary; Margaret Ethel McKee, Women of the Moose Duncan lodge bursary, and Dogwood Chapter IODE scholarship; Judith Louise Norcross, Cowichan RNA bursary.

Grace Helen Jones, Cowichan RNA scholarship; Donald Walmsley, Cowichan Parent-Teacher bursary; Duncan Leslie Atchison, Cowichan Branch 53 Canadian Legion scholarship.

They Worked Hard But Oh How They Ate!

CHEMAINUS — Hard-working youngsters have big appetites, according to Harry Ewart, chairman of Chemainus park committee.

A total of 61 high school students turned out Sunday afternoon to a work party at the community park now under development at Fuller's Lake. Armed with rakes and shovels, the youngsters cleared and levelled the picnic area.

They also found time between them to dispose of 200 hot dogs, 100 Dixie cups and 240 bottles of soft drinks served to them by members of the Kinette Club.

Logger Feared Drowned Upcoast

ALERT BAY (CP) — A search continued late Sunday without success for Nick Zaiec, 41, of Richmond, B.C., who disappeared last Wednesday. Zaiec, a logger, left his camp here during the night and it is believed he may have drowned in the nearby inlet.

COURTENAY BOY WINS B.C. ROADEO

John Follett of Courtenay won the British Columbia teen-age driving roadeo competition in Vancouver Saturday.

The youth will represent B.C. at the national final in Galt, Ont., this summer.

Gary Mullins of New Westminster was second in the competition, while Bill Bradshaw of Cloverdale was third.

Trial Off For 1 Week

MAILLARDVILLE, B.C. (CP)—Basil Joe, 22, was remanded in custody for one week when he appeared in police court here today to face a charge of attempting to murder an RCMP constable.

Joe was charged after Constable John D. S. Clark was shot in the chest while investigating a brawl May 30 at the Colony Farm Indian Reserve at nearby Coquitlam.

A new £100,000 tourist camp is to be opened in South Africa's Kruger National Park, big game preserve, in 1960.

B.C. Air Lines to Get Coast Runs From PWA

B.C. Air Lines, operators of regular service and charter flights on Vancouver Island, Queen Charlotte Islands, and mainland coastal areas, will take over certain services of Pacific Western Airlines on June 15.

Announcement of the change was made jointly today by Karl J. Springer, president of Pacific Western, and Francis G. Winspear, president of B.C. Air Lines.

TRANSFERRED

Under the new arrangement the separate daily flights by PWA to Tofino, Tahsis and Ocean Falls will be transferred to B.C. Air Lines. Included will be the operation of regular and charter operations out of Port Alberni and Tahsis covering a wide area of the west coast of the Island.

B.C. Air Lines will in addition acquire the 10-passenger amphibious aircraft which now fly from Vancouver to the terminal points, as well as a number of float-equipped aircraft handling regular and charter flights beyond. The sale of terminal equipment, offices and docking facilities at some of these points also is involved.

BIG EXPANSION

"Pacific Western Airlines is presently preparing for a large expansion which involves the taking over of the Canadian Pacific Airlines scheduled routes in the Mackenzie River district, north of Edmonton, early this summer," said Mr. Springer, "and expansion, if it is to be sound and healthy, must also involve some consolidation."

Mr. Springer said scheduled airline routes now play a predominant part in the company's services, and that "the transfer of certain coastal licences, in keeping with our policy of continuing consolidation, is advantageous to both companies."

The sale increases the aircraft fleet of B.C. Air Lines to 26, making it the largest carrier operating solely in British Columbia.

NO DISRUPTION

"Now that the transfer has been approved," said Mr. Winspear, "the change-over will be made without any disruption of service or inconvenience to the flying public."

Arrangements for ticketing and passenger handling will be virtually unchanged, Mr. Winspear noted, "and since the flying operation will be identical, there will be no lessening of the service to the public."

Extensive flight familiarization procedures of the aircraft BCA are taking over, have been underway for several weeks.

Our Birthday Cards and Greetings

Purpose Of This Section

By LES FOX
Managing Editor

Because this special section is about our 75th birthday, a good deal of it tells the story of the Times.

What we have tried to do is tell in an interesting fashion how the Times was born in 19th century Victoria and how it has progressed since.

Because a newspaper is a living thing and cannot be any better than the people who produce it, several of the items concern the people who have occupied chairs on the paper during its three-quarter century and left their marks on the traditions of the paper.

A newspaper also becomes an integral part of the community it serves. So we have attempted in a series of three articles to give a glimpse of Victoria past, present and future.

Celebrating their 75th anniversary along with the Times in this year 1959, are a number of Victorians who first saw the light of day here in 1884. They have told their stories to Times reporters and share with our other readers the experiences they have had.

FRONT PAGES

Toward the back of this edition are reproductions of five front pages of the newspaper, reflecting the changing times and recalling some of the important news stories of the era.

And we have also reproduced some of our "birthday cards," in the form of greetings from people all over Canada who have been kind enough to send them, and in the form of cartoons from the artists who entertain you daily on the comics page.

Among the many advertisers who appear in this issue are firms who have been in business here as long, and in some cases, longer than the Times.

Others planted their roots later, but all contribute their function to the growing and solidly knit community, and the Times reciprocates their greetings.

Lieut.-Governor's Message

THE 5th OF May, 1959.
AT GOVERNMENT HOUSE.
VICTORIA, B.C.

A newspaper is very much part of the life of a City or a Community, and in fact is a family friend.

In travels to other cities no paper is appreciated as much as one's own home town paper, which seems to present the news to us in a manner we like.

One has very little conception of the influence exercised by the accurate presentation of news, and the guidance of public opinion by well thought-out editorials, written with the object of concentrating public opinion in one direction.

In the 75 years that have passed, the Victoria Daily Times has with great honour to itself, its publishers and editors, been a medium of pleasure and advice to all of Vancouver Island, and its publishers must view with pride the many times articles and observations from their paper are quoted in other daily newspapers and publications throughout Canada.

Lieutenant-Governor

OUR FRONT COVER

Talented Brush Tells Story Of Paper's Sights, Sounds

How does an artist set down, with paint and brush, the sights and sounds and impressions of a modern daily newspaper?

To 32-year-old Victoria artist Duncan deKergommeaux, the question posed an interesting challenge. The qualities he sought were vitality, movement, and power; they found expression in bold colors, contrasting typefaces, the geometric interplay of circular presses and flailing typewriter keys.

Of "Anniversary 75," which graces our cover, artist deKergommeaux says:

"This is an impression of all the machines I have seen around a newspaper office—the presses themselves, typewriters which produce the copy, perhaps even a linotype which converts it into hot metal."

This is not the first time Duncan deKergommeaux has been associated with The Times.

DID TIMES MURAL

Seven years ago, he won a contest among pupils of Jan Zach for a "newspaper mural," to adorn the newsroom of our new building. It was the first such mural in Western Canada.

The young artist, who now teaches at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, was born in northern British Columbia and left a school-teaching career to study at the Banff School of Fine Arts, at the Hans Hofman School of Fine Arts in Provincetown, Mass., and in Mexico, on a Canada Council scholarship.

A few seasons ago he moved on to Ottawa, where he had three successful one-man shows in the nation's capital.

In 1957 he entered the Monsanto Canadian Art Competition and saw his entry, "Pine Forest," chosen as the company's Christmas card for that year, from over 400 works of art entered.

IMAGINATIVE WORK

Last year he was winner of a purchase award in the Minneapolis Biennial.

. . . his impressions

Duncan deKergommeaux's work hangs in the National Gallery of Canada, as part of its permanent collection, as well as in many private collections (and galleries) in Canada and the United States.

His strong color-sense and imaginative ideas have won admiration and attention wherever he has shown.

PUBLISHER EXPRESSES THANKS

By STUART KEATE

Tomorrow, June 9, the Daily Times celebrates its seventy-fifth anniversary.

As we mark the occasion we express our warm thanks to the loyal band of readers, and businesses, who have supported us down through the years.

The Times arrives at its 75th birthday in healthy condition. It has more readers than ever before, more advertising lineage, better equipment and premises, and a young, vigorous and dedicated staff.

That this is so, we feel, is due to public acceptance of The Times' policy of free and unfettered publication of the news, coupled with a forthright editorial policy which resists all ties with special interests or groups.

In expressing our gratitude for readers' support of this stand, we renew our pledge to try and produce, from day to day, a newspaper of decency and integrity which will "go into the homes as a gracious and welcome guest."

Greetings From Leaders

I am pleased to have this opportunity of congratulating the Victoria Daily Times, its publishers, editors, reporters and technical staff, on the celebration of their 75th anniversary.

As one of the pioneer members of the fourth estate in British Columbia, the Times has recorded countless historic events in the phenomenal growth of our province, and today is, itself, making history through the completion of its 75th year of publication.

I am sure that the great future which lies ahead of us in this land of unlimited opportunity will be chronicled and shared for many years to come by the Victoria Daily Times.

Signed:
W. A. C. BENNETT,
Premier of B.C.

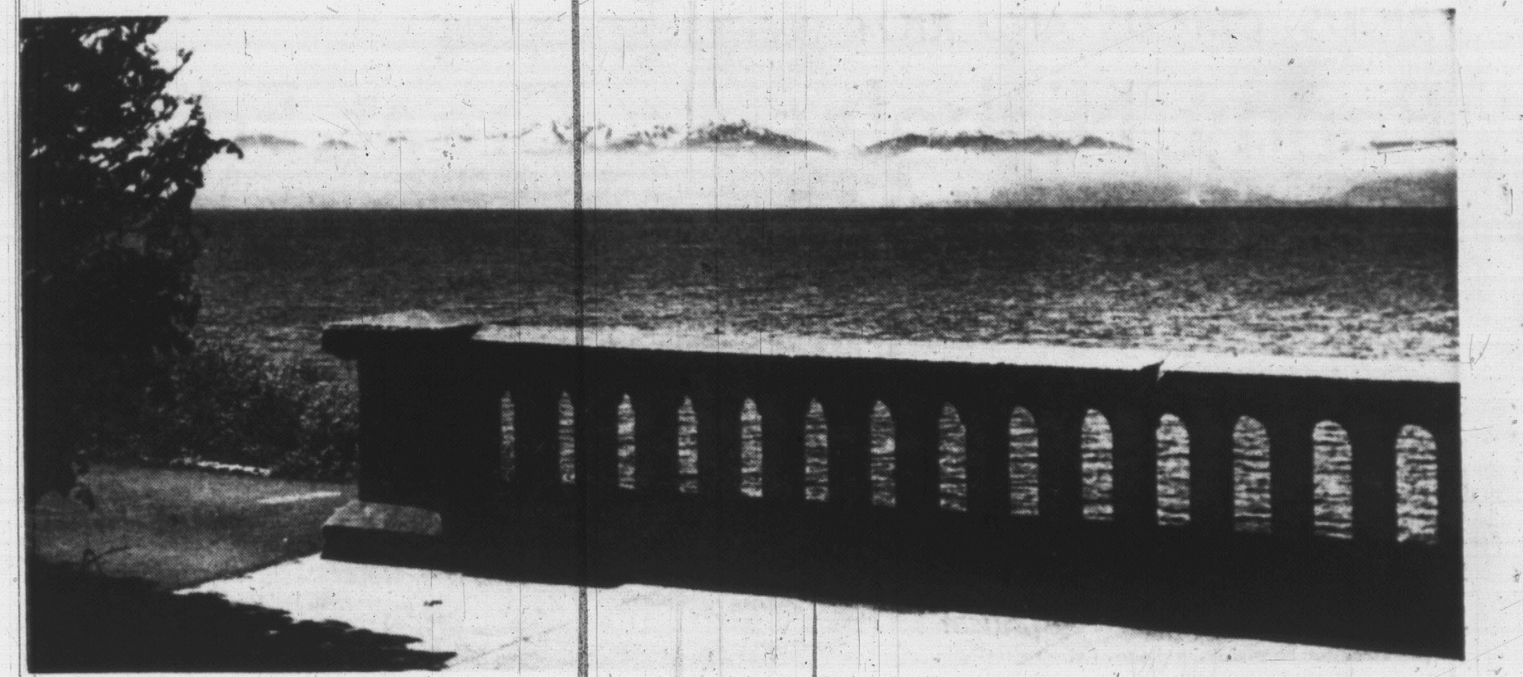
On this occasion of the 75th birthday of the Victoria Daily Times, I extend to the publisher, editor and the entire staff my warm congratulations on the high standard of reliable reporting and good editorial comment which they have maintained.

As Victoria grows, so may your newspaper continue to expand and to observe the community as well and constructively in the future as it has for the last 75 years.

So I send cordial greetings and my very best wishes for ever-increasing success in the years ahead.

Signed:
LESTER B. PEARSON,
National Liberal Leader.



Victoria's magnificent backdrop, the Olympics, changes every day yet remains the same.

Times Has Grown With Victoria

In all its three-quarters of a century existence, the Victoria Daily Times has had only five owners. The present proprietor, G. Max Bell, acquired the paper from the Spencer family in 1949.

The ensuing decade has witnessed a number of changes. Before entering the Victoria field Mr. Bell had engaged as publisher, Stuart Keate, a native British Columbian who was with Time, Inc., the publishers of Time and Life magazines.

G. MAX BELL
. . . owner

Mr. Keate in turn persuaded the well-known Canadian author and journalist, Bruce Hutchison — who had started his career as a sports writer on the Times — to return to his newspaper Alma Mater as editor in 1950.

Another Times alumnus, A. Leslie Fox, who had become well-known as a political correspondent in the legislative press gallery, was hired away from the Vancouver Sun to become managing editor.

With this infusion of new blood, The Times began a program of expansion and development which was reflected in the growth and size of the paper, and its staff.

Within a decade, the Times has grown from an average of 22 pages a day (the national average, incidentally, for cities of comparable size) to 32.

To cover the activities of a growing community, the editorial staff was increased from 24 to 34.

Circulation of the paper increased 35 per cent.

PRAISED BY THE 'DEACON'

Along the way, a number of changes in style, format and content were undertaken, and new features introduced:

- The paper was completely "redressed," typographically, and won the praise of the late "Deacon" Farrar at a New Orleans conference as "one of the most attractive looking papers in the country";
- The outstanding color-gravure section, Weekend Magazine, was added as a Saturday supplement and the comics section expanded to 16 pages;
- Special equipment was purchased in order to bring into Victoria a direct transmission of some 750 stock quotations daily, on automatic service from Toronto;
- The spot-news wirephoto transmission service, called Photofax, was purchased from Associated Press so that pictures of the great news events of the world could be brought directly into the Times' newsroom in a matter of hours or minutes;
- Direct teletype connection was established for the use of reporters in the Legislative Buildings and the City Hall;
- A full-time bureau was opened in Duncan with direct teletype connection with Victoria for filing of on-the-spot news of the Cowichan Valley.
- A staff cartoonist, Sid Barron, was engaged to produce pen-and-ink commentaries on national, provincial and local news happenings;
- The well-known fashion commentator, Nora Damaske, was signed to write a weekly column for the womens pages of the paper;
- National and international services were combed for outstanding writers who could report exclusively for Times readers in this area among them, Canadian critic Robertson Davies; sports columnist Jimmy Cannon; night-life reporter Earl Wilson; health adviser Dr. Walter Alvarez; and captivating, capricious "heart throb" columnist Abbie Van Buren.

FAMOUS PERSONALITIES

At the same time the Times plunged into a brisk round of promotional activities which brought famous personalities to Victoria from many corners of the world:

- In 1954, world champion swimmer Florence Chadwick was brought to Victoria to test the Straits of Juan de Fuca;
- Two years later, after Flo had failed, Marilyn Bell and Cliff Lumsdon came out from Toronto and succeeded, proving (as Bert Thomas had done in the interim) that a woman, as well as men, could conquer the icy waters between Victoria and Port Angeles;
- In 1953, Sir Edmund Hillary and his "Everest Team" came to Victoria under Times sponsorship, and gave a memorable lecture to an audience of 4,000 in Memorial Arena, raising $1,000 for local charities;
- In 1955, the World's Chess Master, Sammy Reshevsky, accepted an invitation from The Times to stage an exhibition at Central Junior High School;
- In 1956, the Times launched the "World's Tallest Totem Pole" project, which was supported by 11,500 persons and won the Editor and Publisher Award for that year as the "Best Promotion" of the year for newspapers under 50,000 circulation, for the whole of North America;
- In 1958, the Times sponsored a 100-mile bicycle race from Qualicum Beach to Victoria as a Centennial sports attraction;
- Over the 10-year period, 1949-1959 the Times raised more than $100,000 for deserving charities by way of the Unitarian Service Committee, the British-Dutch Flood Relief campaign, and the Saanich Inlet Solarium Salmon Derbies.

A busy decade? Perhaps. But Times editors are confident that the next 10 years are going to be every bit as exciting as the past 10. To meet that challenge, new equipment and new techniques are being tested.

In 1884: a Voice of Protest Emerged

By GUS SIVERTZ

It is exceedingly unlikely that anyone in Victoria nursing a bit of a hangover on New Year's Day of 1884 could be persuaded that this was to be an auspicious year for the bustling capital city.

But this was to be a very significant year, indeed, and there was a ferment discernible in the political and business aspects of the city.

No doubt the average citizen was pleased that the amazing government of the Hon. Robert Beavan had gone down to ignominious defeat after attempting to control the legislature with eight adherents in a House of 25 members.

Perhaps there was also an unexpressed feeling that Victoria, now a city of considerable stature, should have a vigorous afternoon daily newspaper in addition to the Colonist, which many believed was somewhat too much the voice of the gentry.

The fast-growing ranks of merchants, small manufacturers, carpenters, plumbers, stone masons, bricklayers, blacksmiths and laborers may well have wished for a newspaper that would add its voice to protest such things as the alienation of 3,500,000 acres of land in the Peace River to the Dominion government and the apparently high-handed action of provincial and federal governments in paying a cash bonus of $750,000 plus a land grant of 1,900,000 acres for construction of the Esquimalt & Nanaimo Railway.

This need for a second paper in Victoria must have been in the minds of several leading spirits of the city because on June 9, 1884, the first edition of The Victoria Daily Times rolled off its press to begin an uninterrupted 75 years of publication.

Prime mover in launching the fledgling newspaper was a big, spade-bearded member of the provincial legislature for Cassiar, James Grant, later to become mayor of Victoria.

Publication offices were on Government near Johnson, two of the city's most important thoroughfares.

The Times was born in one of the more turbulent periods of British Columbia's, often hectic history. Hon. William Smithe, premier of the fifth legislature, was trying to bring some sort or order out of the chaos bequeathed by Mr.

SERIOUS, CIRCUS AND RIOT

Benny Nicholas—a Great Editor

(Ben Nicholas was editor of the Times for more than 20 years when he died in 1936. This appreciation of him is written by one of his illustrious proteges.

By BRUCE HUTCHISON, Editor of The Times

In the lobby of this newspaper's editorial offices hangs the portrait of a stout and genial man. It is a good portrait but it has not caught the spirit of Benjamin Charles Nicholas. No portrait, painted or photographic, could hope to catch it. But older Victorians will remember that Benny Nicholas was not only the spirit of The Times but of this town. He was Victoria incarnate.

Stronghold of Personal Journalism

As an editor he maintained one of the last strongholds of a personal journalism that began on the frontier and perished, like so many good things, in a new age, perhaps better but certainly less personal. For some twenty years The Times and Nicholas were indistinguishable.

By the standards of his day, or any day, he was a great editor and a brilliant writer but we remember him in this institution not so much as a boss and mentor but as a human being, who made life a combination of serious journalism, circus and riot. There will never be such an editor or such a time again, here or anywhere.

World of His Own Construction

We didn't know it then—we were too young to know—but Nicholas inhabited a world of his own construction centred in this office and extending about as far northward as the Malahat. To be sure, he knew a great deal about the big world beyond, he had traveled much of it, he was a sedulous scholar of international and national problems and a respected authority on Canadian politics, but he lived and moved and had his being only in his town. By an odd symbiosis impossible today, the town lived and moved and had its being in him.

Was there a good public cause to advocate? Its promoters invariably came to the dingy, chaotic office where Nicholas labored amid a limbo of papers and pecked out his editorials on one of the first typewriters ever invented.

Both Parties Sought His Advice

Was there a political campaign to fight? The candidates of both parties slid in quietly to seek the sage's advice. He was a Liberal (both small and big L) but Conservatives trusted him with their secrets and they were never betrayed.

Was some man in domestic trouble? He took counsel from a confirmed bachelor. Was some boy in need of a bicycle? Benny bought it for him. Once indeed, finding a poor family homeless, he bought them a house.

As a result of such charities, far beyond his means, he was usually hard up and yet always felt rich. He was rich, too, for such a man had no need of money, only of friends. And in friendship he was the richest man I ever knew.

New Explosion at 8 Each Morning

In one side of his complex nature—too complex for his younger colleagues to understand then—life was a daily gag, a new explosion at eight o'clock every morning. He would walk to the old office, at the corner of Fort and Broad Streets, with a pensive look like a man mediating some serious purpose. But he was usually meditating some preposterous joke.

Possibly his best (it is safe to reveal the truth after all these years) was the invention of the Zipple, to which I was privy. The word occurred to him in one of the evening parlor guessing games popular in those days and it seemed too good to waste. Next morning he sent up to the printers a letter from a subscriber named L. Puller, who announced briefly that he had discovered a genuine specimen of the Zipple in the Highland district.

In this more cynical age it may be hard to believe, but the whole town was instantly convulsed by the Zipple. Subscribers wrote into say that Mr. Puller's specimen could not be genuine, since Zipples never lived north of the equator. Others declared that they had often found Zipples in Sooke, Metchosin and Oak Bay.

Through weeks of argument in the letter column Nicholas maintained a judicial air while the story got entirely out of hand and the Zipple grew into

BIG BILL TEMPLEMAN WAS DRIVING FORCE

By ART STOTT
Times Associate Editor

When old-timers discuss the early days of the Victoria Times, they talk of big Bill Templeman.

"You mean the Honorable William;" says a veteran of the paper's present pressroom who was a boy in the mail department during the Templeman regime.

Templeman was not in at the paper's founding. The Times was conceived and financed by John Grant, one-time MLA for Cassiar and later Victoria as well as former mayor of this city, with Hon. Robert Beaven, a former premier and also mayor, and the well-known physician Dr. G. L. Milne.

Under their sponsorship its first edition appeared on June 9, 1884.

Early in its life J. C. McLagan assumed editorial direction of the newspaper, subscribing at the time for sufficient shares to give him a one-third interest. When he left to found the Vancouver World, he sold his holdings to H. A. Munn, from whom they were bought by Mr. Templeman.

The man who had successfully established the Atlmonte, Ontario, Gazette, set his signature on the new journal, acquired shares of the other holders, and the Times became Templeman's paper for three decades.

His biography notes his career as a senator in Ottawa and his appointment to the Laurier cabinet. His picture shows a fine, strong but sympathetic face under a shock of grey-white hair — a good statesmanlike photograph.

The old-timers recall him as a big, slow-moving man, with a mint candy in his pocket for a child, a muttered remark or order for an employee, and the willingness to sell papers over the counter to newsboys in the rush of a hectic day.

He could write an editorial and set it in type himself. He could walk with crowds and talk with kings and, on occasion, could mistake one for the other.

They tell the story of him alighting from a train in the B.C. interior and tipping the uniformed person who crossed the platform to him.

A FLASHBACK TO 1884

Victoria Was 'Little Bit of Frisco' Back When She Was Cutting Teeth

By JAMES K. NESBITT

Victoria, the year the Times was first published, was a gay and growing place.

Next to San Francisco, it was the brightest spot on the Pacific coast.

On the B.C. mainland there was little . . . a few sawmills by the shores of Burrard Inlet; a small community called Gastown or Granville. Vancouver was not to be born until two years later. On Puget Sound there was a place named Seattle, but no one in Victoria thought it would amount to much.

Victoria patterned itself strictly after San Francisco . . . in its hotels, its homes, except those of the landed gentry, who built their homes to look like English homes.

Perhaps it was for food that Victoria was most noted. The menus of 1884 are today museum pieces; one wonders how those who sat down to what were in very truth groaning boards ever waded through the menu.

Reading the files of The Times in 1884 one has a picture of the Victoria of that year.

There was, for instance, a great deal of building. Victoria seems to have been prosperous in 1884, and many fine homes were rising, and many smart business blocks.

In the first issue of The Times was this: "Improvements . . . the erection of fine residences and the demand in our homes for finer and more artistic work and tasteful decorations is becoming one of the most pleasing features of the age.

"Home is where our lives are moulded, and tastes cultivated, and its proper ornamentation is an art that refines, elevates and purifies and therefore is most worthy of our careful consideration.

"The magnificent mansion being built for Capt. John Irving, the popular manager of the Canadian Pacific Navigation Company, is now nearing completion. In point of architectural grandeur it is doubtless the finest in Victoria. Capt. Irving's grounds cover four acres, and the house stands at the corner of Menzies and Michigan . . ."

Victoria was a port of note in those days. Ships arrived every few days . . . from California, Britain, Australia, the Orient.

But often there was trouble and sorrow, indignation and fury, for smallpox was common. There were occasions when hundreds of passengers were kept in quarantine at William Head.

In June of 1884 The Times told this story:

"Quarantine . . . There are some mad people aboard the steamer Mexico, which now lies about a quarter of a mile from the Outer Wharf . . . among the number are Ben Cotton and Company, who were to begin a week's engagement at Philharmonic Hall tonight, several citizens of Victoria, and others from San Francisco who hoped to set foot on British ground today, but are now deterred for 21 days at least and maybe longer.

"Further than this, not a solitary newspaper or letter nor any part of Wells-Fargo express, a box of fruit, nor any other kind of freight can come off. Her passengers must fretfully pace the decks and wear out the soles of their shoes while vainly trying to possess their own souls in peace. There is no help for it. It must be endured, even if the summer of their discontent is made more irritating by the nearness of these attractive shores."

The quarantine went on for days. "The steamer Mexico . . . this large steamer with her human freight continues the topic of discussion in this city, much sympathy being expressed for the quarantined passengers. Yesterday a Times reporter sailed out to the ship and remained conversing with the passengers during the afternoon.

"When his little boat had hove to quite near the ship the passengers thronged the rail and Mr. D. K. Pearson, one of them, addressing himself to the aforesaid scribe, made an eloquent and forcible speech, in which he said: 'In all of my thousands of miles of travel I have never been on a ship where I met a more select set of passengers. There is not one black sheep among us. We therefore deserve from the people of Victoria that treatment due to ladies and gentlemen.

"But we have not been shown the same consideration as the decayed fruit which has been fumigated and sent out among the people; while we passengers, whose convenience and business interests are of paramount importance have been cut off from the world entirely.'

"This speech was enthusiastically received by the passengers, and then the Ben Cotton Company's band sere-

A 75-YEAR-OLD REMEMBERS

'Say! Those Music Halls'

By MONTE ROBERTS

Talk to a veteran tugboat captain about the early days of Victoria and what do you learn?

You learn about the night life of Victoria, that's what you learn.

And do not state there was no night life, or Capt. William Reginald Roskelley will put you to rights, and he's a man of the size and strength to do it, too.

Capt. Roskelley — Reg. to one and all — was born on North Park Street, Oct. 26, 1884, which puts him in his 75th year and a fit subject for the 75th anniversary edition of The Times.

The way the subject of night life came up, he was asked what he did for amusement when he was a boy.

"Just the usual things, hang around, watch the sailing ships," he said. "But when I got a bit older — say, those music halls," the captain reminisced.

"There was the Delmonico, down Government toward the harbor. There was the Savoy, a bit north. And there was the Trilby, on Broad Street.

"And they were real daring, too. When those women came on the stage in their loose blouses and tights, everybody held their breath."

(Under cross-examination, Capt. Roskelley admitted clothes at the average summer resort are a good deal more daring today.)

"But there weren't only just the dancing girls," he went on. "There'd be 18, 20 acts in each of those music halls of a Saturday night. You could come and go as you please, stay as long a time or as short a time as you wanted.

"There were acrobats, and jugglers, and singers, and dancers. There was a lot of doubling up, and the same

Queen's Visit Recalls Those Of Years Past

By TONY DICKASON

The Princess has bowed in the Queen.

Princess Margaret who visited here last July laid a fairy-framework for Victorian hospitality. It will be extended this year, in July also, to her sister, the Queen.

But Her Majesty's visit will be nothing new in the realms of royal visits; they extend back 76 years!

The Princess was here July 12-16, 1958, and apparently loved every minute of it. She pried around the area like a tourist, even though conducted by considerable gold braid.

All who saw her thought the Princess was "a sweet princess" in every sense.

It has been noted one of the endearing attributes of royalty is the ability to smile while in the rim of the Empire, as well as "home" in Buckingham Palace. It has been noticeable here.

Back in 1882, on Sept. 19, the raw new province of B.C. got its first look at royalty when Princess Louise, daughter of Queen Victoria, arrived in Esquimalt Harbor aboard HMS Cowrie with her husband, the Marquis of Lorne, Governor-General of Canada.

Thousands of the strongly-British Victoria residents turned out to greet them. Arches of evergreens and flowers graced Victoria and Esquimalt streets.

Sailor Prince Here

In 1890 Prince Arthur, Duke of Connaught, seventh of Queen Victoria's children, stopped here for a day, on May 21, en route back to England. The Duke and Duchess were brought ashore from the Pacific liner, Abyssinia, anchored in Royal Roads. Greetings by citizens, government and civic leaders was enthusiastic.

In 1901 a "sailor prince" visited.

He came here Oct. 1 aboard the Empress of India, and 30,000 persons cheered the arrival.

He was the Duke of Cornwal' and York, later King George V. His duchess was to be Queen Mary.

White haired Sir Wilfrid Laurier was with the royal party. Lieutenant-Governor Sir Henri Joly de Lotbiniere was among the welcoming party.

But it was on May 29, 1939, that Victoria had its first visit from a reigning monarch, the late King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, now the Queen Mother.

More than 50,000 persons lined the streets, throwing out cheer after cheer as the official car passed.

Most Heart-Stirring

Victoria visit of Their Majesties was perhaps the most heart-stirring of all in their Canada-wide tour.

Back again to 1906, Prince Arthur of Connaught, 23, son of the Duke of Connaught and nephew of King Edward VII, visited Victoria on his way home as a member of a British mission to Japan.

He left March 31 after a four-day stay.

The year 1912 brought back the Duke and Duchess for a second time; this time he arrived as governor-general. The city declared a holiday.

The young and pretty daughter, Princess Patricia, was with them.

Now 73, she is commander-in-chief of the famous Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, to which she gave her name.

The 1st Battalion is stationed here at Work Point Barracks.

The royal couple arrived Sept. 26 aboard Ss Princess Alice, and were escorted to Government House via the Causeway.

Third and last visit of the Duke of Connaught was paid in 1915, during the war. He inspected military establishments in the area, in field-marshal's uniform, Sept. 16.

'Smiling Prince'

Bang-up show, with 40,000 persons participating, was on arrival, Sept. 23, 1919, of the "Smiling Prince."

The First World War had ended when the Prince of Wales came here, to be welcomed by streets jammed with people waiting for a glimpse of the popular Prince.

His future was then bright. Abdication was, of course, unheard of. He was as popular here as elsewhere in the Empire.

This was the young, cigaret-smoking heir-apparent to Britain's Throne.

In 1924 the Prince again visited Victoria—it was a private visit under the pseudonym of Lord Renraw. There was an official welcome Oct. 5, but little else.

He purchased some ties here from a local clothier, still in business today.

In 1926 his younger brother, Prince George, caught a 1½-hour view of Victoria, Sept. 29, while the Empress of Russia was berthed en route to Vancouver from the Orient.

Then in 1927, the Prince of Wales and Prince George arrived together on Aug. 19 during a diamond jubilee tour of Canada. They stayed five days and enjoyed themselves at several dances and other social gatherings, as well as visiting veterans in Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Prince Henry, another of "the old" King George's sons, visited the city in 1929 en route home from the Orient. He came

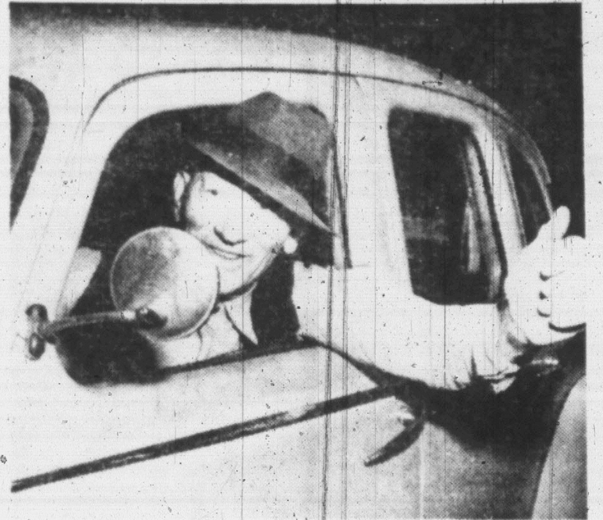
'WAGES LOW BUT GRUB CHEAP'

He Drove Express Worshipped by Kids



NICHOLAS BERTUCCI
. . . driver's licence still clean.

Nicholas Bertucci was born "in the house behind the boathouse where the ferry docked," May 19, 1884.

His father was born in Italy, his mother here.

Mr. Bertucci, Sr., operated the ferry boathouse in the old days at which boats docked carrying persons to the Indian reserve, where Johnson Street bridge is now. The boathouse was on the southeast side of the present bridge. It was sold in 1889.

Today's Mr. Bertucci, 1270 Gladstone, is one of seven brothers and five sisters, most born in the "house behind the house."

He was the third eldest.

Mr. Bertucci's story is the story of an earlier Victoria, one too easily lost.

At the age of 10 he worked "for W. J. Pendray"—well-known early businessman here—"for from $2 to $3 a week, wrapping soap, a good wage for a boy at that time."

'Ran a Rig'

His next job was with the defunct Vancouver Printing and Publishing Co., situated where the Coach Lines Depot has just been demolished.

"There was a church there before that."

Then "Nick," as he is known, went into the "transfer business."

In days past, this meant that you "ran a rig"—a horse and carriage affair that transported goods. Among his first jobs was transportion of personal belongings of Chinese, newly arrived in Canada at the Port of Victoria.

In those days it was quite a thing to "drive express." Kids followed the wagons, usually whoopin' and hollerin'.

Same As Taxis

While most of Mr. Bertucci's life has been spent "driving," he had a spell "decking" on coastal vessels, including the old Charmer which plied between here and Vancouver, leaving Victoria at midnight. He worked on her, "off and on," for years.

He summed up his career as "expressing and steamboating."

The express wagons worked almost the same way taxis do today; they lined up adjacent to the wharf, and as goods and passengers came off the ships, the "express" in line moved in and the man behind him moved up.

Then, Mr. Bertucci—a quick and alert man despite 75 years—joined the city. He worked civically 44 years.

"First, I dug ditches."

"And I was never late in all the 44 years."

He drove the first wagon and the first automobile for the repair shop of the city waterworks department, and has pictures to prove it!

"People complain about a squeak in their cars today? I had a chain-drive truck with solid tires. Wow!"

He drove horse-drawn vehicles for the city eight years before cars came in.

"I drive a small English make car now. And you know what? My driving licence is clean, even today."

And the present compared with earlier times here?

"I'd sooner have been in those days than today. Wages wasn't much but grub was cheaper."

Around 1890, one could buy "liver, heart and appendages of sheep" for 25 cents.

Round steak was 25 cents, and the butcher would ask "how thick do you want it cut?"

Chops were 25 cents a dozen; eggs two dozen for a quarter; "all the baloney you could eat" was 10 cents, and this lasted a couple of meals.

A beef roast was 50 cents, "and it would last two and three days in our large family," he recalled.

Saloons Galore

Saloons studded "every corner, and in-between."

Mr. Bertucci, who sold copies of the Victoria Times when he was aged 10—corner of Johnson and Douglas—"that was my spot, and I was a hustler"—often used to go into the bars and eat free.

"There was all the free food, if you bought a drink. But I was too young to do that. So I'd go in anyway, and make myself a meal. The bartenders would shout 'get out of here' but they were mostly good fellows, and I'd eat anyway.

"Sometimes, they shot seltzer water at me."

VICTORIA'S WEATHER RATES WITH THE BEST

In the sunshine and rainfall departments Victoria compares favorably with many cities in the world.

Victoria has 5.9 hours of sun each day, the same as Winnipeg and more than Vancouver, five hours; Seattle, 5.5 hours; Portland, 5.7; Toronto, 5.7; Glasgow, 3; London, Eng., 3.2 and, Guernsey, 5.2.

Victoria's annual rainfall of 27 inches is the same as Brighton's but less than Toronto, 32 inches; Seattle, 33; Belfast, 34; Cleveland, 35; Montreal, 40; Philadelphia, 41; Cardiff, 41; Boston, 43; New York, 44; Atlanta, 49; New Orleans, 57; and, Halifax, 57.

OF THE

VICTORIA DAILY TIMES

A newspaper is so much a part of home life and community life that one accepts it as a part of our very living. When the newspaper is broad in its news coverage and when it presents it in a clean and wholesome manner, it is not only accepted but welcomed into our homes. As the years pass we may cease to "weigh" the news reports and the writings of our favourite columnists when we have found that they are accurate and independent. In the judgment of many, many people The Victoria Daily Times has merited this confidence.

This newspaper is well known and respected across Canada. It is widely quoted by the other great newspapers of this country. Under the management and editorial direction of eminent newspaper men, its influence extends far beyond its home city.

Advertisers like to use newspaper advertising in Victoria because they have found it of tremendous force. On this newspaper's 75th Anniversary you as a reader may be interested in knowing how your newspaper ranks in the field of all Canadian daily newspapers. Of the ninety newspaper publishing establishments your newspaper ranks fifteenth in volume of national advertising, thirteenth in classified advertising, and twenty-first in total volume of advertising. In 1958 your newspaper was one of the eleven newspapers in all Canada that showed an increase in national, local and classified advertising.

You can be proud of your home newspaper—it is one more of the good and growing influences in British Columbia.

It has been our honor and pleasure to serve The Victoria Daily Times as national advertising representatives for several years.

PIONEER HEARING AID CO.

B. S. H. TYE
(wearing his Hearing Glasses)

1959 is an historic year for The Daily Times. It is also an historic year for the Victoria Hearing-Aid Company as it is now twenty-one years since Mr. B. S. H. Tye started the business.

The Victoria Hearing-Aid Company is the oldest established hearing-aid service on Vancouver Island. At the time of its inception Mr. Tye, a graduate teacher of lip-reading, had been teaching the subject for five years at Victoria Night Schools under the auspices of the Victoria Board of School Trustees. He had also helped organize the Victoria Club for the Hard-of-Hearing, of which he was secretary for seven years, during the time that the club had a very large membership. Mr. Tye, who was born in Victoria and has resided here all his life, is a grandson of the late Mrs. Hickman Tye who was one of the pioneers and arrived in Canada about November, 1851, and came to Victoria in 1857 where she spent the rest of her life.

Both Mr. Tye and his wife, who operate the business, wear hearing-aids and have done so for about thirty years. They have worn aids since the time these aids weighed several pounds until the present day when they weigh less than one ounce and are built into eyeglasses.

The last twenty-one years have proved to be historic years in the development of hearing-aids. 1938 was the year that the Victoria Hearing-Aid Company first started providing specialized service to the hard-of-hearing — 1959 is the year that their latest hearing-aids have reached the point of providing clear, natural hearing without distortion and without clothing noise (since they are headworn), so that the Victoria Hearing-Aid Company is able to help far more people than was possible before.

OUR OLDEST VETERAN

62 Years Working With Times

By AB KENT

Diamond anniversaries are nothing new to one member of the Times staff. He's even older than the paper.

For nearly 62 years, advertising man William George Lemm has been a business office trademark, his green eyeshade and black work sleeves growing more and more curious as through the years the office became more modern.

"Will" or "Bill," as he is known to hundreds of Victorians accustomed to seeing him swing on and off buses, offering a lusty greeting and gesture, marked his own 75th birthday March 12, 1958.

BILL LEMM
. . . Times' oldest employee

The Times has been Bill's life. He is its oldest employee and has been employed longer than anyone else on the staff.

In fact, Bill has never had any other job.

He was 15 when he finished his schooling at the old Victoria High and Boy's Central, once side by side between Fort, Yates and what was then School Street, now Ormond. Forthwith he went to Senator William Templeman, owner-publisher of the Times, and was hired as a junior clerk July 1, 1897.

In his years of service he worked his way full circle; through advertising ranks, became a record-making salesman and manager of the department, a post he relinquished many years ago.

Although he is far beyond retirement age, Bill stays on as a lineage clerk, determined to continue doing his bit as long as he can get to the office.

Had it not been for his father, Bill would have gone away to sea and perhaps become like Lemm, Sr. a deep-sea master mariner. But father gave up the sea when young Bill was 10 and it wasn't long before his thoughts of seafaring also were beached.

Bill's rather salty, often booming, swaggering manner suggests a man of the sea, but it must be inherited because Bill never made an ocean voyage. He is a stay-at-home Victorian, has been since he was four.

The Lemms took Bill to Toronto from his birthplace in London, England, at the age of three, coming here the following year. Bill has never been back east.

When he joined the Times the paper was in its third building, a three-storey structure on Broad Street which survived the disastrous blaze which wiped out the Five Sisters Block and David Spencer's department store nearly 50 years ago.

The Times Building, at Fort and Broad, was abuilding, and the paper moved in, Bill recalls in 1910.

"I worked in that building 40 years," he reflected, as he stared out across the bobbing heads of today's office staff.

"There were only five of us in the first office, the circulation manager, business manager and three clerks."

Bill nodded toward eight glass cubicles where classified advertising girls with telephone headsets bent to their unseen customers.

"There was no special classified advertising department. One man and a deputy handled it all."

What of the other departments, like accounting?

"Just a bookkeeper on high stool—no adding machines. They've got machines for everything now."

And of course, there was no promotion, no contests to boost circulation?

"They went in for none of that in the old days."

In fact, circulation had only 70 street and carrier boys who like everyone else on the staff

AND NOBODY HEARD OF RACIAL DISCRIMINATION

'Everyone Live d Much Closer To Community in Those Days'

She's a quiet, gentle little lady aged 75.

And she's against any type of racial discrimination, having lived adjacent to Negroes and Indians most of her life.

White-haired Mrs. Margaret Brayshaw, 1263 Bay, was born on Salt Spring Island the year the Victoria Times was founded.

On the island "we had quite a colony of colored persons — please don't call them Negroes as it doesn't seem right. They were fine people with beautiful voices."

'BOUGHT' OUT

Mrs. Brayshaw recalled that some of the colored inhabitants had "bought" their way out of slavery in the U.S.; others had escaped to Canada.

"There were more Indians in the old days when everyone lived much closer to the community than now," she said.

"We used to attend the potlatches on the Songhees reserve, sort of looking in from the sidelines, as it were."

MRS. BRAYSHAW
... went along for the ride

The dancing and other festivities would sometimes last a full week! And some dances alone lasted 24 unbroken hours!

DANCED ALL NIGHT

"They danced until they fell down."

Among other memories of Victoria's far-gone days, pleasant memories, is the old Japanese gardens "where we were served tea on the summer afternoons" overlooking the Gorge waters.

The gardens had delightful paths and trails for wandering, and were highly popular.

"I can recall once when I was there a child fell into the water, and was being carried towards a whirlpool. A young man, in his Sunday best, calmly leaped in, rescued the child, and walked away dripping without taking even time out for a 'thank you'."

Then there was Beacon Hill Park. When Mrs. Brayshaw was a girl, Oriental lanterns adorned the park at night, adding soft light for the numerous band concerts, or for lovers who walked hand-in-hand along the innumerable by-paths.

Mrs. Brayshaw lived on Salt Spring Island until aged 15, where her father farmed after emigrating from Salisbury, England, via the Crimean War.

The lady recollects that Salt Spring was "a paradise" for hunters and fishermen.

And if anyone was sick they had to row to Sidney for a doctor.

"I've made the trip many times, just for the sake of the trip."

The "doctoring," as she termed it, unless for something serious, was all attended to by local women.

"I remember my mother caring for sick persons on other islands. They would come for her in big Indian dugout canoes."

Mrs. Brayshaw, who marked her golden wedding last year, speaks with a meticulous and indefinable accent.

"This perhaps comes from a Mr. Cook, a very fine teacher and Oxford graduate who was on Salt Spring for 30 years. Perhaps I got it while studying with him."

Congratulations to the "Times"

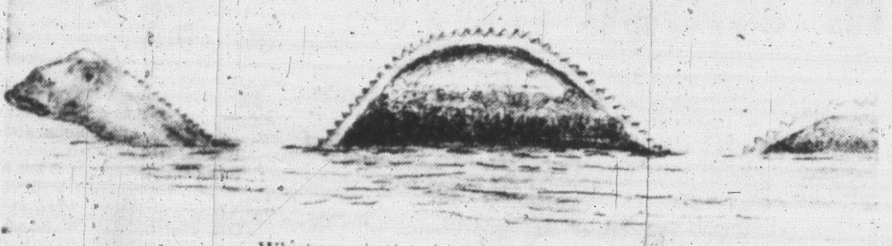
FORMER EDITOR CONFESSES AT LAST

The Inside Story of Cadborosaurus



What one artist thinks Caddy is like.

By ARCHIE WILLS
Former Times Managing Editor

Playing godfather to a sea serpent, a creature usually associated with nightmares, hard-drinking or asylums, has caused me to review pre-conceived notions of human behavior.

I have found a small group of dedicated souls who believe I have added something to our reservoir of science and society.

However, I am discouraged to record that most people think, that at least in this instance, I am "nuts."

CONCEALED PRIDE

For over a quarter of a century I have been watching, with concealed pride, the imprint which "Caddy" or to give him his full and honorable title, "Cadborosaurus", has made on the pages of newspapers and periodicals throughout the world.

He is the best known citizen of Victoria, titled or otherwise.

"Caddy" has served us well and, I can assure you, will continue to be here until the last of us have disappeared.

In view of this I feel he should be at once made a Freeman of the City of Victoria.

One morning things were dull in the newsroom of The Times. The police court reporter had returned from his beat without record of even a drunk. In his despair he blurted out:

"A couple of guys say they've seen a sea serpent off Cadboro Bay. What about that for a headline?"

"Alright go get it," snapped the news editor. "And no phoney stuff. Make those guys give their names to the story or we won't publish it."

In its edition of October 5, 1933, The Times announced the discovery of a sea serpent, tied to the names of Major W. H. Langley, clerk of the Legislature of British Columbia, and Fred Kemp, of the Provincial Archives. They had seen the sea serpent and were proud of it. Any ridicule by friend or foe would leave them unmoved.

Within the next few days other citizens of repute admitted they had seen this strange creature and The Times sponsors realized that they had a real sea serpent by the tail, even if not literally.

30 FEET LONG

The people said the serpent had a head resembling that of a horse or camel, it was about 30 feet long, had two coils, was olive green in color and part of the back was serrated like the teeth on a saw.

The coastline became dotted with people carrying cameras determined to get a picture of the sea serpent and claim the big money offered for one.

At this point it became evident that such a visitor needed proper identification to lift it from the ranks of the fictitious.

Many names were submitted and from them I selected "Cadborosaurus", which had all the dignity and halo of historic beasts, but, better still, it could be shortened to "Caddy".

This has proved of inestimable value to head-liner writers,

MART EGAN TRAPPED SMUGGLERS

The man who was to become one of the great war correspondents 60 years ago, then serve as civilian aide to General Pershing in France in 1918 and spend a quarter of a century as a top executive with the great financial house of J. P. Morgan & Co. in New York, worked as city editor of The Victoria Times in the early 90s.

He was Martin J. Egan, around whose magnetic name a legend was built in the newspaper world of Victoria. His exploits and brilliant reporting were held out as an example for all aspiring "cubs."

Mart Egan was born in California in 1872. He did some reporting in Portland and Seattle before coming to Victoria at the age of 19. He worked as a reporter for The Victoria Times but he was soon put in charge of the staff as city editor.

He was always alert for signs of a good story. A typical one which challenged his great power, which brought him headlines: "How Mark Egan and Colleague Trapped a Band of Smugglers."

BRILLIANT PLAN

A Victoria businessman was backing a gigantic ring which smuggled Chinese and opium into the ports of Seattle and Portland. Enormous profits were being made, some of which had to be paid to United States customs and immigration officials. A ship with an unknown number of Chinese and a large quantity of opium foundered off the coast and all were lost. A dramatic lawsuit developed in Victoria but all efforts to reveal the extent of the ring and those behind it failed.

Martin turned his talents to the story and as one commentator said: "Egan burst out with a plan the audacity and brilliance of which readily showed why he later rose to the rank of a really great newspaper correspondent."

The steamer Heytian Republic reached Victoria on her way to Seattle and hidden aboard her were quantities of opium and some Chinamen. Egan's plan went into effect and when the ship reached Seattle "the biggest shakeup in the history of U.S. customs service" was enacted.

RETURNED SOUTH

The captain of the Heytian Republic bluffed his way for a while but soon agents had unearthed the contraband. Men jumped overboard, agents in the pay of the ring rushed for cover but some later committed suicide or served jail terms.

In late 1895 Egan returned to San Francisco as a reporter for the Chronicle there. When the Spanish-American War came he was sent to Manila, arriving about five weeks after Dewey's naval victory but in time to cover the siege and capture of the city. He was then sent to the Boxer Rebellion in 1900, and after he returned home, he joined the Associated Press.

Under the AP affiliation, Egan organized, headed up and administered the entire reporting of the Russo-Japanese war on the Japanese side for a joint Reuters Associated Press combination. It was an effective outfit that continually "scooped" all the big news over other agencies, with spectacular results for the fall of Port Arthur and the sinking of the Russian fleet.

In 1908 Mart Egan became publisher of the Manila Times, which post he held for five years. An attractive offer from J. P. Morgan & Co. came to him during a visit to the United States and he headed up a department of public relations, which took him into the upper echelon.

RED CROSS POST

When the United States entered the First World War in 1917 Mart Egan became assistant to the head of the Red Cross and in 1918 General Pershing requested that he become his civilian aide, which he carried out with distinction until the American troops returned home.

Mart Egan continued to serve the Morgan interests until he was stricken with a heart attack which brought about his death in 1938.

Mart Egan's career was so expansive and intriguing that it is now being set down in a book, which is being so thoroughly done that it is requiring three years of research and writing. It will likely come off the presses in 1960.

JOHN RUSSELL
. . . "what a town"

He Recalls When Indians Burned Barns

Indians burning down his father's barns, "crabs as big as dinner-plates," and horse-and-carriage races around Beacon Hill are among the memories of early Victoria in the 75-year-old "store chest" of John Henry Russell, living at the Veterans' Hospital.

"Ah, what a town this used to be in the old days!" he said. "I've done my share of travelling around the world (he was a sailor for part of his life) but no place anywhere compares with Victoria."

John Russell was born May 12, 1884, in a low double-fronted frame house at Douglas and Broughton.

"Father was a farmer and part-time real estate man. I went to the Old Collegiate School first, then to school in England. Later, we had a farm — 760 acres at Strawberry Vale."

CHICKEN CHASE

That's where the Indians did the arson job. That was also where "coons used to run along the fence chasing the chickens and where we used to catch crabs big as dinner-plates and put 'em squealing in the pot for supper."

Mr. Russell was a city fireman for 32 years, serving out of halls at Burnside, Yates Street, Victoria West and downtown headquarters.

"Used always to get a couple of calls a day, we did. We used to have the horse-drawn truck then, of course. Biggest fire I remember was when the building where the Churchill Hotel is now burned to the ground."

Early in life John Russell became a good horseman — "but not so good as Father; he could beat us all any time" — and took up hunting and fishing.

The Russells used to listen to Beacon Hill band concerts on Sunday afternoons, which ended when more than a score of horse buggies had a hectic 10-minute race around the park.

OTHER REVELRY

House parties, dances "and all sorts of other revelry between Victoria and Nanaimo" also figured in the life of young John Russell, but later he subdued a bit and began to notice the flowers.

"My, but you should have seen the roses along Burnside. Millions of them, there were.

What he did care for quite a bit was deer, which used to wander daily and freely across the Russell farmstead "and many's the time I took the rifle off the wall and went out and shot supper."

Newsmen Don't Always Live in Ivory Towers

By HUMPHRY DAVY

A Victoria alderman once complained to a newspaperman that members of the press didn't understand community problems because they rarely took an active part in the social and cultural activities of their community.

His idea of a newspaperman was a person who lived in an "ivory tower" with a canny ability to report or criticize the lack of action in certain spheres of social endeavor.

He praised their promotion of educational and cultural projects, but he quickly added in a somewhat gruff voice: "You don't know how difficult it is to achieve these objectives because you are never in the act."

"You are on the outside — on-lookers," he explained. "You never come to grips with reality."

If the alderman had taken the trouble of looking up the membership cards of various clubs, associations and societies, he would have come to different conclusions.

EVERYONE IS ACTIVE

Every member of the Times editorial staff, from publisher to office boy, takes an active part in community affairs; in many cases an authority on his chosen field of endeavor.

Some members of the staff with families spend an average of three nights a week assisting various community projects. Their contributions to society has nothing to do with their daily work — it is voluntary.

Here are some examples of the part played by members of the Times staff in community affairs:

Stuart Keate, publisher, is a member of the Senate of the University of British Columbia; past president of the Boy Scouts Association of B.C. and the Yukon; a director of the Victoria and Island Publicity Bureau, a member of the Community Chest executive committee and serves on the advisory council of the Greater Victoria Art Gallery.

In addition, he is a director of the Victoria Symphony Society, Vancouver Festival Society, The Canadian Press, Inter-American Press Association and the Canadian Club, and member of Rotary.

He is also a director and a past president of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

Art Stott, associate editor, is president of the YMCA. In the past he was engaged with welfare activities with the John Howard Society.

Brian Tobin, associate editor, serves on the board of directors of the Family and Children's Service, the Community Welfare Council and Community Chest.

His outside activities also include the Canadian National Institute for the Blind and the Victoria Art Gallery.

Bessie Forbes, social editor, is one of the busiest women on the Times staff. Her present and past activities include director of the Victoria Woman's Canadian Club, past president of the Woman's Auxiliary to Family and Children's Service, past president of the Vancouver Island Women's Press Club and a member of the Canadian Women's Press Club.

POWER
tells the story of PROGRESS
in British Columbia

Close to 7,000,000 horsepower will be needed by 1978!

To keep pace with the tremendous growth of British Columbia, B.C. Electric's power capacity was increased more than 2½ times between 1948 and 1958, and has now reached over 1,000,000 horsepower.

But with more people needing more power for labour-saving devices in the home, with more industries creating more jobs and producing more products, this capacity will soon be doubled again.

Projects under way . . . the Port Mann gas turbine plant, Bridge River No. 2 hydro plant, and the Burrard Thermal Station . . . can produce the equivalent of over 1,700,000 horsepower, but will be sufficient to meet the power requirements of B.C. Electric's service area only until the mid-sixties.

The anticipated demand, in the relatively short time of 20 years, will total nearly 7,000,000 horsepower.

Investigation of all possible sources of power, including nuclear, are therefore going forward. British Columbia's large river systems promise the lowest-cost energy, and every effort must be made to ensure a start on one or more of these in the immediate future.

One Man For 500 Baskets

Everyone admires Victoria's hanging flower baskets but few visitors or residents know much about them.

The city has been famed for its 500 baskets since she celebrated her 75th anniversary of incorporation in 1937.

The baskets are maintained by one man operating from a right-hand drive tank truck powered by a take-off gear from the truck's motor.

As he drives along the curb he waters the basket, using an aluminum pipe wand shaped like a shepherd's crook.

The baskets are watered six days a week between 11 p.m. and 7.30 a.m.

Every two or three weeks liquid fertilizer is supplied in the form of three-pound ammophos (16-20-0) per 200-gallon tank.

SAFETY FACTOR

Weighing up to 70 pounds, the baskets are 15 inches wide and 12 inches deep. They are made of gauge galvanized wire on a nine-gauge frame. They hang 20 inches from lamp standards on iron arms placed 11 inches or higher from the sidewalk, usually parallel for safety.

Flowers need water and the hanging baskets are no exception. One of the secrets of their success has been the use of a size 34 tin wash basin attached beneath the basket. It is always kept full of water. To prevent loss of water over the sides a two-inch band of galvanized tin runs around the top of the basket like a collar.

Prepared in a greenhouse in April, the baskets stand on downtown streets from June until early October.

LAUGH WITH ERIC NICOL

I wandered lonely as a clod

ERIC NICOL

I hope I'm not too late to join the chorus singing the praises of spring. Spring is by all odds my favorite season, combining as it does the glorious burgeoning of nature with Father's Day.

Already I've been out in the garden, loosening the good earth so that the bugs can get a run at the roots. I wish you could see my daffodils this spring. In fact I wish I could see them.

Morning after morning I've stood in the front garden, waiting for that crowd, that host, of golden daffodils. So far nothing has come up but the postman.

The postman brought me a seed catalogue. I sat down on the front porch to read it, and as soon as I opened the first page a bug was walking across it, pointing and nodding.

I finally got tired of waiting for the daffodils and started digging around in the place where I'd planted about $10 worth of gorgeous bloom. The first bulb I dug up, a grub somewhat resembling Jerry Colonna stuck its head out of a round hole in the bottom as to say:

"Full up here, bud. Go find your own bulb."

When I had disinterred all the daffodil bulbs, and dumped them, grumbling to themselves, in the garbage-can, I consulted a flower expert. He informed me that my trouble was the narcissus fly, and that my garden was now alive with larvae that could be destroyed only by digging it up, spraying it with mustard gas and finally planting, at 12-inch intervals, land mines to be exploded whenever the police had cordoned off the block.

Denied the golden-throated trumpeting of the daffs, I turned my attention to the tulips. No need to tiptoe through the tulips this spring, by George. They already look as though they've been in the path of the last great Texas cattle drive.

I've seen some sick tulips in my time, but usually they look as though they all belong in the same ward. Not this spring. I've got tulips that are all big leaves and no bud; tulips all bud and no leaves, tulips whose stem has been tortured by a doubt as to which way is up.

Naturally I've sprayed these miserable, chewed-up plants with some of the latest insecticides. To the manufacturer these insecticides are lethal, but to the insects queued up, bibs tucked into their collar, around my tulips, the stuff is just so much French dressing. It makes the salad.

After I'd sprayed the roses with one product I took out a magnifying glass and studied its effect on one of the aphis. He was splashing it under his armpits and whistling—ever so faintly, of course—"It isn't raining rain, you know. It's raining violets."

I don't know what happened to our violets this spring. I don't mind them being shy but they're overdoing it. I have an idea they're coyly effacing themselves inside some slug.

There's still lots to be grateful for, however, during nature's annual renascence. This afternoon, for instance, I went out front and looked at my rock garden, and believe me it did my heart good to see that I hadn't lost a single rock.

So it's hey-nonny-nonny and in with the annuals, for I shall be Queen of the Mugs.

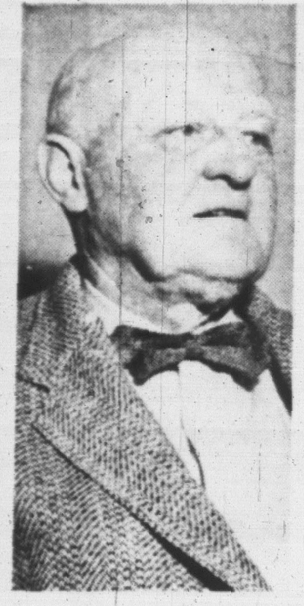
HE KNOWS, HE SWEPT IT OUT

Few Cars Raised Plenty of Dust



GEORGE S. BROWN
. . . people were happier

Long-time Victoria hardware store proprietor George Stairs Brown, 75, of 150 Douglas Street, usually thinks of dust when someone reminds him of the Victoria of the late 1800s.

"It used to come swirling into my father's hardware store at 1302 Douglas Street whenever a car went by," he chuckled. "And it was my job to sweep it out again.

"But there were only one or two automobiles in Victoria, in those days. In fact, I recall Dr. E. C. Hart (present city coroner) bought the first one. One day he came into our store and bought a funnel for it.

"Seemed he wanted it so he could pour water into the radiator. It cost him 25 cents, I remember."

But the dusty, inadequate roads of olden-time Victoria are not the only entries in Mr. Brown's book of nostalgia.

He recalls, too, the long hours of boating and swimming in what he terms "the pleasant, quiet Old Gorge," and picnics at the former Caledonian Grounds at Government and Simcoe Streets.

Relaxed Pace

Still clear in his mental scrapbook, also, are barbershops with mechanical hairbrushes in the windows, the May 24 bicycle races, Army manoeuvres and foot races in Beacon Hill Park, and the special downtown street shows for visiting royalty.

He remembers, too, the pace of life.

"It was relaxed—leisurely, almost. So much healthier than today's. People were happier then, and they seemed to live longer."

Another difference shows itself in the way the Victorians born near the turn of the century had to learn to entertain themselves—"there were no movies, you know. We went for long walks, or read books. Or just chatted with our friends. You stopped them in the street to talk. Now we are in too much of a hurry for such courtesies."

Not All Roses

But it wasn't roses all the way, apparently.

"There was a lot of drunkenness. There were so many saloons, don't you see? Oh yes, there was easily as much drunkenness in my youth as there is today."

But what was drunkenness when compared with the splendor of the parks and farmlands and woods untouched by real estate? And the enchanting electric streetcars shunting through town with cow-catchers at the front?

The schedules were easy-going, though.

"One conductor I knew used to stop for 20 minutes at one point and load wood on to his cow-catcher, then drop it off at his home. You couldn't do that now—the schedules are too tight. Anyway there are no cow-catchers."

Fireworks

Fireworks were a big thing in the Victoria of Mr. Brown's early years. So was cricket, much more so than now; and regattas at the Gorge.

And Chinese decorations in the streets—lovely, ornate affairs that some say will never be topped.

"And the peace of mind that comes from a day's work well done," Mr. Brown added with a sorrowful look along present-day bustling, noisy Douglas Street.

"You don't get that nowadays, somehow. What a pity the old days are no more."

COMPLICATED MACHINERY, INTRICATE SERVICES

Modern Newspaper Costly to Produce

By DON INGHAM

Every newspaperman in the world thinks his paper is the best, be it the New York Times or the London Times. We of the Victoria Daily Times are no exception.

For 75 years Times reporters and editors have been trying for perfection. We haven't achieved it yet, but we honestly believe that our paper compares favorably with others in cities of similar size in North America.

They Cost Money

There are bigger papers, richer papers, and papers with more influence. But it would be hard to find one in a city of comparable size Victoria with its suburbs that gives its readers the services the Times offers every day.

Most services are available only because of the investment of a lot of money in the best machinery available and the daily purchase of expensive services the Times feel are essential to the production of an up-to-date paper.

One of the newest and most obvious services is AP Wirephoto.

One of the many secondary services offered by the giant Associated Press news service, it puts the top news pictures of the day into the offices or subscribers the same day they are taken.

The operation is essentially simple. New York is the head of 25 networks with a total of 370 stations. Each day the list of available pictures is reviewed, and transmission times—to the minute—are assigned to the stations sending them on the wire.

As newsier pictures occur during the day, the lineup is amended accordingly.

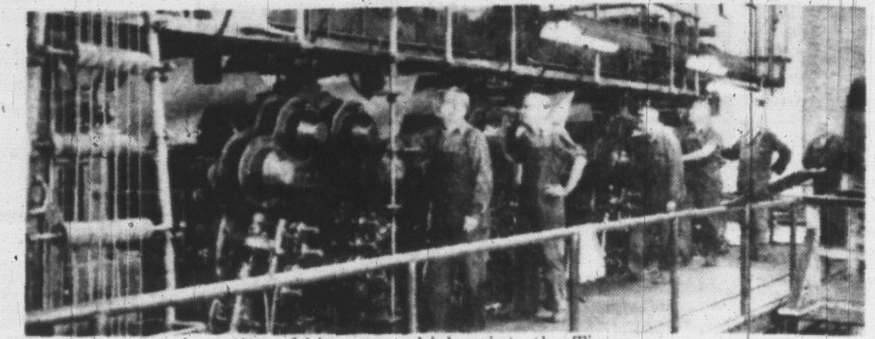
They are handled by placing finished prints, common 8 by 10-inch "glossies," on a transmitter which scans them with light and sends corresponding electrical impulses over the wires at the circuit.

Treated Paper

These impulses reach the receivers in the newspaper offices where they affect an especially treated paper on which the picture is reproduced directly and simultaneously as it is sent.

An automatic time clock starts the Times' machine at 4 a.m. It operates without pause until 11 p.m.

The drum carrying the paper past the "scanner" turns with painful slowness, and of course it seems to come to a dead stop when the news editor is particularly anxious for the picture being printed.



A section of big press which prints the Times.

But no matter how much or how little time the news editor has, the average picture takes eight minutes for transmitting.

Victoria and Vancouver, incidentally, are the only Canadian cities west of Toronto taking the service.

It is not actually new. In 1951 the Times subscribed to AP wirephoto, but the system required a man full time to develop the pictures.

Worst, reproduction was poor, and news editors hesitated to use them when clear, sharp, lively pictures taken by staff photographers were available.

The new system, which uses a process called facsimile, has been much more satisfactory and has helped tremendously in the presentation of vital news stories. Like other pictures, the wirephotos must go through the photo engraving process which reproduces them on metal in a form which can be printed by ink on paper.

Teletypes

Backbone of the foreign (anything beyond Goldstream) news is the teletype service offered by Canadian Press, Associated Press, and United Press International, which bring news from all parts of the world just as fast as it can be written and transmitted from the agencies' thousands of offices.

Their function is well known, but there are two other services used by the Times which are based on that ingenious machine, the teletype.

Closed Circuit

One of them is the small closed circuit which links the city hall press room, Legislative Buildings press gallery, and the Times newsroom.

No longer do city hall and press gallery reporters have to write their stories, then send them by courier to the Times, or dictate a story by telephone to the "home office."

Today they sit at the teletype machine, write their story and know that as they are typing it is being received simultaneously on the city editor's machine.

Handling of copy is speeded up immeasurably. So are the reporters' problems. No longer can they nip out of their of-

. . . Political Storm Over Graving Dock

Beavan's unhappy regime which came to grief largely over its weird handling of the business of constructing a graving dock at Esquimalt.

This question had been at issue for more than 10 years with the mainland bitterly opposed to spending public funds for such a purpose in such a tiny community as Esquimalt—it boasted 164 voters and two members—when so much was required by the fast-growing mainland centres.

The manifold troubles of the graving dock were all monetary and focused on the question of who would pay. In the end the Dominion and Imperial governments agreed to finance the project, estimated with great optimism, to cost not more than $500,000.

British Columbia's still youthful legislature, wishing not to be left out of a deal that would involve anchoring the Imperial naval base firmly at Esquimalt, offered to provide the cement. This was a mere bagatelle, the members of Premier George Walkem's government were told, involving an outlay of not more than $3,500.

Alas for such amateurish estimates. Mr. Walkem's ministry in 1882 discovered to its dismay, what so many other governments have since found to their sorrow; the estimate was a fairy tale.

A Fairy Tale

Instead of a mere 100 tons of cement the job of finishing the dock used up almost 7,000 tons of cement and the cost approximated $250,000!

Mr. Walkem weathered the political storm until May 23, 1882, when he was appointed to the judiciary, happily dropping his mantle of office on the shoulders of Robert Beaven who had held the post of finance minister.

By the simple expedient of not calling the House together until forced to do so in January, 1883, Premier Beaven prolonged the life of his minority government to have it smothered in a vote of want of confidence of 16 to 8.

Thus William Smithe assumed the reigns of government and inherited the political sins of omission of his predecessors. His ministry determined to sweep away in a few weeks the accumulation of years of discord. And he succeeded remarkably well.

Times Prodded

The graving basin, thanks to a great deal of prodding by The Times, was taken over by the Dominion and completed in 1887; the controversial Esquimalt & Nanaimo Railway was finished and the last spike driven at Cliffside, Shawnigan Lake, on August 13, 1886, by Prime Minister Sir John A. Macdonald.

In the meantime Victoria's citizens, taking political discord in their stride, were building securely and firmly a city that was freely forecast would be second only to San Francisco in commercial importance.

It did not attain the stature or eminence of its great friendly neighbor at the Golden Gate but it set a pattern from which it has not deviated much even to this day.

He Was Impressed

This is how it impressed the famous American historian Hubert Howe Bancroft in writing of Victoria:

"The capital contained at least 12,000 inhabitants, and in manufacture and commerce ranked among the foremost cities of the coast.

"In the excellence of its highways and drives Victoria is unsurpassed, well macadamized roads, built during the colonial period, extend for miles through dense forests of pine, across stretches of green meadowland, over undulating downs, and skirted by pebbly beaches along the margins of its bays."

Bancroft had great admiration for the pleasant city homes, surrounded as they were, by flower gardens and expanses of velvet lawns.

It pleased him also that Victoria had the courage or perhaps it was indifference to avoid the "grid system" of street layout.

Followed Land

"Viewed from any of the neighboring eminences, as from the hill near Government House, from Mount Tolmie, from Church Hill or from the top of Pandora Avenue, the city, which was laid out, not in rectangular blocks," he wrote, "but, following the configuration of the land, presents a beautiful appearance."

Not all writers have been as observant as Bancroft and some have been less kind, suggesting even, that Victoria's streets simply followed the cowpaths of its fur-trading days.

Bancroft also noted that Victoria's citizens "were not disposed to imitate the example of the Pacific coast metropolis (San Francisco) where presided the genius of unrest . . ."

Instead he was deeply impressed by the quiet dignity of Victoria's merchants . . . "walking to their stores at 9 or 10 o'clock, closing often at 4, after a long luncheon." In which the historian abdicates to the man who delights in leisure and substance.

His merchant opening his store at "9 or 10 o'clock" must have been very unlike the men who were building sound and solid commercial establishments in the city by dint of long hours and constant application.

He would not have seen W. J. Pendray, justly proud of his soap works and paint factory, strolling at mid-morning to his office. And he might well have spotted Mr. and Mrs. Pendray in long June evenings lovingly shaping the gardens of their fine home on Belleville Street.

Nor would anyone have caught C. E. Redfern opening his jewelry store any later than 8 o'clock on any morning, except Sunday.

Fletcher's Store

Thomas C. Fletcher, who came out to Barkerville in 1862, gave up gold mining as unprofitable, by 1884 had a well-established music store that was to be carried on by three of his four sons. It served three generations of Victorians.

Two young lawyers, James Stuart Yates and George Jay, had opened a law office with Edwin Johnson. They left a firm imprint on the city of their adoption.

. . . Seemed No End to Victoria's Expansion

But none left such imprints as Mr. and Mrs. Richard Maynard whose fine, clear cabinet family photographs held proud places in hundreds of portrait albums in Victoria homes.

Down by Rock Bay busy sawmills were cutting lumber for busy home builders and the big windships from Eureka, California no longer creamed around Race Rocks with deck loads of sweet-smelling redwood boards. Young Joseph A. Sayward, a native son, had married in 1884 and was carrying on his father's successful sawmill while a short distance away Taylor's mill was bidding for its share of the growing lumber business.

Mighty Proud

Just below Government Street on the south of Yates the Bank of British North America was doing business in its fine new stone building and manager John Goodfellow was mighty proud of the stability of his Victoria branch.

The city's second bank was the Bank of British Columbia, with W. C. Ward, manager.

There was need for sound banking institutions for down along Wharf Street business was conducted on solid lines even if the interiors of the stone buildings were pretty dark. But then who needs bright light in such fine establishments as Mr. E. B. Marvin's or Peter McQuade's ship chandleries? Both had their back doors practically right on the inner harbor to better serve their maritime customers.

And a marvel was Rithet's wholesale business dealing in all sorts of imported stuffs; fruits from California, vegetables, bananas from the West Indies and, of course, vegetables and fruits from British Columbia farms.

Roadway Roped

Out toward the Outer Wharf—that was Rithet's too, and once a year the roadway had to be roped off to maintain ownership—David R. Ker and his partner, Mr. Brackman, were building a big mill to produce more of their "B & K" rolled oats than their first little plant out in Saanich could turn out.

It seemed there was just no end to Victoria's expansion as new churches, schools, hotels, factories like Weiler Brothers fine furniture factory on James Bay were springing up as fast as workmen could build them.

Johnson Street was filling up fast as smart businessmen saw its certain future as the E & N Railway neared completion and ships from all seven seas berthed at Victoria's docks.

It looked like Victoria, as Kansas City in the song: "had gone about as fur as it could go."

"DO YOU NEED A LARGE CASH INCOME FOR A LIMITED PERIOD OF TIME? The Accelerated Income Plan of All-Canadian Compound Fund has been created for this purpose."

"For example—if you had invested ten thousand dollars in November of 1954 you could have received one hundred dollars every month since then and still have had a balance of over eleven thousand dollars. For complete details of this Plan please call me at EV 4-6731 or at my office, 620 View Street."

1884—The Victoria Daily Times began publication and a man signing himself Indignant Britisher wrote a letter to the editor viewing with alarm the rising rate of taxation in Oak Bay and asking where will it all end?

1885—The last spike in the Canadian Pacific Railway main line was driven at Craigellachie, B.C., and the first train east carried a delegation from Victoria to Ottawa demanding lower freight rates.

1886—Vancouver was destroyed by fire, but the event was largely ignored in Victoria, where most of the citizens felt it was typically vulgar of Vancouver to get so burned up.

1887—The first interprovincial conference was held in Quebec, where the various provinces discussed mutual problems. A representative from Victoria attended, but had nothing to say, it being regarded as rather infra dig to discuss one's problems in public.

1888—Ratepayers of Saanich voted against a money bylaw to improve the sewer system.

1889—Ratepayers of Saanich voted to impeach the reeve and councillors because they failed to improve the sewer system.

1890—A logger in the Sooke area was about to cut down a fine cedar tree when he slipped and fell, breaking his leg. The logger was somewhat annoyed at the time, little knowing the accident had spared the tree from which the World's Tallest Totem was to be carved.

1891—The third Dominion census was taken, showing a population of 4,833,239. Of these, some were men, some were women, and some were RN (ret) living in Duncan.

1892—On July 22, a boundary convention was entered into between Canada and the United States. This followed a heated discussion between an American and the official Vancouver Island representative. The American shouted "Fifty-four-forty or fight," and the Vancouver Island representative replied: "Oh, I say now, really, old man, what?" This led to the Alaska panhandle.

1893—Elmer Fydd failed to swim Juan de Fuca Strait.

1894—The second Colonial Conference was held at Ottawa. Despite the objections of several colonials, the colonials living in Victoria were given exclusive rights to be a Little Bit of Olde England.

THE GREAT ELMER FYDD STRAIT SWIM

1895—A woodpecker built a nest in the top of a tree in Sooke. Soon a strong wind blew the nest out of the tree, which is why there are no holes in the World's Tallest Totem.

1896—Nothing much happened this year, it being the off-season, like.

1897—Queen Victoria celebrated her Diamond Jubilee but failed to find the Times diamond.

1898—The Yukon district was established as a separate territory. Thinking this a jolly fine idea, the citizens of Oak Bay decided to separate from the rest of Vancouver Island, and lived happily ever after.

1899—The South African war started, and many Island residents went to war. (This was when you WENT to war. Now war comes to you.)

1900—On New Year's eve a reveller watched a strange bird flying over Government Street, and rushed to the Times office, shouting: "I have just seen the tern of the century."

1901—The Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York visited Canada, and Bing Crosby caught a 76-pound Tyee near Campbell River.

1902—The first wireless message was sent from Canada to the United Kingdom. It read: "Dear Uncle Cholmondely Canada indeed land of opportunity untold riches pioneering spirit all that sort of thing can you advance me 100 quid for fare home?"

BUS SERVICE TO MAINLAND VIRTUALLY DIRECT

Long-Time Objective Achieved

Within the 75th year of publication of The Times, the equivalent of a direct bus transportation system to the mainland was inaugurated.

Dating back to the earliest days of the paper has been the demand that the terms of Confederation should be fulfilled to provide the B.C. section of the western road right to Victoria.

Many years ago the pioneers hoped that this could be done by bridging Seymour Narrows over Ripple Rock (the rock which was blown up last year to remove a menace for sea navigation).

Many experts have said that because of the rugged mainland coastline such a road was impractical to connect with the bridge.

The substitute has been provided by Vancouver Island Coach Lines working with the Canadian Pacific Railway to create in effect a bus service to the chief metropolis of the province.

IN TWO STAGES

The coach lines service runs to Nanaimo and then by ferry to Vancouver and thence to the downtown section of that city.

The firm which does this was established 31 years ago to set up long-range transportation on Vancouver Island.

In 1928, the first year of its operation, Island Coach operated two round trips daily between Victoria and Nanaimo.

Today it offers 10 trips daily, and by closer co-ordination with steamer sailings between Nanaimo and Vancouver has reduced the overall Victoria-Vancouver travelling time to four hours.

In addition there are four round trips daily between Nanaimo and Campbell River and four round trips between Nanaimo and Port Alberni.

Traffic reached its peak in 1958 when the company carried 42,566 passengers between Victoria and Vancouver 10,863 in July.

432 ROUTE MILES

In its first year Island Coach operated 32 buses over 320 route miles. Today it has 62 modern units, including the now famous non-stop Island Limited, and covers more than 432 route miles.

When the Islander Limited service was launched after the war, bus travel had slipped to a low level because of wartime travel restrictions. The public had to be re-convinced that bus travel was fast, comfortable, safe and clean.

So Island Coach Lines officials took a leaf from the operating practices of those who successfully charged an extra fare to ride on the "Super Chief" of the Santa Fe and the "Twentieth Century Limited" of the New York Central.

They cautiously announced a "no extra fare," reserved seat single stop service between Victoria and Nanaimo.

The Islander Limited was an immediate success.

SHOWED POSSIBILITY

"It showed what a bus could do," said Conway Parrott, general manager, who joined the company in 1932.

During its first eight months of operation the Islander Limited carried 12,221 passengers. Now, with waiting lists at all terminals for Islander seats, the fast scheduled coaches carry more than 120,000 fares annually.

Linked with the expanded service of the Islander is the system-wide teletype service making immediate communication possible between depots.

Passengers can thus make reservations from any Islander depot to all main line points.

"In 14 years of service, the Islander has never missed a trip regardless of weather or road conditions," Mr. Parrott said.

To go back to the beginning . . .

In 1928 Victoria newspaper publisher J. S. H. Matson created Island Coach by welding together small pioneer bus and jitney services radiating out of Victoria to neighboring municipalities.

ABSORBED OTHERS

These were gradually expanded to include Gray Lines operating between Victoria and Nanaimo; Union Stages operating between Nanaimo, Port Alberni and Courtenay, and Saanich Municipal Transportation in service between Victoria and Lake Hill.

In 1955 Victoria industrialist Harold Husband bought a controlling interest in Island Coach Lines and it has since been entirely locally owned and operated.

"Every year since, we have led Canada in the acquisition of new equipment," Mr. Parrott said. "We were one of the first companies to buy the new air-ride coach which literally rides on air and does away with springs.

"We are proud of our service. The many complimentary letters we get from tourists far and wide convince us the job has been well worth doing."

We Were First in B.C. To Start as Daily Paper

By B. A. McKELVIE, Noted B.C. Historian

Seventy-five years of continuous publication is a long time for a Western newspaper. The Victoria Times in achieving this distinction may look back with pride, and also with sorrow, for it has seen many ambitious journals disappear.

Of the daily publications of the present in the province, the Times is exceeded in age only by its colleague and rival through the years The Colonist, and barely by The British Columbian of New Westminster. It may, therefore, fairly claim to be the third in seniority.

The Times, in another respect, differs from all its fellows, inasmuch as it started as a daily when it commenced publication in June of 1884. At that time The Colonist was, of course, a daily, and so was the Columbian, but both of these papers had started in the weekly field.

The British Columbian had started in New Westminster, closed in that city in 1868 and moved to Victoria where it was printed for some time. Then it was abandoned, and its founder, John Robson, worked on The Colonist. It returned to New Westminster and reappeared under direction of Robson, and his brother, David, in 1882.

The Nanaimo Free Press had been appearing for fourteen years in the weekly field before it came out as a daily in 1888.

TEAM WORK

It's Been Long, Happy Association

When university student John Manning began last year to write his "Around the World" travel column for the Times, it marked a fourth-generation association between two local firms.

John's great grandfather on his mother's side founded the B.A. Paint business in the same era as the Times. His grandfather, Carl Pendray, as mayor of Victoria, was a close friend and associate of Times' editor Benny Nicholas.

In 1954 Bapco and the Times teamed up to sponsor Flo Chadwick in the first of the Strait swims. Bapco assisted the "Tallest Totem" project by providing a special formula paint for the job.

After John Manning, son of Bapco vice-president Fred Manning, had won the Benny Nicholas Scholarship at Victoria College, he was hired to write his world travel column.

On his return, the Times sponsored a series of lectures by the young globe trotter which raised about $2,000 for local charities. So the friendship engendered by the two community-minded firms so many years ago carries on into a new era.

GIVE-TAKE HARMONY ENJOYED

The Victoria Times staff is unionized throughout; all departments but in its history has never suffered a work stoppage or failure of publication due to a labor dispute.

Mechanical staffs such as the typographical group, stereotypers and pressmen have held contracts for many years, the typos being one of the oldest unions on the continent.

In more recent years the editorial staff, business office employees and mail room employees have become unionized and negotiate contracts each year with the firm.

In 1957 the company voluntarily established a pension plan to cover all employees, on a contributory basis.

Both management and union spokesmen have said: "We bargain right down to the wire but we always manage to end up friends."

HIS WAS THE STEADYING HAND

Late General Manager With Times 44 Years

Outstanding characteristic of the late Robert G. Thomson ("Bob" to everyone who knew him) was his unhurried approach to everything he did.

He never raised his voice and he never lost his temper.

In the 44 years he was with the Times he steadied it through depressions, two wars, departmental expansion and in his position as business maneger and general manager, several changes of ownership.

He never faltered in his belief that it was the finest newspaper of its size in Canada and that the people who worked for it were "the best in the world."

HE WAS TEACHER

He had a practical knowledge of the work of every department and the patience to impart that knowledge to any member of the staff who was willing to listen and to learn.

One of the things he loved to do was to take a new employee on a personally conducted tour of the plant. It was never hurried. It might continue, as opportunity presented, over a period of days. When it was finished, the "youngster" was sure to know something of the mechanics of bringing out a newspaper.

Bob Thomson was an idealist with a stubborn belief in the goodness of human beings. In his quiet way he had a keen sense of humor and he loved a joke. Often he would draw members of the staff into his plans to play a prank on someone and he would go to endless trouble to make sure those plans did not go wrong.

If he was alive today, Bob would probably say, with a twinkle in his eyes, that fate pushed him into newspaper work.

NANAIMO-BORN

He was born and educated in Nanaimo, son of pioneer residents of that city.

As a lad he watched the ships from far lands dock in Nanaimo harbor and he leveloped a longing to see the world.

To make this wish come true he had to have money, so he tossed up his first job as a messenger in his home town and travelled south to work for the city of Ladysmith when it was first incorporated. From there he soon switched to the E. & N. Railway, moving up from car checker to cashier with this company in five years.

Next job he held was time and storekeeper on construction of the Malahat and for a time he was at Port Mann when they were clearing that site.

When he was 22 he had saved enough money to see Australia and he came to Victoria to wait for passage.

Here's where fate stepped in.

WAIT AND WORK

The boat for Australia was not due to leave for several weeks and the young Bob, being of thrifty Scottish stock, decided to make the wait profitable.

He took what was to be a temporary job with the Victoria Daily Times. That was in 1911.

Boats for Australia came and went regularly for many years after that but Bob Thomson

R. G. (BOB) THOMSON
. . . always quiet

never gave them another look. He had printer's ink in his blood.

By 1919 he had progressed from junior clerk and collector up through the business office of the old Times at the corner of Fort and Broad Streets, to the position of office manager.

When the Bell interests purchased the newspaper he moved with it from the downtown office to the present Douglas Street offices.

TO GENERAL MANAGER

In 1951 he was named assistant general manager of Victoria Press Ltd. and in February, 1955, was elevated to the general manager's chair.

Two months later, after a comparatively short illness, he died, at the age of 66.

His kindly manner and his sincere interest in the personal problems of those who worked under him brought him the respect of every member of the staff, and made for him, a host of life-long friendships.

There are men and women working in various departments of the Times today who look back to the years when Bob Thomson's unhurried manner and quiet voice instilled in them the feeling of belonging to a newspaper that in his own words "will never be headed as long as we pull together as a team."

ONE OF FEW ON CANADIAN PAPERS

Man, Wife Formed Strong Team

By ELIZABETH FORBES
Times Women's Editor

Colorful highlight in the history of the Victoria Daily Times is the story of Nancy Hodges — today acclaimed one of Canada's outstanding women.

"Our Nancy" was born in London, Eng., and came to Canada in 1912 with husband Harry. They settled in Kamloops, B.C., where they published the newspaper, Inland Sentinel, for several years. Later they moved to Victoria where Harry Hodges joined the editorial staff of the Times.

During all her years on the Times Mrs. Hodges was part of one of the few husband-wife teams serving on newspapers in Canada.

Through 33 years with the paper Mr. Hodges started as legislative reporter, became editorial writer, associate editor, then editor in 1945 until his retirement in 1950.

Mr. and Mrs. Hodges now live at 2019 Runnymede in Oak Bay for most of the year when Mrs. Hodges' Senate duties do not require her presence in Ottawa.

The late Ben Nicholas, Times editor of that day, started Mrs. Hodges on her career, when he sent her to the coal mining town of Ladysmith, 40 miles north of Victoria, as an unofficial ambassador of good will.

LADYSMITH RIOTS

Ladysmith had just come through a disastrous struggle between miners and coal interests, with riots and even a home made bomb or two. Newspaper reports had been none too favorable to either side and feeling ran high on this matter.

Nancy Hodges went alone to the tiny town representing the "hated" press.

There are still those living in the Ladysmith district who will tell you of the tall young woman with the husky far-reaching voice who made them like her and the paper she represented in spite of themselves.

This was Nancy Hodges' first experience in winning people through her personality and a gift of repartee for which she was later to become famous in the political arena.

'COME BACK'

While she was in Ladysmith, Ethel Bruce, then social editor of the Times, resigned and Ben Nicholas sent word — "come back to Victoria and go to work."

For years after that, Nancy Hodges was a working newspaperwoman, at her desk at 7:30 a.m. each day, reporting weddings and obituaries, interviewing interesting women, covering women's meetings and theatrical events.

She was the only woman on the editorial staff in those days. Her office was merely a corner of the big city room in the old Times building at Fort and Broad Streets.

LONE WOMAN

There is no doubt that the characteristics "dominant, opinionated, unafrafd and fearless in debate," that were later described in reports of her political career, were fostered in the hectic atmosphere of that city room. Arguments and debates were every day occurrences once the paper was "put to bed," and one lone woman would have to develop opinions of her own and stick to them, if she was to be heard.

It was in those days, too, that Mrs. Hodges first took her place in club life in Victoria and on special women's committees, formed to work for betterment of civic conditions and for better laws for women and children.

In 1937 a group of citizens persuaded her to run for the Legislature. She was defeated and, in her own words, "wrote the whole thing off to experience and went back to my typewriter."

FIRST WOMAN

In 1941, however, the same group of citizens asked her to run again. This time she was elected with the honor of being the first woman Victoria had ever sent to the Legislature.

In 1945 and again in 1949 she was re-elected.

In February, 1950 came another "first." She was named Speaker of the Legislature, first woman to hold such a position in the British Commonwealth. She held that position until a change of government in 1952.

During this time she was presented with an honorary doctor of laws degree from the University of British Columbia.

TO SENATE

Further honor came to Mrs. Hodges in November, 1953, when she became the fifth woman in history to be appointed to the Senate of Canada.

Nancy Hodges retired as social editor of the Times in 1944, continuing only to write her column "One Woman's Day" which had a large following among woman admirers in this region. Her last column, number 2,550, appeared in the Times on the eve of her departure for Ottawa to take up her new responsibilities as a Senator.

In this way she made a name for herself in two professions simultaneously, journalism and public service.

In addition she found time to become a leading representative of women's organizations over a wide and diversified field.

SHIPBUILDING DATES FROM EARLIEST DAYS

Victoria's shipbuilding and repair industry dates from the city's earliest history when, for many years, it was the only seaport on the North Pacific coast.

Historically the industry is associated with the launching of the first ship ever constructed in this part of the world, launched at Friendly Cove, Nootka Sound, Vancouver Island, in 1788. The area began its development when the British Navy established its base at Esquimalt in 1865.

TRAGIC SCENE RECALLED

In this street car 55 people out of 124 passengers met death when, on a sunny May day in 1896 Point Ellice Bridge crumpled. Warning of the weakness of the bridge had been given when its decrepit wooden spans buckled on several occasions. The Times joined citizens in urging the City Fathers of the day to act on those warnings but they went unheeded until the tragedy. The day was a holiday and virtually the whole citizenry took the trip out to Gorge Park for the day's festivities, most of them by way of the Point Ellice bridge. Crowded horse-drawn conveyances and street cars maintained a constant flow of traffic taxing the old structure beyond its limits. Then tragedy struck when the car pictured above jammed with 124 holiday-makers proved the last straw. The bridge span snapped and the car plunged to destruction. Their numbers are dwindling but many Victorians survive to remember one of the city's worst fatalities.

Saloons, Low Prices —That's How Pioneer Recalls Early Victoria

Victoria of the 1880s, in the still-vivid memory of 75-year-old Mrs. Florence Goodman, 2122 Cook, was a city of saloons, shackles and butter at three pounds for 59 cents.

"The saloons were on every corner," she said, chuckling, looking out of her apartment window on to the rooftops of a city that was mainly brushland in her youth.

"The shackles, well, they were on the ankles of the prison chain gang going to work every day on the old Government House. A man with a rifle over his shoulder walked alongside. My, but they were fierce-looking."

Spry, humorous-eyed Mrs. Goodman remembers, too, the crashing of the Point Ellice bridge under an overloaded streetcar. And picking lilies in the Uplands area; and losing wayward coins between the cracks of the old wood bridge that was eventually replaced by the Causeway outside the Empress Hotel.

MRS. FLORENCE GOODMAN
. . . slow, satisfying

$15 a Month

"Those were good days," she said. "Slow and satisfying."

One of four daughters of a Henley-on-Thames, England, carpenter, Mrs. Goodman came to Victoria when she was five years old.

The family lived first on Government Street, then moved to Spring Ridge, finally to Market Street. Florence Goodman attended the old Kings Road School and eventually North Ward School.

"After that I had to work," she said. "I took a job as salesgirl with Spencer's department store and started to learn millinery. Paid $15 a month, I was, and it always seemed enough.

"You could buy things cheap in those days. Liquor for instance, cost 50 cents a flask. The men used to buy it from a place where Cross' Meat Market is now (Douglas near Yates.) But meat, bread—everything was easy to get for a few cents."

Pleasures were cheap, too. "We used to go to the drill hall on a Saturday night and play basketball. Or just walk around talking to people.

Simple, Clean Fun

"Sometimes a group of us would go and listen to the band concert at the old Dallas Hotel at Ogden Point, or pick lilies, or gather round a piano and sing.

"It wasn't much, but I reckon we got as big a kick out of that simple clean fun as people get out of all the much more complicated amusements these days."

Victoria of three generations ago was different in other, more discernible ways, too.

"There were hardly any buildings to speak of. It was all bush. I remember my father used to go to work on the Empress Hotel. And the old wood-burning locomotives (Victoria to Sidney) ran almost right downtown in those days. And you know where the Hudson's Bay Co. is now? Well, that used to be what we called the "iron church"—St. John's, Anglican.

She Loves Victoria

"We used to have a lot of fun. I had plenty of friends and we'd go around and chat with our neighbors and well, things were so much simpler then. Now I take in a show once in a while. But that's nothing to going for a bicycle ride, or for tea at the old Japanese Garden at the Gorge, as I used to."

Yes, the old days were simpler. But they were more difficult in other ways, as Mrs. Goodman will quickly admit. A steady income was not always easy to come by, for one thing.

"But I've always loved Victoria," Mrs. Goodman said, staring out over the rooftops again. "I've never been further than Seattle or Vancouver, and I'm glad. Victoria has always been home."

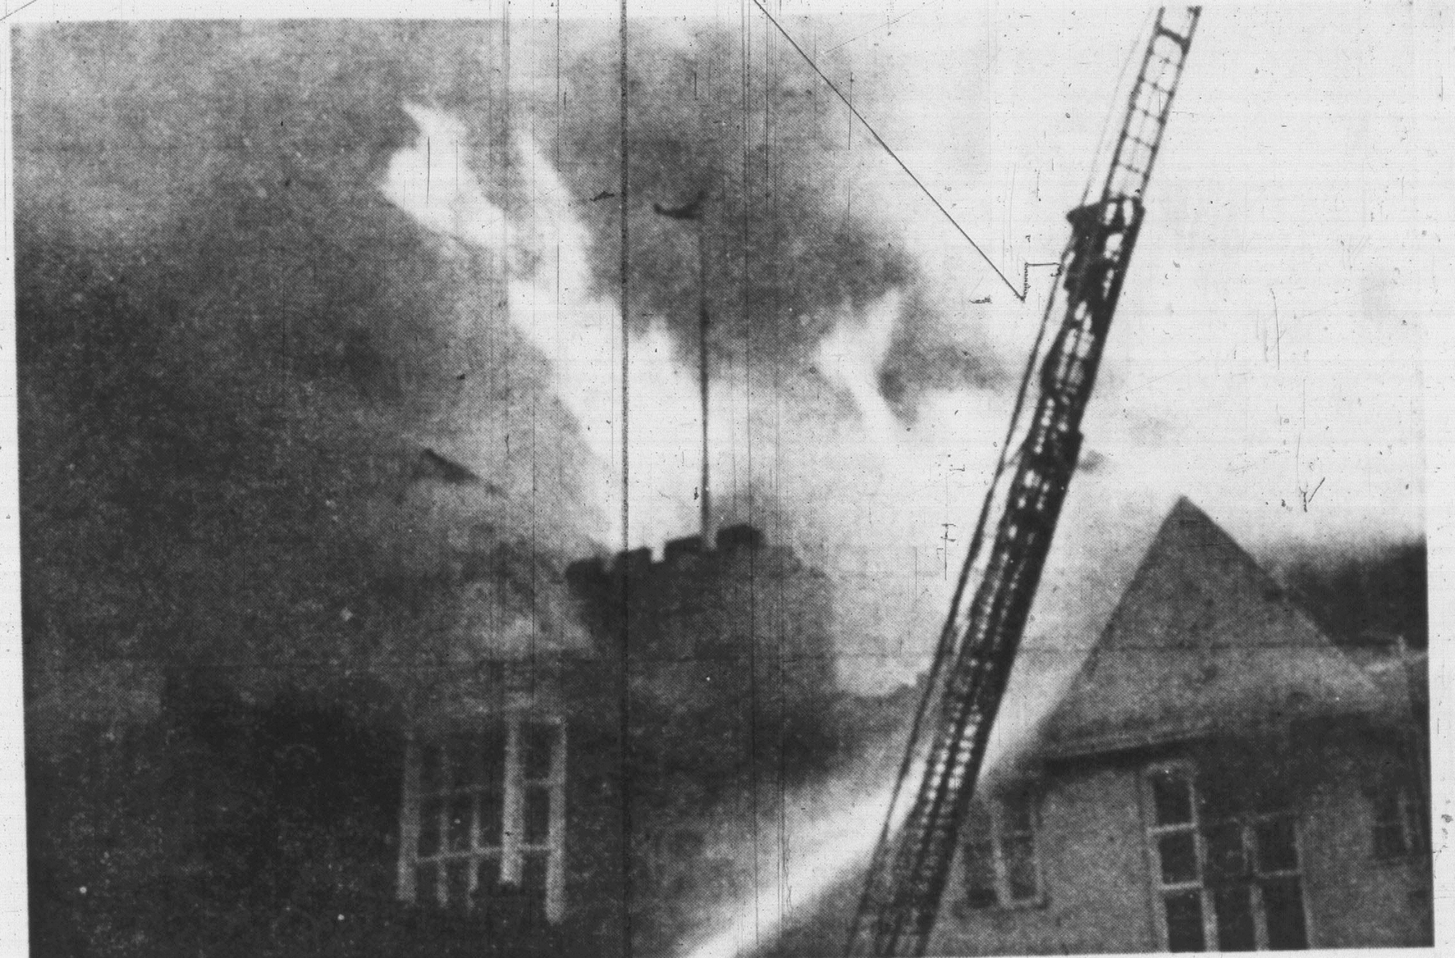
A Fire Created a Dawn Spectacle



Although there have been many spectacular fires in Victoria since the Times began publication, one of the most sensational was that which destroyed Government House on April 15, 1957. After Lieutenant-Governor Frank Ross, Mrs. Ross, and household staff escaped in night attire, the flames lit up the dawn sky all over the city. On this page is reprinted the picture the Times blazoned on its front page showing the fury of the fire just as daybreak came, with the flag still flying. Below is a photo from almost the same spot showing the new $1,600,000 Government House which has taken its place.

PROHIBITION IN FULL SWING

Barely 500 Places to Get Drink

1911—I was born.

1912—This year followed fairly quickly after 1911.

1913—A young swain in Sooke was about to carve a heart and his beloved's initials in a tall tree when his beloved told him to drop dead, already, which is why there is no heart carved on the World's Tallest Totem.

1914-1918, inclusive. The war to end all wars failed to end all wars.

1919—Prohibition was in full swing and there were barely 500 places in Victoria where you could get a drink.

1920—First meeting of the League of Nations Assembly began at Geneva and the delegate from Oak Bay served notice he would apply sanctions against all foreign nations including Victoria, Saanich, and Esquimalt.

1921—Elmer Fydd failed to swim Juan de Fuca Strait.

1922—Arms conference at Washington came out against unrestricted submarine warfare, which seemed like a good idea at the time.

1923—Victoria Parks Board proposed to cut down dying Oak Tree at Beacon Hill Park. Delegation of indignant citizens proposed to cut down the Parks Board.

1924—The sober, law-abiding residents of Vancouver Island took to power boating in great numbers, preferring the quiet hours of darkness for their cruises in Puget Sound. They could not understand the attitude of the United States Coast Guard, which appeared to misunderstand their innocent pastime.

1925—Victoria city's traffic engineer proposed to make Douglas a one-way street, and Victoria city's merchants appeared before city council to protest.

1926—The Tourist Committee of the Chamber of Commerce urged the police force to wear bowler hats as a tourist attraction.

1927—Diamond Jubilee of Confederation was celebrated throughout Canada, with Oak Bay dissenting. A letter signed Indignant Britisher appeared in the Times, asking whatever has become of our ties with the Mother Country and where will all this end? Nobody found the Times diamond.

OAK BAY MUNICIPAL HALL
DEPT OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS
CUSTOMS
IMMIGRATION

1928—There was a chicken in every pot, two cars in every garage, three mortgages on every home, and did you see what Home Oil closed at?

1929—Everything went to pot except chickens.

1930 — Nothing much happened this year it being the off-season like.

1931—Lots of things happened, but none of them were any good.

1932—The Imperial Economic Conference was held at Ottawa, at which the Oak Bay representative urged higher tarriff protection against imports from Victoria, Esquimalt, and Saanich.

1933—British Columbia sent a strong delegation to the Dominion-Provincial conference on the Depression. The B.C. delegation said it was all Ottawa's fault.

1934—Ottawa answered the B.C. charges of 1933, saying Ottawa didn't think that was quite true.

1935—B.C. sent a strong delegation to Ottawa asking that something should be done, and Ottawa asked the B.C. delegation what? The B.C. delegation came back to Victoria to find out.

1936—The B.C. delegation (see above) found out, but was too tired to report its findings.

1937—Elmer Fydd failed to swim Juan de Fuca Strait.

1938—The Tourist Traffic Committee of the Chamber of Commerce urged Victoria policemen to wear Empress Eugenie hats as a tourist attraction.

1939-1945, inclusive. These years were occupied with a rather large war which followed the war to end all wars. (See 1914 et seq.)

1946 — A Dominion-Provincial conference adjourned without reaching an agreement, the Oak Bay delegate dissenting.

1947—Flower baskets were hung on Victoria lamposts, and the Lower Impswich Association of Horticulturists protested that the use of azaleas was a clear case of discrimination against petunias.

1948—A five-headed tulip was brought in to the Strange Vegetable Editor of the Times, but he was not much impressed, having five heads himself.

1949—A timber cruiser in Sooke was going to mark a tree for cutting but decided against it because it would be difficult to yard out. This saved you-know-what.

CITY POLICE

1950 — All those who were born in Victoria in 1900 reached the half century mark, if they were still alive.

1951—The federal government ended all foreign exchange control regulations, including those with Oak Bay.

1952—Elmer Fydd failed to swim Juan de Fuca Strait.

1953—A delegation from Victoria visited the president of the CPR in Montreal urging fast ferry service between Victoria and Vancouver, Nanaimo and Vancouver, Sidney and Point Roberts, and Campbell River and Prince George. Later they went to Ottawa and urged construction of a bridge between Vancouver Island and the mainland. (The CPR president said he would let them know.)

1954—The Tourist Trade Committee of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce urged Victoria policemen to carry yo-yo's as a tourist attraction.

1955—That tree in Sooke, which had been secure from loggers, lovers, and woodpeckers for lo, these many years, finally got cut down. So it got itself carved into the world's tallest totem. What else?

1956—A couple of people (not including Elmer Fydd) swam Juan de Fuca Strait, which rather took the fun out of the thing. A pity, really.

1957—Nobody suggested one-way streets in Victoria, but a delegation from the merchants of Victoria protested to the city council just in case.

1958—A man signing himself Indignant Britisher wrote a letter to the editor of the Times viewing with alarm the rising rate of taxation in Oak Bay and asking where will it all end?

1959—Who knows?

'MOST QUOTED' PAPER

For many years the Victoria Daily Times has been confirmed as the "most quoted" newspaper on Vancouver Island.

WE WERE ONLY 5,925 IN THOSE DAYS

The population of Victoria City proper has grown nearly tenfold in the period The Times has published. In the Greater Victoria area the increase has been something on the order of 20 times.

The official census for 1881, three years before The Times began, was 5,925 persons in Victoria itself.

By 1891 this had jumped to 16,841. In the next decade it went to 20,919.

Possibly the biggest expansion period from heavy immigration in the following 10 years swelled the population to 31,660 by 1911. Steadily it increased to 38,727 in 1921, 39,082 in 1931, 44,068 in 1941, 51,331 in 1951 and 54,584 in 1956, the last official count.

In its early days the city contained most of the people. But in later years Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt all have progressed rapidly so that the overall population count of Greater Victoria was 125,447 in the 1956 census.

SOME STATISTICS WORTH CHECKING

This Is Victoria Today

By JOHN MIKA

Victoria's address is still the same latitude 48 degrees 25 seconds north; longitude 123 degrees 22 seconds west as it was 75 years ago, but almost everything else is different.

Today Victoria and the surrounding municipalities of Oak Bay, Saanich and Esquimalt form the 13th largest urban area in Canada.

This too may change as Greater Victoria's headlong expansion which began during the Second World War continues in full stride.

An estimated 147,000 persons live in Greater Victoria now, more than 125,000 of them in the four municipalities. About 3,000 persons annually come here from other areas. Natural increase adds more than 1,000 a year.

Many of the migrants are retired, augmenting the 22,000 people over 65 who account for 16 per cent of the population and give Victoria the title as the retirement city of Canada.

But the city itself is not retiring as its thriving economy proves.

A labor force of more than 51,000 persons earn a total exceeding $160,000,000 annually as they work for governments, stores, shipyards, construction firms, financial houses, transportation services, and other concerns.

Largest single economic segment of the community is the retail trade, which pays $18,500,000 a year to 8,000 employees in 1,400 stores.

Next in line is the navy, which maintains a 5,000 man establishment in Esquimalt that pumps an $18,000,000 payroll into the area.

The federal, provincial and local governments give employment to 6,000 civilians—a direct reflection of Victoria's administrative importance as the capital of B.C.

Three harbors, a huge graving dockyard, 11 shipyards, including the large Yarrows and Victoria Machinery Depot firms and deep-sea salvage facilities make the city an important commercial seaport as well as naval station, handling some 10 per cent of Canada's total international trade.

The shipyard working force, which made an important contribution to the wartime armament program, fluctuates between 2,000 and 4,500. Naval construction since the war has totalled $90,000,000.

The Pacific Coast fisheries, including salmon, halibut, herring and cod bring more wealth to Victoria where fishermen's wharves and floats can accommodate 200 vessels.

Approximately 42,000 dwellings house the population and a measure of the increase is the $86,000,000 spent in residential construction during the past decade.

More than 50 schools provide education to some 25,000 students.

The educational plant is not only increasing horizontally but also vertically as Victoria College, till now a two-year junior branch of the University of B.C., embarks on the final lap towards full university status this year by offering third and fourth year courses.

Another educational institution, the Canadian Services College at Royal Roads, plays an important part in the nation's military establishment as it prepares cadets for careers in the army, navy and air force.

Greater Victorians worship in 85 churches comprising all denominations from Anglicans to Sikhs.

Often described as "A Little Bit of Olde England," Victorians are predomilnately of British origin with the English, Scottish and Irish nationalities accounting for more than half of the population.

They do grow beautiful gardens and have a traffic Roundabout but the similarity with the UK ends there.

However, the legend is an important asset to the city. Cultivated by a publicity bureau, hanging flower baskets, 35 antique shops, numerous tweed, tartan and china shops, it brings some 500,000 tourists a year who spend about $8,000,000 here.

This influx of visitors is accommodated by 80 hotels with 2,600 rooms and an even greater number of motels.

Farming is another important industry, carried on in the outer fringes of Greater Victoria and providing a livlihood for 3,000 families.

Specialized crops of cut flowers and bulbs have earned millions of dollars and made Victoria an important source of the nation's florist industry.

The economic growth is clearly traced by the financial statistics of Greater Victoria which show bank clearings exceeding $550,000,000, customs returns over $10,500,000 and civic tax collections reaching beyond the $4,000,000 mark.

Electric power, another index of growth activity, has climbed to a generating capacity of some 417,000,000 kilowatt hours.

Connecting the residents with the outside world are Trans-Canada Airlines, Canadian Pacific ferries and Washington State Ferries.

Communications include two major telegraph companies, two newspapers, two radio stations, a television station and B.C. Telephone.

Canada's second largest astrophysical observatory is located here and, in keeping with the space age, is undergoing substantial expansion.

Vancouver Island's timber resources, comprising the largest stand of soft wood timber remaining, feed the wood products plants in Victoria and keep numerous tugs busy towing the log booms across water routes.

Victoria also has made important cultural advances during the past 75 years. Today it is served by a provincial museum, a maritime museum, one of the best collections of totem poles in the world, a first-class symphony orchestra, numerous thespian groups, an expanding art gallery and two libraries that possess some 400,000 volumes of literary and general works.

Main health centre for the whole of the Island, the city has two major hospitals, both of them engaged in expansion planning, and some 13 smaller hospitals, nursing homes and

THIS SKETCH, reprinted from earlier editions, is an architect's sketch of plans for a new city hall and a civic auditorium built on geodesic design, which may become, in the not too distant future, part of the Victoria skyline. It could set the pace for building design to come.

Our Life May Look Like This in Future

Roderick Clack, city architect, conceived the civic centre plan.

"The prospect that the whole Saanich peninsula could become urbanized within the lifetime of those who are young today will come as a shock to many who care about this unique part of Vancouver Island."
—Report of the Capital Region Planning Board of B.C.

By BRIAN TOBIN

It was late afternoon, and in the hurrying crowds of shoppers and homeward-bound office workers an old man and a young boy emerged from a tall skyscraper and made their way along the sidewalk. The youngster clutched a slip of paper in his hand and looked proudly around as he merged with the throng. The old fellow walking erect and easily for all his years, smiled fondly down on the lad.

"Well," he said, "at last you're a Times carrier. Don't lose that certificate. You'll need it when you pick up your papers tomorrow."

"I'm sure glad I'm starting in," answered the boy. "Now I'll have my little helicopter paid for in no time."

"Helicopter," mused the old man. "Imagine."

The pair turned off the main Douglas Mall into one of the many civic gardens that dotted the business district of the city. In all directions great skyscrapers soared, but so widely were they spaced that there was no sense of crowding.

Spreading Park

The city for miles around, indeed, seemed like a spreading park, with gleaming white spires lifting above the trees and only a faint rumble from deep in the ground indicating the heavy traffic of electric trains and atomic automobiles that rushed from building to building.

The old man and the boy chose a bench that gave them a fine view down a corridor of oaks and maples, and sat down for a rest.

The man leaned back, with a faraway look in his eyes. "Helicopter!" he said again, more to himself than to the boy.

Then he turned to his companion.

"You have to remember son," he said "that the city wasn't always like this. It's changed a lot, just like your newspaper has. Why I can remember when thirty or forty pages was considered a good average for the Times. Now look at it, more than a hundred every afternoon."

150th Year

"This is a good year to start your job," he went on. "It's the hundred-and-fiftieth anniversary of the founding. I was born away back in '59, when it was only seventy-five years old. There's been a lot of changes.

"Just look at these buildings around you, and all these parks. You'd hardly believe that almost all of them were built in the last thirty or forty years. Yet I can remember as a boy when there were just block after block of grimy houses and little shops all around here and not a green tree for miles. What do you think of that?"

"Must have been pretty terrible," said the boy. "What started the big change?"

"Well, I don't know exactly," said the man. "It was pretty well under way by the time I was old enough to realize it. It seems back about the time I was born they started drawing up plans and sketches of what the city might develop into. Of course, nobody thought it would ever amount to anything, but around about the turn of the century everything seemed to speed up, somehow.

"With all the new atomic equipment, they tore down dozens of blocks a day, laid out a whole new city plan and started raising all these buildings you see now.

City Was Dying

"Of course," said the old man, "by that time they just had to do something. There were close on to half a million people here even then and it was almost impossible to live. It took four or five hours just to drive a car a mile through the traffic. The city was so divided up into neighborhood business districts there was no centre left at all.

"Blocks and blocks of what had been the downtown part were just warehouses or left vacant. The city was dying right before their eyes and the people realized it only just in time.

"Would you believe it," said the old man. "Around the time I was born there was still open country all over what was called Saanich — trees and fields with cows in them, and people used to swim in the lakes."

"Gee," said the boy. "Without any tiled pools or anything?"

Fish in Lake

"Just sand and rocks," said the old man. "Of course, they're all reservoirs now. And in those days some of the lakes had fish in them."

"Aw," scoffed the boy, in disbelief. "That's not possible."

"It's true," said his companion. "Real fish swimming around, and you could catch them with—let's see—yes, I remember they called it a rod and line."

"Could you look right down in the water and see the fish?" asked the boy.

"Sure you could," said the man. "That was before they put anti fall-out covers on all the lakes. But that was nothing. Would you believe that back in those days most of the people lived in separate little houses, one family in each house?"

"Ha ha," laughed the boy. "You're just making that up."

"No sir," said the old fellow. "Little houses, like penthouses only they were on the ground. And each one had a lawn and a garden around it, and usually a fence."

"But how could they heat them or light them?" objected the boy. "It just wouldn't work."

"It worked," said the old man.

Hard to Believe

A fond smile came to his lips as he thought back to a little cottage in half an acre of daffodils and rose bushes that he had known as a boy. It did seem hard to believe, even when you'd known them.

He raised his eyes above the trees to the fifty-storey apartment buildings that lifted into the sky in every direction. The great glass-panelled towers were designed to catch the maximum sun at every hour of the day. Every room was a front room and each building was a little city in itself.

Sub-basements went down many feet into the earth, from shops and offices near the surface right down through storage floors to the atomic plants far below. Helicopters came and went from the rooftops, electric trains shuttled underground connecting one building with another. Only the surface of the earth was left peaceful and quiet, and at this time of day the endless chains of gardens and greens were filled with strollers of all ages.

A few office buildings reared above ground, scarcely distinguishable from the dwellings, but most commercial activities were underground. Here and there a slightly different form of architecture showed that this was a school—a lofty skyscraper institution in which hundreds of children attended all grades.

Like all the roads, the Island Highway had been put underground until it got out to Goldstream, beyond the outskirts of the city. So there were no surface thoroughfares to break the pattern of towers and gardens that covered the land from Race Rocks to Swartz Bay.

Giant 'Copters

Giant helicopters swung back and forth between the city and Vancouver, providing a ten-minute service, but they were used mainly by businessmen. Few people travelled from the Island unless they had to.

The affair of the bridge had almost been forgotten. The city was still a little shamefaced about it and citizens preferred not to be reminded of the incident.

But the old man could easily remember the riots that had broken out when the last section of the island-hopping bridge had been completed to the mainland, and how the Islanders Protective League had taken matters into their own hands and blown up twenty miles of the structure before it was a week old.

That had discouraged further attempts. It was now recognized that the Island would remain an island, and even the debris had long since disappeared.

It was amazing, mused the old man, how much actually had disappeared. He thought of some of the things he had known as a boy.

The little city hall that had stood until he was nearly of school age; the tiny art gallery with its added wing; the crowded streets of traffic through the centre part of the city; the quarrels among the city and the outlying parts—what was it they had called them, municipalities?—until the taxpayers rose in wrath and merged them all, the first little mall in the town; the arena with its single sheet of ice; the swimming baths, just one public pool for th whole city; the parliament buildings, covering only a few acres.

Wall, Ceiling TV

They flitted through his mind like pictures in a book—like pictures on the old, yes, television sets they'd called them, before the wall and ceiling screen had come into use.

And look at the same things today. The vast metropolitan offices that centralized the civic business of half the Island; the huge art gallery with its priceless collections viewed by thousands of citizens each day and hundreds of students from all part of the world; the gardens and pedestrian paths that had replaced the noisy, dirty streets, the metropolitan system that had taken over the original separate civic governments; the garden community that had emerged from that first pathetic little mall; the enormous ice palace that spread over dozens of acres and housed scores of hockey rinks, curling surfaces and skaters' areas; the similar multiple swimming pools that dotted the community and provided water of every conceivable area and depth and temperature for the thousands who patronized them; the scores of skyscrapers that comprised the parliament buildings.

Only a Dream

All these things and many more had come from the few pioneers who had a first faint glimmering of their destiny in the middle years of the century. But even they, of course, had only a dream of the city that would rise.

Another 75?

Yes, there had been revolutionary changes here. The old man nodded, and glanced down at the boy. What would his city be like seventy-five years from now, and what would the boys be like who sat with old men on benches to hear about the early days?

The old man could not project his imagination ahead that far. But he could sit in the sun and remember the cottage round which he had played as a boy without an instructor or a supervisor; he could look at the strolling crowds in the park and think of the many thousands doing exactly the same thing from Dallas Road to Deep Cove; and he could suspect, even if a little guiltily, that somehow payment, in some coin he could not quite identify, had been made for progress received.

CAPTAIN ROSKELLEY . . . "going where you shouldn't."

IF TIRED OF MUSIC, DANCING

'Go Upstairs For Gambling'

people would come back later on with a different act.

"You sat on plain chairs. At first, you could swing the chair in front of you around, and put your feet up, but by and by they fastened the chairs down."

(It was plain that Capt. Roskelley did not approve of this innovation.)

"But there was always the bar," he continued. "A long schooner of beer, five cents. Whiskey was 10 cents, but nearly everybody drank beer.

"Then there were two men walking around the music hall. 'Get your drinks and smokes here,' they'd call out; "same price as the bar.'

"Price was the same, too, except you got a little shorter schooner of beer.

"You could have a fine time when you could afford it."

(At those prices, who couldn't afford it? Capt. Roskelley was apprenticed until he was 21, and earned $5 a month.)

"Then, if you got tired of the music and dancing, and drinking, you could go upstairs for the gambling. I can remember there was a craps table, and poker, and roulette, and I guess there must have been other games, too.

"Never heard there was any limit on the games, but maybe there was. They'd take a dime bet from us lads when it was all we could afford.

"One way we had of making money was marking targets at the old Rifle Range.

(The rifle range was, until lately, at Clover Point. In Capt. Roskelley's time, it was used mainly by the 5th Regiment.)

"We apprentices worked every day in the week but Sunday. Sometimes, though, we could get off Saturday afternoon, and we'd go out to the range, and they'd pay us 25 cents an hour to mark the targets. We could make as much as a dollar that way, and then we'd have a time at Delmonico's.

"Other nights, we wouldn't go to the music halls, we'd go to the Cliff House, used to be on Dallas Rd., about the foot of Moss Street.

"I used to play the piano. Just ragtime. I'd play for three, or four dances, and then we'd get up a game.

"I didn't get paid. It was just for the fun of it.

"There was always plenty of beer, though.

"Later on, maybe midnight, we'd get into a rowboat and row around to Clover Point."

(Capt. Roskelley did not mention whether "we" had a feminine companion.)

"I got pretty good at the piano, at least folks said so, and for about four years I played it for a living. I played in a dance hall on Douglas Island, near Juneau, in Alaska, and I worked my way around down south, on the Barbary Coast, in saloons and theatres, too.

"I gave it up because everybody else was playing when I was working, and when I wasn't working, everybody else was."

(It is not clear how honkytonk piano helped fit out Capt. Roskelley for a towboating career.)

Like most of us, Capt. Reg has only fleeting and hazy memories of his early childhood. Of downtown Victoria, he remembers wooden sidewalks, and mud in the streets, and the great day when the city conceived the brilliant idea of sprinkling gravel at the crosswalks to hold some of the mud down.

He rememebers 24th of May at the Gorge, and the long walk to get there.

"No matter what color clothes you wore, they were white when you got to the Gorge, white from the dust."

Capt. Reg had something to do with correcting the condition of the streets. For a period of seven years, prior to the First World War, he drove "Jumbo," the steam-powered road roller remembered by so many Victorians.

Prior to this, he had worked as engineer on the towboat Constance, operating in Northern B.C. waters. He was working on Constance when the first shack was towed into Prince Rupert, which then consisted of three tents on the beach.

For four years, he worked from fall to spring in the north, returning to Victoria in the summer to loaf and spend his winter's pay.

Somewhere along in that period, a dream of travelling around the world was drowned out by wedding chimes. He and Winnifred Taylor were married in the old Christ Church Cathedral, on Oct. 26, 1910, Capt. Roskelley's 26th birthday.

Although Capt. Reg's interest in the waterfront wasn't especially keen in his younger days, he still remarks with amazement on the tortuous tactics formerly carried out to enter Victoria Harbor.

"It used to be like a snake

The city is preparing for the future, with Canada's first civic off-street parking and pedestrian mall scheme in the books and a huge tunnel project designed to increase its water supply enough to serve more than 200,000 people.

Both these projects symbolize the citizens' desire for progress, not for its own sake, but for the enrichment of a way of life already envied in many parts of Canada.

Today's Victorian, relatively unharried by the modern world's frantic pace, still has time to enjoy nature and his own imagination while he earns a living, and to take pride in such non-materialistic advantages as:

Roses in December . . . Canada's only sanctuary of English skylarks . . . the World's Tallest Totem . . . two castles . . . and even, Cadborosaurus.

THOUSANDS TOUR THEM EVERY YEAR

Two major points of interest to visitors to Victoria are the Legislative Buildings and Butchart's Gardens.

The stately Legislative Buildings command an excellent view of Victoria's inner harbor and together with the Empress Hotel and Olympic mountains in the background, have made Victoria's harbor famed as one of the most beautiful water approaches to any city.

The materials used in constructing the Buildings are native to B.C., including the huge slabs of granite forming the steps and the woods used in the interior finish.

OLD-TIME COMMUNICATIONS STUNT RECALLED

He Held Wire by Sending Bible

George Denny was one of the Times-trained newsmen who climbed the journalistic ladder to the rung of foreign correspondent.

Frank J. Starzel, present general manager of the Associated Press, writes from his New York office that "Mr. Denny was one of our foremost foreign correspondents for more than 20 years."

Denny was born in Victoria, Nov. 12, 1870. After schooling here he attended Santa Maria College in California, which was general practice, for youngsters of prominent families here.

Denny joined the Victoria Times as a cub reporter and benefitted from the association with the dazzling newshound, Martin Egan. When Egan left his job as city editor to return to San Francisco, Denny succeeded him.

Denny was a rustler and made a contact with the Associated Press. As a sideline he serviced that agency out of Victoria for $15 a week. He also provided coverage for the San Francisco Chronicle, the New York World and other papers. Victoria was one of the main news sources in the '90's. With only limited cable facilities to the Orient and none to Alaska, this continent had to rely to a great extent on the news incoming ships brought.

When the Klondike gold rush was on, Denny filed stories over the single telegraph line out of Victoria and he had novel ways of tying it up.

When he received a tip that survivors from the sinking of the steamer Islander, southbound from Alaska, were due here he gave the operator the Bible and told him to start, and keep sending it until he came in with his story. Other reporters could not get their stories away until after Denny's had gone.

Denny's good reporting during this period made an impression at Associated Press headquarters.

In 1902 he accepted an offer to join its staff in New York. The following year he took on his first assignment as a foreign correspondent, going to the Philippine Islands.

When the Russians and Japanese went to war he was posted with the Russian army, covering the fall of Port Arthur and the naval operations from Chefoo.

When "Red Sunday," the massacre in St. Petersburg occurred on Jan. 22, 1905, Denny was rushed there. Then he was ordered to Japan to cover the peace negotiations.

With order restored in the Orient, Denny was posted to the AP bureau in London and covered the death of King Edward VII on May 6, 1910, and the coronation of King George V, June 22, 1911.

Another assignment was the Olympic Games in London.

Then he was pitched into the turmoil of the suffragette movement and their raids on the House of Parliament.

The First World War found him in his real element. When that finished he was sent to Madrid to keep an eye on the unrest which was developing there.

Back in London in February, 1920, he was picked by AP to open relations with the London Times, being stationed in the Times office. This job successfully accomplished he was sent back to the Orient in 1922 as AP's foreign correspondent in Tokyo.

By 1924, Denny had such a valuable background on foreign affairs that he was called back to the United States and watched carefully over the cables.

Illness disabled Denny in 1929 when he retired. He died Jan. 8, 1935.

. . . 'LIKE SNAKE IN GRASS'

in the grass to get into it," he said. "There were rock outcroppings — the government blasted them out eventually — and there were two buoys. They were pretty close together, one about where the Home Oil dock is now, one closer to BA Paint.

"You had to go inside one and outside the other — I forget which — or you'd tear the bottom out of your boat.

"What beats me is, how those sailing ships ever made it. There were no tugs, you know, until later. The sailing ship put her own boats over the side, and the crews rowed and towed the ships in.

"Masters that didn't like the harbor entrance had to anchor in Royal Roads, which is all right for a steamer that can get way on in a hurry.

"But there's many a sailing ship dragged her hook on that bottom."

Capt. Reg's real, permanent interest in towboating began in 1926 when he became engineer, later skipper of the steam tugboat Respond long since re-built, re-engined and re-named Island Trooper of the Island Tug and Barge fleet.

For 32 years, he was a towboat skipper, nearly all of the time in harbor work, which he describes as "going where you shouldn't."

He ran about a dozen different towboats in his time, but the one figuring most prominently was christened Dorothy.

She was a smallish tug, steam driven from coal fired boilers. She was built to assist in erection of the New Westminster bridge (the one before the present one) and when the job was finished, she was brought over to Victoria and offered her for sale.

Capt. W. E. Gardner, a former deepwater shipmaster who had founded Gardner Towing, bought Dorothy for $2,000 cash and put Capt. Roskelley in command.

Dorothy and Capt. Reg did a bit of everything, including jobs much too big for the little ship. But for a time, she was the only harbor tug around. She towed ships to sea, and docked ships, towed logs from Chemainus and from Ladysmith.

To hear Capt. Reg tell it, not much of anything happened during the next 32 years, a fact happily supported by his record with the marine insurance companies — completely clean.

So eventually, last July, Capt. Reg stepped out of the wheelhouse of a wooden-hulled, diesel-powered tug named Island Rustler.

He was headed for retirement, and Island Tug decided to retire Island Rustler, too.

For who was Island Rustler but the former Dorothy — re-engined twice in her long career; and, if ships have pride, proud of being the last command of Capt. William Reginald Roskelley . . .

Who, in his 75th year, is erect, broad-shouldered, keen of mind and living very much in the present . . .

But who is willing to admit there was something to be said for the days of the five-cent beer and the 18-act music halls.

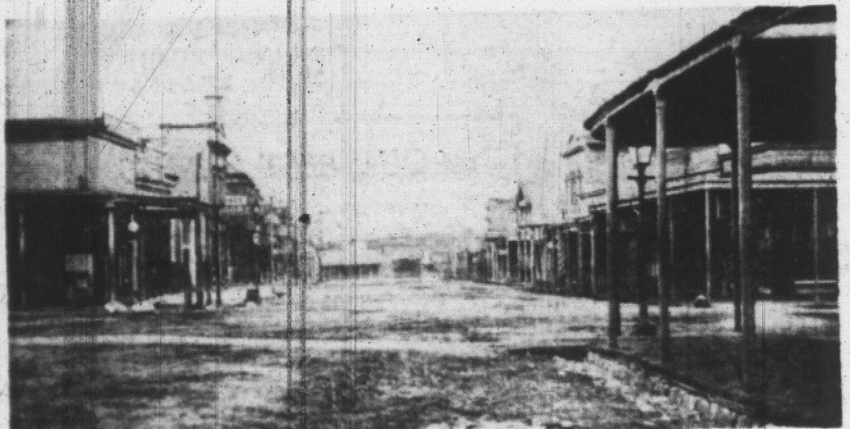
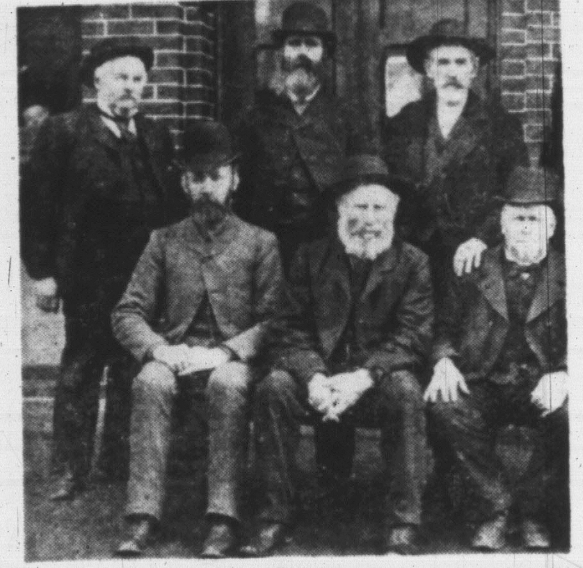
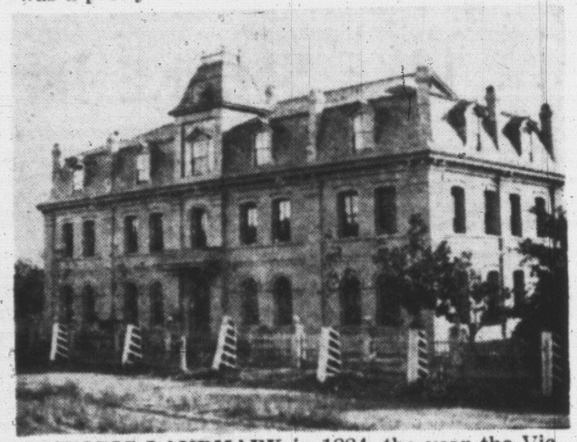
ADVENT OF STREETCAR service caused quite a ripple of excitement in early Victoria. This view shows the trolleys running on Douglas Street, still unpaved, but its sides being gradually hemmed in by a growing number of buildings. First streetcars here were horsedrawn. They appeared in 1885. First electric trolleys went into operation on Feb. 22, 1890.



RECOGNIZE THIS thoroughfare in downtown Victoria? Residents of the city in the 1880s knew it—and fondly, too—as Yates Street. Dirt street long ago gave way to asphalt and keen architectural designs, plus advances and discoveries in materials and construction brought about a "new look" for Yates, today one of Victoria's brightest faces.



BEARDS, HATS AND NECKTIES were important accessories—but not necessarily in that order—in 1884. A photographer of the Times caught these gentlemen proudly displaying their accessories in front of the Angel Hotel, an early landmark. Judging by their expressions, getting one's picture taken was a pretty serious affair.



HISTORIC LANDMARK in 1884, the year the Victoria Daily Times was born, St. Joseph's Hospital has grown from a modern start to one of the city's largest and one of its best known buildings. Shored-up trees in front of the hospital on Collinson Street have grown impressively over the years, now provide the street with beauty and shade.—(Photos courtesy Provincial Archives.)

HE WAS BORN 75 YEARS AGO TODAY

Saanich Old-Timer Came Into World Day Before First Times Hit Street

By HUMPHRY DAVY

People were more sociable and free and easy prior to the First World War, according to Frederick N. Duval, pioneer Saanich resident, who is celebrating his 75th anniversary this summer.

Mr. Duval of West Saanich Road, a retired farmer, was born on June 8, 1884, a day before the first newspaper rolled off the press of the Victoria Daily Times.

"Looking back now it seems to me we had more time to meet and know each other," he said as he thumbed through some old photographs. "People in many respects were more tolerant and sociable."

Mr. Duval can not only claim to be a member of a pioneer British Columbia family, but of real old Canadian stock. His father, who came to Victoria as a boy, was a descendant of a French Canadian family which settled in Quebec in the 18th century.

His mother, Janie Cheesman, was a daughter of one of the first settlers of Saanich.

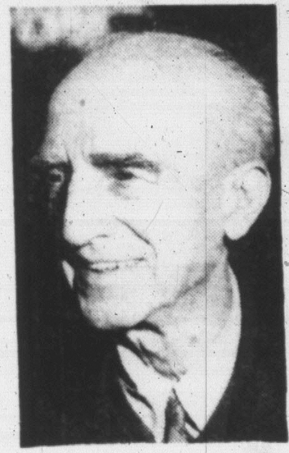
The Cheesmans, with a daughter, Mary, came from England. They rounded the Horn on the Norman Morrison and disembarked at Fort Victoria in the summer of 1854. The family settled in the Lake District where Mr. Duval's mother was born.

ROYAL OAK INN

In later years, Janie Cheesman married Louis Duval, who was proprietor of the Royal Oak Inn, then situated opposite the present municipal hall. They raised three sons and one daughter. The youngest son was Frederick.

Frederick was the first child to be christened at St. Michaels and All Angels Church on West Saanich Road.

He grew up in an age of leisure, the twilight of a great period in Anglo-Saxon history. Waves of British immigrants were settling in Canada and in other dominions. British Columbia was developing rapidly, especially Vancouver Island.



FREDERICK N. DUVAL
. . . 'free and easy'

Saanich in those days was divided into a few large farms and estates. The village of Sidney existed, and so did Saanichton. They were linked to Victoria by the East and West Saanich roads.

"We knew everyone in Saanich in those days," Mr. Duval recalled. "And everyone knew us."

In the latter part of the 19th century transportation became one of Victoria's major problems due to a large influx of settlers from England. It resulted in the building of a railway between Victoria and Sidney and became known as the V & S.

Mr. Duval remembers riding the first train to travel to Sidney in 1894. The train passed near his father's inn.

"The engine burned wood as fuel," he said. "No one worried about the train being on time. It was usually late."

The conductor, he said, often stopped the train to wait for a late passenger. He would even take the trouble to seek a passenger out at the inn.

The V & S went out of existence in 1914.

Mr. Duval recalled the big fireplace in his father's inn where people gathered to wait for the train or to sip quietly a glass of beer.

Residents called at the bar for their mail.

DIDN'T MIND

"Religious folks didn't mind collecting their mail there," he said. "They even opposed a move to change the postal service from the bar to the Royal Oak Post Office which was built later."

Mr. Duval attended Royal Oak School which then consisted of only one classroom. Children of all ages attended.

In 1898, at the age of 15 years, the pioneer resident started to earn his living. He first worked for R. P. Rithet on the Broadmead Farm, Royal Oak, as a race horse exercise boy and later as a farm hand. The farm included the present site of the Rithet housing estate.

He was paid $1 a day with board.

"There was a lot of horse racing in those days," he said. "Some of the horses were sent to California to compete."

Press Leaders Send Greetings

The leaders of several press associations and national and international organizations dealing with the news have sent the Times greetings on its anniversary.

Among them are the following:

"The Canadian Press salutes The Times on its 75th anniversary.

"The association of The Times with co-operative news gathering in Canada began in 1910 when it became a subscriber to the newly-established Western Associated Press. The Times was also a charter member when The Canadian Press was formed in 1917.

"It has been represented in the membership by such distinguished newspaper men as B. C. Nicholas, Kenneth C. Drury and H. P. Hodges, and now by your present publisher, Stuart Keate. All of these served at various times as directors of the national association. Their contribution to the development of the Canadian Press and of journalism in Canada over the years has been consistently enthusiastic and valuable."

Signed
CHARLES H. PETERS,
President,
The Canadian Press.

"In a world in which the press is by no means always free, it is indeed gratifying to observe that the Victoria Daily Times is this year celebrating 75 years of uninterrupted publication. On behalf of the Canadian section of the International Press Institute, I would like to offer my congratulations.

"Through the years, the Times has earned the reputation for its constant willingness to stand up for principle, to report accurately and fairly, and to comment firmly and fearlessly. By the exercise of such virtues, the press throughout the free world justifies its claim to be the keystone of all the other freedoms which free men enjoy.

"May the Times long continue to flourish, to enjoy its freedom, and to contribute to the life and well-being of Vancouver Island."

BASIL DEAN,
Chairman,
Canadian Committee,
The International Press Institute.

The Portland Oregonian greets the Victoria Daily Times on the occasion of its 75th anniversary.

"We of the Pacific Northwest, on both sides of the international border, have a common heritage. In Oregon and Washington, we hark back to the early, constructive history of the Hudson's Bay Company headquartered at Fort Vancouver. In determing to move its headquarters northward, the Company made a happy selection of the site at Camosun, which was to become Victoria, the capital of the Canadian West.

"As a frequent visitor to Vancouver Island, I appreciate the qualities that recommended the site to the Hudson's Bay Company and the colonists who were to follow in its wake. I also appreciate the vital role the Victoria Daily Times has played in the development of Victoria, British Columbia and the Pacific Northwest.

Signed
M. J. FREY,
President, Pacific Northwest Newspaper Association.

"On behalf of The Associated Press may I extend congratulations to The Victoria Daily Times as it celebrates the anniversary of its first 75 years of service to its community, province and country.

"The Times' reputation for professional excellence extends far beyond the borders of Canada, and it is admired as well for its firm editorial stand in support of its beliefs.

"We extend every wish for many more years of success and service."

Signed,
MURLIN SPENCER,
Chief of Bureau,
Seattle, Wash.

"We on The Spokesman-Review in Spokane, Washington, have constantly admired the high standards of service to the people of Victoria and Vancouver Island which have been typical of the Times. The 'right to know,' which rests on the foundation of a free press, is the basis and protector of all human freedoms.

"As Vice-President of the Inter American Press Association, which is the strong defender in the Western Hemisphere of freedom of the press and of which Stuart Keate (Publisher of the Victoria Daily Times) has been a director, I am aware of many occasions on which the Times has demonstrated its courage and forthrightness in fighting for this cherished human right.

"May the next 75 years be as fruitful of achievement for the Times as has been its record for its first 75 years!

VICTORIA WAS A GAY SPOT IN 1884

Free Lunches and 25-Cent Hacks

* * * * * *

Victoria, in 1884, when The Times was born, had been incorporated as a city for 22 years, the second incorporated city in B.C., New Westminster being the first, and Nanaimo the third.

By 1884 the hotels and restaurants of Victoria were becoming smarter; Victoria was noted for the excellence of its meat markets and its grocery imports from San Francisco and Europe.

A perusal of The Times advertising columns in the first few months of its publication gives a good picture of the Victoria of the time.

Here, for instance, are some of the hotel advertisements: "Beacon Hill—Park Hotel—lovely scenery—beautiful surroundings, and salt sea ozone off the Straits—the hotel bar furnished with the best wines, liquors and cigars. Only one mile from the Victoria post office."

Grand Pacific Best Located

"Grand Pacific Hotel, corner Johnson and Store Streets. This new, three-storey, fireproof brick building was expressly built for a hotel, with 60 well-furnished rooms, and is one of the best-located houses in the city—$1 per day, and upwards. The bar will be found well stocked with the best brands of wines, liquors and cigars. Billiards and pool tables. David Ellis (late of the Commercial), proprietor."

"New England Bakery, Restaurant and Oyster Saloon, Government Street, between Johnson and Yates. Private dining room for ladies—meals at all hours—bread, cakes, pies, supplied to hotels, families, picnics, balls, etc.—M. and L. Young, proprietors."

Those were the gala days of the free lunch. Buy a bottle of beer and mine host threw in all you could eat, and no charge! The Germania Saloon, at the northwest corner of Government and Johnson, advertised: "Hot lunch from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. FREE to all my patrons—choice wines, liquors and lager beer. H. Ferdinand Siewerd, proprietor."

And, the Garrick's Head—Bush and McDermott, props.—Bastion Square—"a pioneer house of the city. The bar

EARLY DAYS version of today's contemporary cocktail bar was the "Brown Jug," one of Victoria's most luxurious taverns before the turn of the century. Shining brass ring along top and bottom of bar, wide use of glass, rich use of designed wood and expansive mirrors combined to give the "Brown Jug" an air of extravagance.

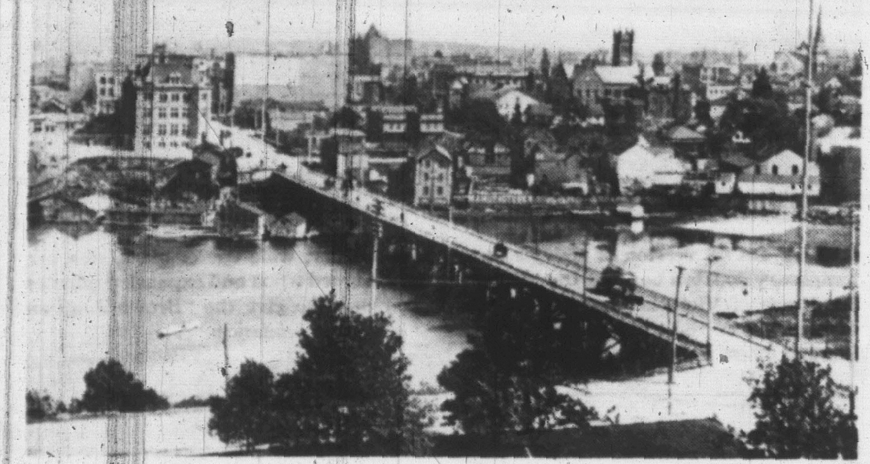
From an Old Friend to the

VICTORIA DAILY TIMES

CONGRATULATIONS ON YOUR 75TH ANNIVERSARY

For 75 years, we have been growing together . . . working together both business and community-wise. It is indeed a pleasure to join in your celebration and like all "old friends" reminisce a little of the "old days" when both of us were struggling starters.



An early photo of Victoria showing the original Pendray Plant located on Humboldt Street where the Empress Hotel now stands.

Remember how on April 21st, 1899, it was reported that "W. J. Pendray and Mr Andrews had purchased the Victoria and Vancouver factories of Canada Paint Company." The House of Pendray had been established since 1875, but we were making soap and "paint" was a new venture. The factory was located on the site where the Empress Hotel now stands. Purchase of a new location at Laurel Point was not made until later, but all through the years, you kept the public informed on the activity at "Bapco."

In 1901, it was reported, "it is the establishment of industries like this which tends to give a city a solidity that cannot be secured in any other way, and one cannot but admire the enterprise of Mr. Pendray in having so boldly gone into the heavy outlay which his plant represents.".

Around about May of 1906, a newspaper announcement stated that the British America Paint Company "have got fairly under way in their new and commodious buildings." Earlier that same year this appeared: "The steamer Venture on the Victoria Machinery Depot's ways, undergoing repairs, is getting a coat of Pendray's green anti-fouling paint," and, "the result of this test will be watched with keen interest in all shipping circles."

Following the death of W. J. Pendray in 1913, his two sons, J. Carl and the late Herbert J., took over the management of Bapco which continued to grow and whose growth the "Times" carefully recorded. The "soap factory" had been sold and to "Beautify with paint" continued on as Bapco's personal slogan.

As Victoria and British Columbia grew, so did both the Times and Bapco. J. Carl Pendray took the office of president and general manager of the firm in 1917 and became well known for his service in community efforts.

In 1948, J. Carl Pendray announced his retirement from general managership and that he would be succeeded by his son W. Allan Pendray, who thus became the third generation of this well-known family to head the firm.

In 1954, the Times and Bapco were again closely associated in a venture that was to bring world-wide attention to our city. It was the Bapco-Times Channel Swim in which Miss Florence Chadwick participated.

Yes, it is pleasant to think back and to remember that the Times and Bapco have worked together and watched together, the development of our lovely city into one of Canada's finest!

We of Bapco wish the Times continued success in the future!

NEW MODERN TECHNIQUES EMPLOYED IN PRESENT-DAY PAINT MANUFACTURING

Even though these photos show the great change in the exterior and size of the Bapco plant, the growth inside the familiar green walls would be almost unbelievable to any who might recall earlier days when 9 tons of paint daily was a record production.

Grandson of the founder, W. A. (Allan) Pendray, Vice-President and General Manager; and F. A. E. (Fred) Manning, Vice-President, continue to uphold the successful policies established by J. C. Pendray and to keep pace with modern methods of manufacture.

Talk of "tank farms," "alkyd kettles," raw latex and such mean little to those who have not visited the factory. But to anyone in, or connected with the paint industry, it means that Bapco is a "leader." Proof of this fact is further substantiated by their membership in Paint Research Associates which is given only a recognized "leader" and is acquired by invitation only. They are the only Canadian company holding this distinction.

made raw latex first . . .
First to manufacture their own raw latex, they still remain the one Canadian company doing so. "Alkyd," the material which improved interior and exterior paints to such a degree, is also manufactured right on the premises. Formerly, Alkyd was brought in from the U.S.A. in tank cars. Now, in a specially constructed building, a huge reactor keeps busy producing this essential material.

Skilled technicians in a full-scale laboratory equipped with intricate testing machines assures customers of continuous high quality. The retention of Faber Birren, world-famous color consultant and who styles all Bapco Paint colors, is another feature of their products.

a dream comes true . . .
And so the dream of an early Victoria pioneer to beautify with paint, and whose business began operation only a few short years prior to the first publication of the "Times," has come true, for who can deny that the colorful beauty of our homes, schools and public buildings is pleasanter to live with than the dull, drab greyness of three-quarters of a century ago.

to an old friend . . .
Bapco, its employees and dealers, join in wishing an old friend, The Victoria Daily Times, sincere congratulations on their 75th Anniversary.

TRANSPORTATION CHANGES CAME SLOWLY

Rowboat to Rotodyne—In 75 Years

To condense the changes in transportation between Vancouver Island and the B.C.-U.S. mainlands into a time capsule would be nothing less than spectacular.

If, for instance, the progress of the past 75 years had taken place in a 12-month period, it would be too much to comprehend.

But spread over this three-quarter century, the results have been so gradual, they have hardly been noticed by those who have lived through them.

Nevertheless there has been a revolution in the linkage between this island and the mainland, a revolution which, at this writing, has hardly yet begun.

The trite way to approach the subject might be to term it from rowboat to rotodyne.

For it seems almost certain that the paddle-wheel steamers in use when The Times was born are to be replaced, at some not-too-far-distant date, with vertical take-off aircraft capable of high speed in horizontal flight.

It appears now the rotodyne—already ordered by Okanagan Helicopters, which has applied for a Vancouver-Victoria-Seattle franchise—will mark the next major phase in the changing pattern of connections with the mainland.

Back when the Times was first published, in that wonderful year 1884, people and freight were transported to and from this island in the ships of the Canadian Pacific Navigation Co.

CPN was incorporated in 1883, with a capital of $500,000, by the redoubtable Capt. John Irving, who first made his appearance as master of his own sternwheeler on the Fraser River in the seventies.

Capt. Irving moved to Victoria when it became evident the Canadian Pacific Railway was going to make its way down the Fraser Canyon to the coast, and thus kill the previously profitable riverboat trade.

The Islander struck an iceberg and sank in 1901, southbound from the Klondike with gold in her strongbox. With her, 44 lives were lost.

In living memory, one of the best-known of Capt. Irving's ships was the Charmer (ex-Premier), which was the forerunner of the regular nightly steamer service between Victoria and Vancouver—a service killed early this year by the CPR due to increasing competition from other means of transport.

Motorists on the move wish to do as much of their travelling as possible in their own cars. This led to transportation companies designing fast, short-haul ferries, instead of the small-scale luxury liners for the coastal trade.

Black Ball Ferries Ltd., first on the Port Angeles-Victoria run, now on the Departure Bay-Horseshoe Bay service, was one company to recognize the trend in the early years. Washington State Ferries (operating Port Angeles-Victoria and Sidney-Anacortes) has always recognized the principle of short over-water hauls linking with good road systems.

The CPR followed the trend, too, concentrating in recent years on the Nanaimo-Vancouver service, with its short Gulf of Georgia crossing, and providing ships which are a compromise between the luxury "Princesses" and the purely utilitarian automobile ferries.

These changes in water-borne transportation have taken place, for the past 40 years, under the shadow cast by aircraft wings.

Today, Trans-Canada Air Lines operates between Victoria's Patricia Bay Airport and Vancouver's Sea Island on a 12-daily round-trip schedule which, during peak periods, is stepped up to a shuttle service.

The first flight between Island and mainland was made from Vancouver on May 12, 1919, by Alfred Eckley and Ernest Hall. They lifted their Curtiss plane from a Lulu Island runway and made it to Victoria to the surpise and excitement of everyone.

The next day two Victoria flyers, Harry Brown and Sandham Graves, made the first round trip, Victoria-Vancouver, logging 42 minutes outbound, 54 minutes inbound.

In 1928, a group of Victoria flyers formed B.C. Airways, and paid $50,000 for a tri-motored Ford which met an unfortunate end when it crashed into the water on a flight from Victoria to Seattle. Seven lives were lost.

Forecasting the shape of transportation to come, Trans-Canada Air Lines was formed in 1938, and in June, 1943, started the Vancouver-Victoria service.

The next step, say those with an eye to the future of aviation, is downtown to downtown service, and elimination of the long drive from city to airport.

Some say the answer is the rotodyne, or some other type of vertical-lift aircraft.

But that's a story best written on the 150th anniversary of the Times, not the 75th.

Congratulations on the TIMES Diamond Jubilee

a national mystery. If anyone had looked up the original letter he would have detected the slanting, almost illegible handwriting of the editor. He might have guessed, too, that the initial L. in Mr. Puller's name stood for Leg. We don't allow such things in this deadly earnest age, more's the pity.

Once I accompanied him on a tour of the Cariboo, by primitive P.G.E. freight car, Fraser River boats and horseback to Barkerville. Bored with the outdoors, he sought human companionship in a ghastly restaurant at Williams Lake and there informed a leading citizen of the hamlet, in strict secrecy, that our party of four represented powerful American interests who were about to buy the government's railway.

Into Papers

As he expected, that story bounced into the coast newspapers within twenty-four hours and was widely believed even by the desperate, debt-ridden government.

One remembers Nicholas in this and a thousand other practical jokes, his occasional outbursts of song from a table in the city room on Christmas Eve—for he had a magnificent, well-trained voice, good enough for grand opera—and his even more exciting outbursts of anger.

In fact, he was in a state of the highest dudgeon about something, or pretended to be, half of every day. He must have fired the city editor a dozen times a year and re-hired him within the hour.

Dance of Rage

He would dance with rage at some typographical mistake in the paper, denounce the printers with squeaky invective and contorted features, write bitter notes of correction to some erring reporter and throw them into his waste paper basket, blackguard a cabinet minister on the telephone if The Times lost a political scoop and, in the next breath, would welcome to his office a boyhood friend who had spent the last ten years in jail for armed robbery.

Yet there was a certain cool method in most of his madness, and a deep reverence for life. When a real lunatic appeared one day to announce that he was the Son of God, Nicholas did not argue but sent him to see a leading minister of the Gospel. The minister telephoned an hour later to condemn this act of irreverence. Nicholas, he said, must have realized that the stranger was an obvious imposter.

"How do we know that?" an obvious imposter. He came we crucified Him."

The lesson was wasted on the minister, the lesson that Nicholas had learned and preached, in curoius ways, all his life—the lesson of humility, the hatred of sham, the sometimes profane but always unquestioning belief in God.

Mostly such lessons were taught to the young and always by indirection, never with preachments. For as he grew prematurely old Nicholas turned for companionship more and more to youngsters, who accepted him as one of their own age.

With almost unerring instinct he could pick out some obscure youth and see in him the makings of a good newspaperman, which he regarded as the highest human estate. Then he would coach the apprentice, correct his copy, lend him books and money, send him out into the big outside world and glory in his success. Some of Canada's best journalists today wear the stamp of Nicholas in their work as they carry his memory in their hearts.

Rare Mistake

Only toward the end and then, I suspect, by one of his few mistakes, did the hometown editor ever think of leaving his private kingdom at the corner of Fort and Broad. It was a shock one morning to hear that he had decided to go into politics.

We had all known that he loved politics as a sort of game since, as a youngster, he had acted as secretary to William Templeman, then proprietor of The Times and one of Laurier's cabinet ministers.

He had known all the great public figures of Ottawa in those days and a big wooden box under his desk contained a massive correspondence with them. But it had never occurred to us that he would abandon The Times. Without him the paper was unthinkable.

Pressure by King

Yet under pressure of his friend Mackenzie King and the Liberal Party, Nicholas had made his decision. He would go to Ottawa. His election in Victoria, of course, would have been a mere formality. Who could beat the best-loved figure the town had ever seen? Undoubtedy election would soon have been followed by elevation to the cabinet, for there were few ministers who possessed the editor's knowledge and none of that time (or perhaps since that time) could approach him as an orator, in some respects especially in casual, off-the-cuff speeches—the finest orator I ever heard.

Dead at Desk

Then came the odd twist of this odd man's destiny. He called me one morning at the Legislative Buildings, where I was his reporter, to talk about the approaching election. I thought his voice sounded a little strange but forgot it in the rush of the day's deadline. Within minutes the office called me again to say that Benny was dead at his desk. He was never to leave Victoria and some portion of him, I hope, will never leave The Times.

Among all the tributes to him, from every corner of the nation, only one remains in my mind because it said everything in a sentence. "Who," wrote Dean Quainton, of Christ Church Cathedral, "could feel mean in his presence?"

No one. That was the measure of Benny Nicholas, a great man who would have laughed if you had called him great.

GOLD RUSH LIVENED UP FT. VICTORIA

The Fraser River gold rush of 1858 almost overnight turned Fort Victoria into a lively frontier town.

At that time the only seaport in British Columbia, the settlement became the outfitting centre for miners and adventurers who flocked in from the gold fields of California and Australia en route to the mines.

It was estimated that within a few weeks over 20,000 had arrived. On the subsiding of the Fraser River gold rush there developed the Cariboo excitement of the 60s.

The impetus to growth resulted in Fort Victoria being incorporated as a city in 1862 at the height of the Cariboo rush.

MAJOR EXPANSION FOR JAMES BAY

15 New Government Buildings For Victoria in Next 25 Years

By PETE LOUDON

The British Columbia government plans to construct at least 15 major new buildings in the next quarter century in expansion of the present Legisaltive Buildings in Victoria.

Early plans, now yellowing in pigeonholes perhaps, but still on paper, call for a pedestrian mall connecting with Beacon Hill Park, graced on either side by palaces of glass and concrete.

The necessity of the move is evident in the conglomeration of remodeled private homes, temporary offices which look like warehouses, and narrow streets with inadequate parking areas, scattered like a hoboe's jungle in the lee of the stately main building of today.

Happened Before

The fact that British Columbia has outgrown its present capital buildings is a situation that has prevailed at various times in the last 100 years.

A century ago, in May, 1859, the first government of B.C. was not yet a year old. It was located at Fort Langley but was ready to move into the new capital of New Westminster.

Vancouver's Island was still a separate colony, its House of Assembly was located on Hudson's Bay Company land just about where the new Victoria post office stands today.

It was May 7 that Governor Douglas, who was then governor of both colonies, told his government it was determined ". . . to build certain public buildings to serve as public offices for the colony, on the south side of Victoria harbor, and to connect them by means of a bridge over James Bay, with Government Street, so as to render them of convenient access to the public."

(Sir James' bridge ran where the Causeway is now, and the water it crossed has long since been pushed back by a reclamation project for construction of the Empress Hotel).

Bird Cages

Sir James raised some money from the Hudson's Bay Company and more by selling property in the heart of the town, which had been held for the capital buildings. He raised about $100,000 and with it built five buildings located where the main building of the Legislative Buildings now stands.

These were the Bird Cages, whose name origin is disputed by historians, oriental type, one storied brick and wood buildings, the last of which was destroyed by fire in 1957. The brick had come around the Horn.

The longest speech in the history of parliamentary procedure was made at the Bird Cages. It was a relay speech to defeat a tax bill. It was undertaken by newspaper editor Leonard McLure, and the man who founded The Colonist but was not then publisher, Amor de Cosmos.

The speech lasted 22 hours, McLure speaking for 15 and de Cosmos for seven, to delay the vote until a missing member, one Lennox of Salt Spring Island could be located. He showed up in time to defeat the bill by weight of his vote.

It was at this time, long-winded speechmakers were aided in their task by a cooling draught from a barrel of in the lobby. One could dodge out to the barrel and chalk off the refresher against his name on a wall blackboard.

The two governments of Vancouver Island and British Columbia were finally united in 1866. But it was 32 years before a central parliament building more in keeping with the size of the new province was constructed.

The building which Capt. George Vancouver surmounts today was started in 1893 and completed in 1896. The formal opening was Feb. 10, 1898.

The architect, F. M. Rattenbury, was chosen after perusal of designs sent in by 66 U.S. and Canadian architects in a contest. His plans meant a construction worth $1,000,000 using native stone from Haddington Island, grey andesite, for the walls, native grey slate landings of native granite.

Most of the interior woodwork was from B.C. forests.

The main building at front is 288 feet long and the height to the dome is 165 feet. Captain George stands seven feet tall above that, facing due north, although he is famed for his circular voyage, the first by a British navigator around the island bearing his name.

Space needs, called for later construction of the library wing and a balancing wing at either end of the main building, soon after. And in 1912, the Duke of Connaught, while Governor-General of Canada, laid the cornerstone for the library wing.

Constant expansion saw the armory of the non-permanent militia soon become the headquarters of the Motor Vehicle Branch. The $2,000,000 Douglas Building was opened in 1951. But in spite of these major additions, the government has continued gobbling up adjoining large private homes.

The domes of the Legislative Buildings push skyward.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Victoria has retained an association with her romantic early history in the many street names commemorating early pioneers and explorers and the significance of place names near the city.

Here are few of these unusual names and their origin:

BEACON HILL. From two beacons erected on the summit in the early days to direct ships.

CADBORO BAY. After the Hudson's Bay Company's schooner Cadboro.

ESQUIMALT — "Is-whaymaith," Indian word for a place of gradually shoaling waters. The name was marked on James Douglas' map of 1842, now in Hudson's Bay Company archives, London.

FINLAYSON'S INLET — After Roderick Finlayson, chief trader in charge of Fort Victoria following the death of Charles Ross. Chief trader Finlayson showed such presence of mind during an Indian uprising that the disturbance served only to enhance the prestige of Fort Victoria among the Indians.

FOUL BAY—"Foul anchorage," a nautical term.

GOLDSTREAM—So named because of discoveries of gold made here in the early days.

GONZALES—Named in 1790 by Don Manuel Quimper after his first mate. It is one of the few Island places having a name given by a Spanish explorer.

LANGFORD. After Captain E. E. Langford, who farmed here in the early days for the Puget Sound Agricultural Company, a subsidiary of the Hudson's Bay Company.

MALAHAT—Name of an Indian tribe.

METCHOSIN — "Smets-shosin, the place of oil also "of smelling oil." A whale stranded here was cut up by the Indians for blubber and its flesh dried for food. The place and the Indians were odiferous for some time after the incident.

MOUNT TOLMIE — After Dr. W. F. Tolmie, a physician of the Hudson's Bay Company in the early days of Victoria.

OAK BAY. From the number of native Garry oak trees surrounding the area.

SAANICH — "Sa-nitch," a Saalish Indian word meaning rising or raising. During the deluge, either told about by early missionaries or already in Indian mythology, the Indians believed that Saanich Mountain did not get covered by the power of God and the Thunderbird (Indian mythological figure). Saanich also means "always on the look-out," as was the Thunderbird. It is thus appropriate that the Observatory now stands on "Little Saanich Mountain."

Gay, Young Blades Took Gals in Hack

is supplied with the best wines, liquors and cigars. Hot lunch from 1 to 3 daily."

The top businessmen, in their tall hats and cutaway coats, met as in a club in the butcher markets such as:

"Queen's Market, Government Street—Goodacre and Dooley—wholesale and retail butchers, contractors by appointment to Her Majesty's Royal Navy. Shipping supplied at lowest rates."

"John Parker—wholesale and retail dealer in meats of all kinds, stock, vegetables, etc.—Parker's Market, s.w. corner of Fort and Government (where the Bank of Commerce is today). Hotels, restaurants, ships and families supplied at short notice."

Fresh Foods Era of Wonderful Smells

The provision stores had wonderful smells in those days—cheeses, and fish in barrels, and open jars of pickles, and barrels of biscuits and sugar—perhaps not so cleanly as today—but no gleaming packaged goods, no frozen foods—no stores glistening like operating rooms.

"Carne and Munsie—fine family groceries. Importers and dealers in groceries, provisions, table delicacies, Oregon and Island produce. Odd Fellows' Building, Douglas Street."

If you were a gay, young blade in those days you saved for weeks so that you could hire a hack, thereby, of course, hoping to impress your young lady, and also gain a name as a swain who knew how to live in the best style.

The Victoria Transfer Company advertised: "Hack rates—from the stand to any point within the city limits—one person, 25 cents; two or three persons, 50 cents; to Outer Wharf, each person, 50 cents; trunks, 25 cents extra; dinner parties, theatres, one person to and from, $1; two or three persons to and from, $1.50; driving by the hour, winter rates, per hour, $1; summer rates, $1.50; balls at 'at homes' (when hour of return is after midnight)—in the city, each carriage, $2.50; Esquimalt, each carriage, $5; weddings, each carriage, $4; funerals, each carriage, $3. S. Tingley, president; A. Henderson, superintendent; Frank S. Barnard, secretary."

When you visited Esquimalt you took the mail stage, for Esquimalt was a long, long way off, an adventure—through the woods and by the seashore: "From and after this date the fare by the mail stage running between Victoria and Esquimalt will be 15 cents each trip, or eight single trip tickets, $1. Apply at office of W. G. Bowman, Broad Street, opposite Trounce Alley."

Victoria was in the middle of a railway building boom in 1884. Robert Dunsmuir's Esquimalt and Nanaimo was being pushed through the forest, up the Island.

There was a shortage of labor in 1884, so prosperous were the times, and day after day the E & N contractors advertised in The Times for help:

"Schedule of Wages—For WHITE LABOR on the E & N Railway—rock foremen, $3 to $4 per day; earth foremen, $2.50 to $3 per day; bridge carpenters, $3; laborers, $1.75 to $2; hewers, $3; choppers, $1.75 to $2. All outside labor, 10 hours a day. All carpenters to furnish their own chest tools. All employed find themselves bed, board and lodging—board ing houses conveniently located along the line. Board $4 per week.

In the advertising columns of the earliest editions of The Times we find names still familiar today:

"E. G. Prior Company—Importers of iron, steel, hardware and agricultural machines."

"McKenzie and Meston—Carriage makers and blacksmiths. Government Street, between Johnson and Pandora."

"Charles Hayward—Funeral director and embalmer. Government Street."

"H. F. Heisterman and Company are moving to the offices on Government Street, formerly occupied by Allsop and Mason. The latter firm have moved to offices in the Galpin Block."

"All kinds of blank books at Hibben and Co.'s."

"If you want a good overcoat go to W. & J. Wilson's. You can get the best value in overcoats at W. & J. Wilson's."

The legal profession advertised in those days:

"The following is a complete list of the duly qualified members of the legal profession practising in Victoria. They compare favorably in point of ability, with the bar of any other city in the Dominion—A. E. B. Davie, Theodore Davie, M. W. T. Drake, D. M. Eberts, Thornton Fell, Harry Dallas Helmcken, J. Roland Hett, R. E. Jackson, George Jay Jr., Edwin Johnson, Henry J. Mason, S. Perry Mills, W. Pollard Jr., C. E. Pooley, J. P. Walls, Charles Wilson, J. S. Yates."

There was an excitement in the town one day in June, 1884, as announced in the new Times; "Prospective soup—a live turtle, weighing about 200 founds arrived by the steamer Queen of the Pacific for the Driard House. It was caught somewhere on the south coast, where such gay and festive creatures belong. The guests of the house are expecting a great treat."

And does not this Times note of 1884 sound familiar?:

"A laudable step—a number of the ladies of this city met at the residence of Mr. D. W. Higgins to organize a nursing corps for attendance on wounded soldiers in case of war with Russia, and an attack by the enemy on our city. Temporary officers were elected and a public meeting of women will be held in the City Hall to permanently organize. This step on the part of the ladies is highly commendable. The soldiers, or at least a large proportion of the number required, have yet to be found."

WALTER LAING

". . . nobody walks anymore"

GOOD SPORT

This Pioneer As Active as The Times

When The Times was just a few months old, on Dec. 2, 1884, Walter Laing was born on Erie Street, Victoria, where his father operated a shipyard.

He has lived in Victoria ever since apart from trips to far corners of the province as a travelling salesman for Turner and Beaton, wholesale druggists, from 1903 to 1938.

Like The Times, Mr. Laing is still very active in his 75th year. He sells real estate for Alfred Carmichael and Co. and lives at the YMCA on Blanshard, where he takes a keen interest in the boys' swimming classes. This is partly because his grandson, Bobby, is a promising young swimmer at the Y.

Mr. Laing's grandfather, Robert Laing, came to Victoria in a sailing ship from St. Andrews, Scotland, and established the shipyard on Erie Street which later passed to his father, Andrew Laing.

GREAT DELIGHT

"We had a happy home life and my dad's shipbuilding was a great delight to me. Victoria was so very much smaller then that everyone knew everyone else and we heard most of the local news before it got into the newspapers."

Mr. Laing attended Kingston Street Elementary School, and when South Park School was opened, he became one of its first pupils.

In his younger days Mr. Laing was an enthusiastic lacrosse player with the Victoria and James Bay teams and he used to buy The Times for its sports news.

"The paper always produced good sports pages," he says. "I still turn to them after glancing at the front page news."

NO WALKERS

One thing he deplores about modern Victoria is that nobody walks anywhere.

"When I was a boy we used to walk all over what is now Greater Victoria. We thought nothing of walking seven or eight miles on a Sunday and I am certain we were better for it.

"Nowadays too many people take the car to the corner store. They would be a lot healthier if they used their legs as they were intended to be used."

Mr. Laing has two sons, Walter and David, both living in Victoria, and two grandchildren.

THEY MAKE COLUMN-WRITING AN AMUSING JOB

Victoria: The City of Guardians

By RUTH ENKE

Writing a column in Victoria is a most amusing job. The readers make it so. For they guard me as carefully as any shepherd guards a wilful, straying sheep.

At the start, these guardians were often fierce with me. Fierce and downright rude. But they have mellowed with the years.

Yet I can tell that, beneath the new-found gentleness, they're a passionate bunch of men and women. But oh, their passions are so strange and such unexpected things inflame them!

Ruth

For instance, this one is roused because I made some fictitious characters eat bacon and pork sausage for their breakfast. How I erred. For eating any portion of the pig is an offence against the food laws laid down in the Old Testament, and all our modern ills are due to forsaking these ancient rules. The flesh of the pig stinketh in our nostrils! (No, no, I must be fair. That last sentence was my own invention. But I couldn't resist it, somehow.)

This guardian grieves because I said with Rupert Brooke that there are no fairies in our western woods. How wrong I was. The pixilated little people are all about us. Indeed they are, my dear!

This headstrong reader who cannot write her name always tears the column out and sends it back to me if I have written "all right" as a single word and with a single "l".

This man with the excited signature I simply cannot read writes delightfully and correctly about some dreadful thing he says I did with a certain kind of verb.

This one, more dour than delightful, objects to the expression, "Man's long upward journey from the cave." By using it, I've shown myself to be in league with Darwin, the monkeys, evolution and our wicked, wicked schools.

This one's excited about the wonders of manure. Goat, she says. She's always had tremendous luck with goat.

This reader quotes Genesis, Deuteronomy and Numbers for some reason that I can't understand.

This man, who calls on Isaiah and a host of other prophets, seems to think that I'm responsible for all the Evil in the World.

This one, in sixteen wildly written pages, tells me how to meet my God.

It may be foolish, but I enjoy these guardians who pluck my feet from the primrose path and set them so firmly in the straight and narrow way.

Victoria, City of Guardians, how I love it!

GIRL QUEEN GAVE CITY ITS NAME

Fort Victoria was named at an annual meeting of Hudson's Bay Company fur traders held at northern department headquarters, Fort Garry, now Winnipeg.

In those days of slow transportation, a far-flung point in the British Empire, Fort Victoria was named in honor of the girl queen who ascended the throne in 1837.

At an earlier date the governor and committee of the company in London, England, had decided to name the proposed fort Adelaide, in honor of the queen consort of William the Fourth, then reigning monarch. However, King William died in 1837 before the post was established.

VICTORIA'S LARGEST STATIONERY STORE

The history of Diggon's is as old as Victoria itself. The firm began as a book store exclusively in 1858, operated by T. N. Hibben. As time went on it began to add various lines of stationery and supplies and gradually developed into a thriving stationery business. Over the years Diggon's continued to grow until now it is the largest stationery store on Vancouver Island and stocks over 3,000 separate items . . . from a paper clip to a fireproof vault.

SOME RECOLLECTIONS OF OLD VICTORIA

We Went to Sunday School Picnic On 'Bus' Drawn by Four Horses

As Related By MARY ANN TOBIN

I was in Victoria when the first edition of the Times was published, but I don't remember anything about it. Girls of 10 in those days were not much interested in newspapers, and besides there were lots of other things to think about. It was about that time that our family moved in from the old home at Ross Bay to live over my father's store at Humboldt and Douglas.

We hated to leave the house at Ross Bay. It was on Fairfield Road, not far from where Arnold Street joins it now—a roomy place for our large family, with a veranda running around three sides. Of course the cemetery wasn't there in those days, just a big field stretching down to the sea.

A deep gully ran down to the bay, and coming out from town you had to cross a bridge on Fairfield Road just before you reached our house. There was another gully and another bridge farther along towards Gonzales.

We had several neighbors along the road. Just across from us on the north side of Fairfield lived Mr. R. E. Green, who was a teller in a bank. We played with his son and his daughter Katie. They had one of the few houses on that side of the road. Most of the land there was open, with trees and bushes.

M.T. and P.T.

The first house past ours belonged to Mr. Matthew T. Johnson. I remember that M. T. Johnson was frequently confused with P. T. Johnson, who was no relation. P. T. kept a nursery up Fort Street, beyond Central School.

Farther along, near the second bridge, was Tom Haughton's place. He sold goods from door to door, and a few years later opened a dry-goods store on Yates Street. Mrs. Haughton was well known for her work in the Baptist Church.

Beyond their house was a farm run by Chinese, and then you came to Henry Short's. He kept a gun and rifle shop on Fort St. a few yards below Broad, opposite Clay's Bakery.

Next was Mr. Elford's home. Elford Street was later named after one of his sons. And last on the road was Shotbolt's big home at the base of Gonzales hill. Mr. Shotbolt kept the well-known drug-store, which is still in business on Johnson St.

At Shotbolt's corner you could take the road to the right, down to Foul Bay. I don't think Fairfield Road went past that point then. It was all woods and rocks beyond Shotbolt's.

One of the big events of the year for us children was the annual Sunday School picnic. It would start off from the Reformed Episcopal Church on Humboldt Street. All the youngsters would pile into the "Young America" bus—that was the name painted on it. The four horses would pull it along Fairfield Road past our house and we would get on.

Picnic on Farm

It would turn down to Foul Bay when it reached Gonzales, and we would have the picnic on Shopland's farm, right on the waterfront. Then, coming home at 5 o'clock, the bus would slow down at our house and drop us off.

My brothers and sisters and I used to run up to Central School each morning. We could go along Fairfield Road, passing Judge Pemberton's house up on the rocks to the left—where his son Charteris and daughter Evelyn lived with him—and then up Moss Street. Or we could take a shortcut through Stelly's fields, which started almost opposite our house and filled up most of the right angle between Fairfield and Moss. There were bulls in the fields and we used to run to give them a wide berth.

Girls, Boys Split

At school the girls used all the upstairs classrooms and the boys were downstairs with men teachers. We had Mrs. Caldwell; Miss Williams, whose brother Ben owned a clothing store on Johnson St.; and Mrs. Brown—she was a great favorite with everyone and often came to visit my mother. Then there was Miss Armstrong, who taught the class just before high school; and, of course, Agnes Deans Cameron.

Farther up on Fort St. lived the Wilson family, later to have the well-known clothing store. One of the sons became manager of a wholesale grocery store on Yates Street, and the daughter later became the wife of Rev. W. J. V. Church, headmaster of Corrig College.

It was quite a change to move into town. Our store was on Humboldt Street, and Douglas Street ended right in front of it. Back of the store some cabins led down to the water's edge. That was long before the Empress Hotel and the Crystal Garden, of course, and the harbor ran through to Blanshard Street, beside the Reformed Episcopal Church.

They Shared House

Miners and dock workers rented the cabins, and quite often better educated men who wanted an inexpensive place to stay until they could establish themselves and send for their families. One of these was Mr. Luney, whose family soon became a welcome addition to the growing city.

Across Humboldt Street to the right, on a wedge-shaped piece of property, was J. B. Johnson's store, an uncle, I believe, of Byron Johnson.

A block west, on Penwell St., Tommy Horne and several other young men shared a house.

At dusk a man on horseback came around carrying a long torch and lit the street lights. One was on the corner where the Empress Hotel laundry now stands. I never got up early enough in the morning to learn how the lights were put out.

Soap Works

Westward, towards the church, was Weiler's furniture factory, and down the other way, where the Empress Hotel wing now is, was Pendray's Soap Works. Everybody was glad when they moved the soap factory across the harbor.

We bought beach logs from the Henley's for fuel for the store. They had been fairly near neighbors of ours on their place at Clover Point, grazing their cattle along the shore through Fairfield district and into Beacon Hill Park. Or one of our boys would take a wheelbarrow along Humboldt

IT'S REWARDING

'75 Years Loving This City'

Take a fast train, a foggy day and four persons riding in a rickety old Ford and you have the ingredients for one of the most hair-raising incidents in the activity-crammed life of Mrs. Ethel Margaret Moore, 75, of 5181 Cordova Bay Road.

"Visibility—well, there wasn't any," she said the other day. "We were driving between Port Alberni and Nanaimo when all of a sudden this train appeared out of the mist.

"I yelled, 'Look out!' but I yelled too late and the train hit us and shoved us off the road.

IN TOOLBOX

"We didn't find Delma—that's one of my daughters, aged three then—for half an hour. When we did she was in the toolbox. Heaven knows how she got there, but she wasn't hurt any."

Born in a house on Cook Street somewhere between Balmoral and Caledonia on March 5, 1884, Ethel was one of five children of a Saanich road construction foreman.

MRS. ETHEL MOORE
. . . Cedar Hill farm

"Later we had a farm—I've forgotten how many acres—on Cedar Hill Road. Memories? My, yes. The thrashers coming to the place every so often, mostly Indians—in fact, many's the time an Indian woman would disappear into the bushes while working and come out 30 minutes later with a papoose on her back.

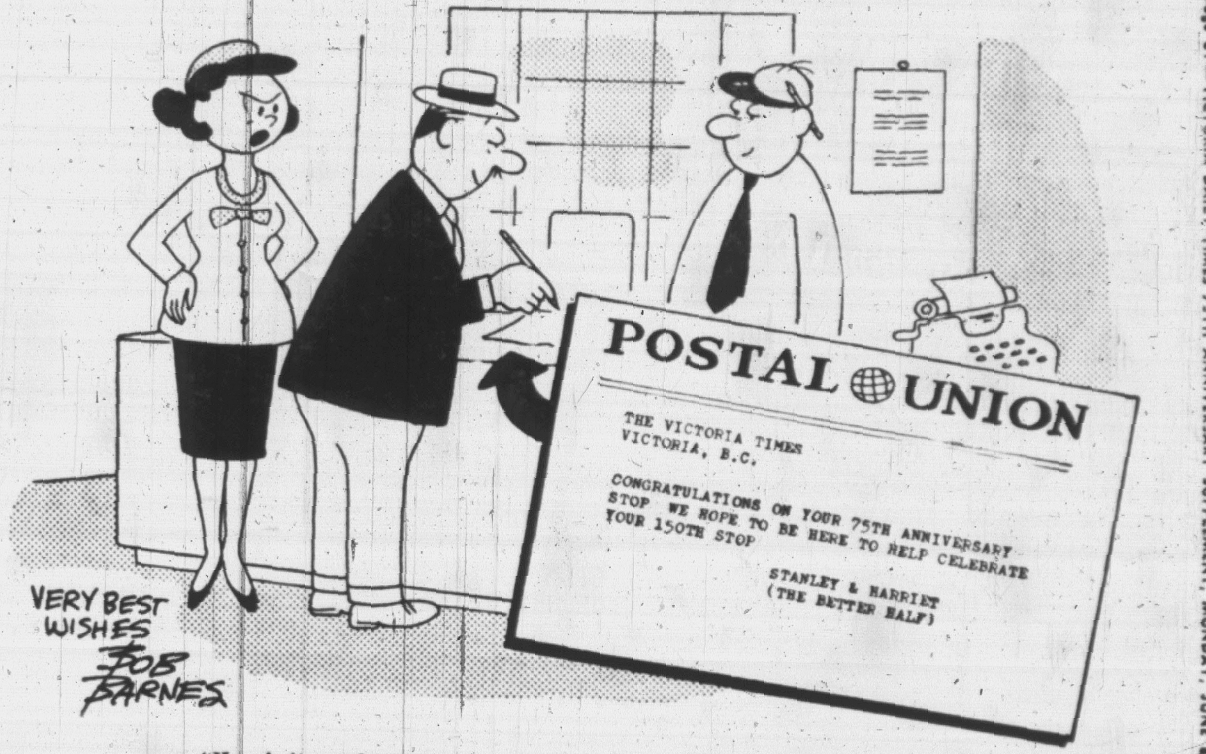
FIRST WHITE MAN

"Then there were the cows—I used to chase 'em and round 'em up on horseback. And did you know my uncle, Billy Irvine, was the first white man born on Vancouver Island?"

Ethel married William Moore at St. Aidan's at Cedar Hill Cross Road Sept. 16, 1903. "We were the first couple to be married there, I think" and they raised five daughters. All of them live in Victoria, four of them within 50 yards of each other on Cordova Bay Road.

"We are all native Victorians—we love the place so. I never saw anything grow so fast. Why, Cordova Bay had only a couple of farmhouses on it when I first came here.

"Those were the Tway and Carmichael families. Their descendants are still around here some place, I believe."



"How is it you have such a good memory for other people's anniversaries and can never remember your own?"

FIRST RAILWAY WITH A MICROWAVE
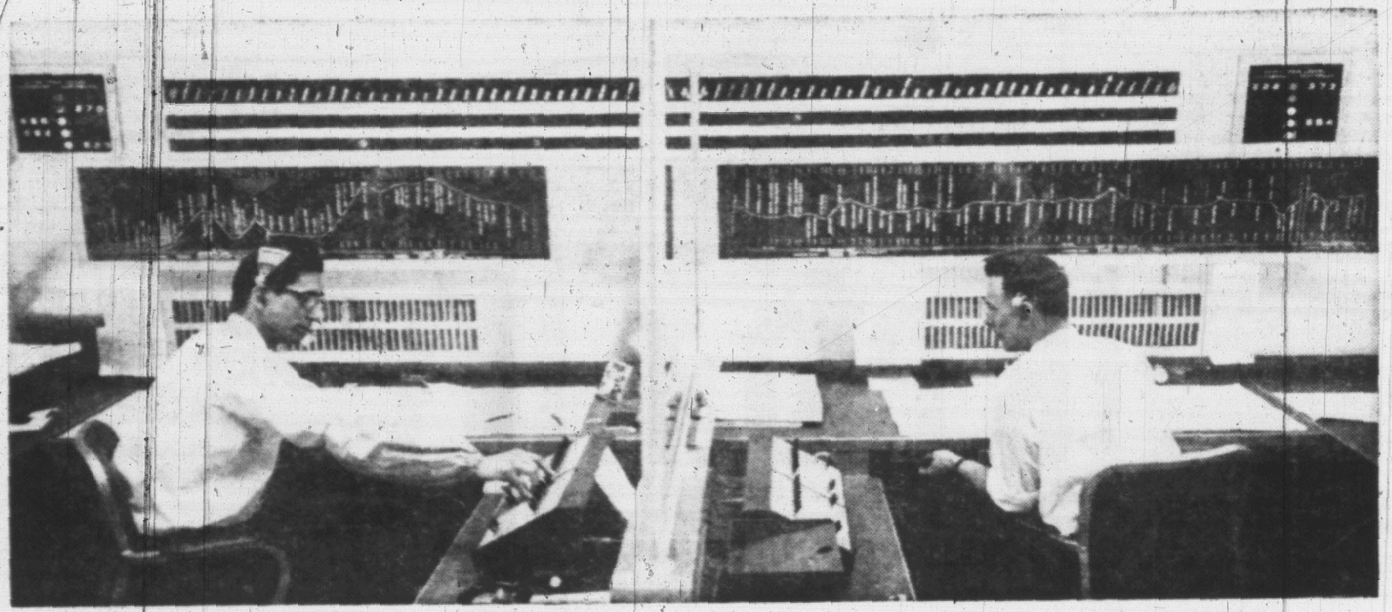
COMMUNICATIONS SYSTEM



Now the modern miracle of microwave provides the Pacific Great Eastern Railway with instant 2-way communication between trains, dispatch stations and the P.G.E.'s head office in Vancouver. Now, a railway official may contact a train in motion, a station on the line or head office by telephone—even a telephone in his car. And a dispatcher may contact a train in an instant.

The microwave affords greater economy, flexibility and dependability over its 790-mile length, than any other practical means of communication. The system is also revenue-producing. Channels in the microwave network are already being leased to other firms serving the north country.

The attainment of this milestone in railway communication marks another first for the P.G.E. First with a completely dieselized railway system in Canada, and now first with the most modern railway communication system in the world. The P.G.E. takes another progressive step in its service to the people of British Columbia.

Street to the coal store (where the Black Ball ferry wharf is now) and buy a sack for 50 cents.

Up Douglas Street hill, facing our store, was the home of Peter McQuade, the ship chandler. Next was Dr. Davy's house and office, and on the corner of Rae Street, now called Courtenay, was Dr. Hart's place. Farther up, across Douglas where the Sussex Hotel now stands, Dr. Fraser had his home and office.

Indians used to pull their canoes up on the mud flats below the Reformed Episcopal Church and camp there. There were a lot of cabins strung along the shore too. You could go down by the big wooden bridge, where the Causeway now is, and buy a salmon from an Indian for "ikt quarter," or a piece of clothing. And you didn't need to know much Chinook to do it.

Off to Cariboo

My father, John Cox, had come out to British Columbia as a miner with the Royal Engineers. Later he did contract work for the city, and I remember one of the jobs was shoring up the beach bank with crib work on Dallas Road, near the foot of Douglas. But he had prospecting in his blood and several times set out for the Cariboo to try his luck, and also went to the Klondike. One of his friends was Peter Leach, and he often went out to Leach River with him to pan for gold.

My special friend when I was in my teens was Annie Jones, who is living at Cowichan now, I believe. Her father ran a boathouse where the Black Ball Ferry wharf stands today, renting rowboats and canoes. An outing up the Gorge was popular in those days. Annie and I often took a rowboat out in the harbor.

It was about that time that a city policeman, Mr. Cameron, offered to take me across to the Songhees reserve one night to see an Indian potlatch. I was a little frightened at the prospect, and invited Annie along for company.

The Indians sat around a fire in a huge circle, in front of their big community house, just about where the Sidney Roofing plant is today, and beat on flat boards with sticks. The woman took part, too, and the loud chanting scared me. Then the chief gave out presents and made a speech. Very few white people went to such affairs. I was glad to leave long before it was over.

No Totem Poles

The local Indians didn't have totem poles. I don't ever remember seeing one as a child.

Another time Mr. Cameron took the two of us into Chinatown, which was much different from the present modern district. Annie wanted to see an opium den, so Mr. Cameron took us down an alley and pushed a door open. I was afraid to look, but Annie took a quick peek and said it was full of men asleep. That might have been just Mr. Cameron's little joke, but it was real enough to us.

Wooden Bridge

The Johnson Street bridge was just a wooden one then, but big enough to carry wagons. The Indians used to sit along the Johnson Street sidewalks with their children. Wharf Street was a popular meeting place for them too.

The Hudson's Bay Company had a store on Wharf Street near the Johnson Street bridge. There were a lot of wholesale places along there — J. H. Todd's, Earle's grocery (he lived up Fort Street and later was elected to the legislature), and others. Then, nearer the inner harbor, was the Customs House, the red brick building which still stands at the foot of Broughton Street.

It was a rough town in some ways. There were many saloons and a great coming and going of miners, longshoremen and frontier characters. But we rarely saw anyone drunk on the streets, and I cannot ever remember one of us girls being spoken to or bothered in any way. We had no fear of coming home after dark at any time, and I can't recall ever hearing anyone swearing on the streets. "Delinquents" hadn't even been invented.

One of the street hazards in the early days, though, was when they landed herds of cattle at the foot of Fort Street and drove them through town and out past the Willows.

There would be a drover on horseback in front and one at the rear and a third riding at the side. They would run the cattle along the dusty street with loud yells and everyone scurried into shop doorways to escape the hooves.

I remember once having to run into Fell's Grocery (Mr. Fell became mayor of the city) at the corner of Fort and Broad, where later Copas' Grocery did business. I always had a fear of those cattle.

Once after I was grown up I got the scare of my life. I was out for a ride with Mrs. George Mellor in her buggy. We were on Fort Street near the Oak Bay junction when a band of cattle came along. We quickly parked the buggy beside the wooden sidewalk. One of the cowboys rode up and said "Keep still and they won't hurt you." He stayed near us while the herd surged by, and luckily the horse didn't take fright.

THRIVING INDUSTRY in Victoria in 1888 was the John Kurtz Cigar Manufactory. It had a healthy payroll as the gathering of employees on front canopy indicates. The premises was located at the corner of Trounce Alley and Government Street. Classical coach in front of the building was popular to the times.

town in our two-wheeled cart. It was drawn by old Jim, who had been a fire horse until a leg injury retired him to an easier life.

We had got nearly to the door of the stable, on the site where the Coach Lines depot has just been torn down — I think it was called Barnard's stable at that time — when the wheel on my side of the cart came off and dumped me into the street. I was shaken up but not hurt, and we left the cart at the stable to be fixed while we went on with our shopping.

One of the most popular forms of outing for Victorians in the 'nineties was to go on an excursion. Everybody went and it was a great family treat. The old "Yosemite" would pull out for Seattle at seven o'clock in the morning. It was supposed to return at 7 p.m., but more often would not leave Seattle until then and would get back to Victoria at 11.

Different Victoria lodges and fraternal orders such as the IOOF and the K of P would sponsor the trips and I still have a collection of the fancy satin lapel badges that everyone wore. The fare was $1.00. When the Fifth Regiment were the sponsors they provided a band. Meals were served on board, though many people brought their own lunches. But one of the main attractions of the day was to find a good restaurant in Seattle and "dine out" in style.

Now and then an excursion was run to Port Townsend, and later on, when there was a boom to sell lots in Port Angeles, trips were run across to there.

One of the biggest treats of my girlhood was when I was 11, and my oldest brother, Will, home from working at the canneries on the Fraser River, took my oldest sister and me on a week's holiday to New Westminster.

Fair Week

It was my first trip on a steamer. The Princess Louise ran two or three times a week between Victoria and New Westminster. (We still called Vancouver Coal Harbor and it was hardly on the map).

It was Fair Week in New Westminster, and a lot of Victorians went over for the celebrations. My brother installed us in a quiet rooming house and took a room at a hotel for himself. I remember it was raining when we landed, but that didn't bother us a bit.

We went to the fair every day. There were fireworks on the river at night. We saw Holy Trinity, the log church, where our father and mother had been married, and went out to Sapperton to visit Mrs. Sarah Jackman, who had been mother's matron of honor. It was a wonderful week.

People had much less in those days and seemed to enjoy it so much more. There wasn't the present-day urge to have something new every week.

Best Wishes to the

HONKY-TONKS TO LEGITIMATE THEATRE, VICTORIA HAD EVERYTHING

Show Business Greats Came To 'Entertainment Capital'

By PHIL LEE

Out of the city's early age was to emerge one of the entertainment capitals of the Pacific Northwest, bringing some of the most illustrious names in the history of show business, names like the Keanes, David Belasco, Sarah Bernhardt, Anna Pavlova, Ignace Paderewski, Anna Held, John Philip Sousa, Sir John Martin Harvey, the Barrymores, Sir Harry Lauder, Jan Kubelik, Katharine Hepburn, Bing Crosby and Bob Hope.

But in the comparatively early days of [illegible] the arrival of the sailing ship Princess Royal from England was the highlight of the [illegible] year, when [illegible] would hear of "home," [illegible] the latest gossip and news from abroad and [illegible] up on the [illegible] books and plays [illegible]. Then it was [illegible] the Commissioner [illegible] the [illegible] of the [illegible] and what had been [illegible] gone forever.

With or after this horde of gold-hungry men came "the girls," the entertainers, many of them undoubtedly prototypes of Diamond Lil and Klondike Kate, the type of girls which has followed the gold-rushes trail since the beginning of history.

There was drinking and dancing and carousing in innumerable honky-tonks and saloons. Victoria was a town wide open. The gold-seekers were hungry for excitement and entertainment of a kind was what they got.

First legitimate theatre was Royal on Government Street (with porch front).

Fortunately, however, early in Victoria's [illegible] youth there were those who wanted a certain element of culture in their entertainment. It was this clique of public-spirited citizens which was responsible for the building of the first legitimate theatre, in 1863, the Old Theatre Royal.

As far as one can glean from press accounts of the time the Old Theatre Royal's stage was graced by various amateur productions with the odd company from San Francisco and Portland filling in. It wasn't a matter of a quick airplane flight in those days. It was a long, arduous 600-mile voyage by sea from San Francisco to Victoria and the same back! As an example of what the Victorian of 1859 could expect in way of entertainment can be gathered from the following press report:

"Victoria Theatre. There will be a grand performance this evening. The Orrin family will give an entire change of their wonderful feats and Md'lle Lameroux will appear in several good dances. A large crowd is expected to attend."

However, in December 1864 the old wooden theatre on a street made up of ramshackled buildings came into its own. Those in control had persuaded the great Shakespearean players Charles and Ellen Keane to make the trip from San Francisco at the time when the U.S. civil war was at its bitterest.

ON TO FAME

In brilliant company that night a lad from St. Louis College, David Belasco, made his debut at 11 as the boy Duke of York in "Richard III." Belasco, of course, went on to fame and fortune in New York as theatre magnate, actor, playwright, film producer and impresario.

The Old Theatre Royal wasn't the only theatre in town according to the press of the time. Although Mr. Fawcett, covering that phase of Victoria years later in his book, dismissed this with a brief reference to "another sort of theatre that was used for nigger minstrel performances and concert hall business being situated under Goodacre's butcher shop," records mention that a Victoria Theatre was originally located in the lower floor of the Assembly Building on Broad Street in 1859. In March of that year the Chapman family was the first touring company ever to visit here.

BUT ROYAL VICTORIA FORGED AHEAD

Precarious Business Even Then

Later the same year, in September, E. S. Conner, and party played in accommodation fitted up in the Royal Hotel on Wharf Street, while in October an impromptu theatre was rigged up in Reid and McDonald's warehouse for an amateur production by the officers of HMS Ganges.

Early in 1860, it seems, the Chapman family fitted up a theatre in a former music hall on Government Street which became known as the Colonial Theatre, their first play being "The Stranger." At this time plays were still offered in the Royal Theatre, also in the Union Hotel, where J. O. Cusheon had fixed up a theatre.

Then, later in the year, Robinson gave up the Royal and in 1861 opened the Victoria Theatre in which Mr. and Mrs. James Stark made their initial appearance. However, Robinson shortly abandoned the Victoria Theatre and continued his productions at the Colonial.

MUSIC HALL

Still another theatre operating during this period was Moore's Music Hall located over Moore's drygoods store. And when both the Victoria Theatre and Colonial were forced to suspend operations for a time Moore's was the only theatre doing business. Evidently show business was just as precarious then as it is now.

Gradually, however, it was the Victoria or Royal Theatre, as it was eventually to be called, that forged ahead of its competitors.

By 1869, Victoria had gradually become part of a theatrical circuit whose hub was San Francisco.

On March 31, 1885, the cornerstone was laid for the Old Royal Theatre which was opened amidst pomp and pageantry on Oct. 16. The theatre was on Douglas street where the T. Eaton Company now stands. And where Eaton's is located on Broad and View stood the famous Driard hotel. And there the Old Royal remained until the building was purchased by David Spencer Ltd. in 1914 and the present Royal was erected.

FAMOUS NAMES

Among the famous names of their day to appear on stage was Pauline Johnson, daughter of a full-blooded Mohawk chief, who in September of '95 recited her original poetry.

Two years previously, just after the Royal was painted, making it "a little gem among Pacific Coast playhouses," world champion James J. Corbett presented his dramatic company in a new play called "Gentleman Jack." And in 1896 the "U.S.'s most famous actor," Richard Mansfield, appeared in "A Parisian Romance." This was the year that John Philip Sousa and his world famous band made their thrilling bow to Victoria audiences. He was to return 30 years later.

Meanwhile, back in England of the early 1890s, young

ROAMIN IN TH' GLOAMIN'
Another popular entertainer here was the world renowned Scot, Sir Harry Lauder.

Cliff Denham was being instructed by his brother-in-law in the gentle art of persuading Britons to migrate to Canada. Armed with one of the first practical motion picture cameras he bravely set forth to cross the sea and tour the principal cities of the nation filming a picture for the Canadian Pacific entitled "Living in Canada." The finished work showed harvesting, lumbering, industrial plants in operation, commercial salmon fishing. The pictures were then returned to England for processing, the film being shown at corn exchanges, lecture halls and other meeting places of small communities.

THREE TRIPS

In all Mr. Denham made three trips across Canada. On his second visit he brought back all the pictures that had been shown in England and started projecting them in Montreal's Windsor Hotel, Massey Hall in Toronto and every major theatre across the country, including Victoria. They were such a hit that often the showings would be held over by popular demand.

When this job was completed he returned to Montreal meaning to sail home. Then he remembered an invitation extended to him once in England that if he were ever on this side of the Atlantic he was to sure to call on S. Klaw of Klaw and Erlanger who, with the Shuberts, were the biggest theatrical impresarios of the time.

ON TOUR

The upshot of his call was that young Denham was immediately engaged and set out with Klaw to tour the length and breadth of the United States and Canada, buying, renting or leasing theatres for their productions wherever they went.

"When we were here," Mr. Denham recalled with a chuckle, "we leased the Old Victoria Theatre. After that Mr. Klaw and I started the long journey back to New York. But by then I had fallen in love with Victoria and when we got to San Francisco I asked him if he would make me manager."

VICTORIANS HEARD HER— Among the world "greats" to come to Victoria in the old days was the great coloratura soprano Amelita Galli-Curci.

That was in 1898, the year of the Klondike strike and Victoria once again was serving as an outfitting headquarters for the gold-hungry hordes. Mr. Denham has been here ever since.

HECTIC DAYS

A seemingly inexhaustible source of Victoriana he loves to recall the hectic, wide-open days before the turn of the century and just afterwards, the days when the Royal Navy was based at Esquimalt and there were theatrical names to conjure with.

In those days, he said, there were scores of saloons, including a variety of honky-tonks where gay blades and gay ladies combined in songs and dances of dubious merit.

Your Window on the World

For 75 years the Victoria Times has opened a window on the world.

The view has been ever-changing; a passing parade which has made news, and sometimes, history. We too have seen the passing parade. We too have been in business a long time—since 1880.

As one "old-timer" to another, we congratulate our good friend, the Victoria Times, on its 75th Anniversary of service to the people of Victoria.

Then of course, he continued, there was the storied Savoy Theatre on Government Street where almost everyone in Victoria wound up sooner or later. It was opened on May 22 1899 when the city's population was about 20,000 and Charles E. Redfern was mayor. Modern day Victorians would know the Savoy as the Rio recently pulled down to make room for progress in the name of a parking lot.

During his regime as manager of the Old Royal Theatre and the modern counterpart, Mr. Denham recalled in long fancy some of the theatre's immortals.

The great Paderewski, he remembered, always insisted on playing in a subdued light so that his hands were in the shadows. This naturally caused some disappointment on the part of the audience.

"We didn't make a cent on him you know. His price was so high we just scaled the house to break even."

From that moment on some of the great names of show business were destined to play the "modern" Royal. There was Robert B. Mantell in "King Lear" and "Richelieu" in 1914, the same year that Stratford-on-Avon Players did Hamlet and Shylock with F. R. Benson and De Wolf Hopper in Gilbert and Sullivan. John Drew played in "Rosemary" in '15. The great danseuse Anna Pavlova danced and the unforgettable Amelita Galli-Curci sang. Victorians tingled as the "Student Prince," "Blossom Time" and "Chu Chin Chow" came to town with their original New York companies.

Among the world's great singers to appear in Victoria around that time were Melba, Clara Butt, Sembrach and Albani.

In 1914 the Quinland Opera Company, 125 strong, stopped over on their way back to Ireland from Australia. The 40-piece orchestra they brought with them made it necessary to remove the first two rows of seats.

THE DUMBELLS

Then there was Jascha Heifetz, also Emma Trentini in Victor Herbert's "The Firefly," Sir John Martin Harvey, John and Ethel Barrymore, William Faversham, E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe and, of course, the Dumbells, were but a few of the stars to play the boards in the early days at the Royal.

Just after the turn of the century the Old Royal commenced introducing motion pictures which had romped to popularity with Edwin Porter's 1903 production, the epoch making "The Great Train Robbery," the first motion picture to tell a story.

Then there was the Victoria Musical Society of the 1911 era who presented Josef Hofmann in such vehicles as "Time, Place and the Girl" and "The Merry Widow."

With the war over, the Royal settled down to being the city's only legitimate theatre playing host to the RKO vaudeville circuit.

CAME TO END

In 1946 however the plush days of the Royal came to an end. The trimmings and furbelows of another era were taken away and the Royal was renovated for motion pictures. However ever since then the theatre has continued to play host to visiting artists such as Katharine Hepburn, and companies like "Oklahoma!" which played town in December 1949.

The Royal is also the "home" of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra.

In the period surrounding the opening of the New Royal the city's theatre vista was expanding impressively. On Nov. 17, 1913, the Variety Theatre opened (really a renovation of the late Kinemacolor Theatre on Government Street) to a crowded house. The vaudeville offerings as reviewed in the press the following day "were all that could be desired." The two comedy reels "The Bully" and "The Turkish Bath" caused no end of laughter. There was a continuous performance from 1.30 to 11 p.m. Any seat on the floor was 10 cents.

NOW PLAZA

The same year the old AOUW Hall which was opened at 808 Yates St. on Oct. 5, 1894, was re-opened as the Princess Theatre. Later it became the Playhouse Theatre, then the Plaza.

In its day the Plaza has been the scene of political rallies, lodge meetings, walkathons, legitimate theatre and finally motion pictures. Across its boards in the early days such companies as the Mildred Page Players offered "East Lynne," "Peg O' My Heart" and "The Bells." There was the Williams Stock company, the Pearl Allan Stock company with Mr. Allan's step-daughter, Verna Felton, who was to do well in Hollywood and TV. They showed the first movie classic there, "The Birth of a Nation."

Outstanding actors such as Sir Ralph Richardson played the Playhouse in those days.

in "Our Mary" and, of course, there were the Comptons, Frank and his wife. And who can forget the magic of 'cellist Pablo Casals whom Fritz Kreisler described as the greatest musician ever to draw a bow?

Then, somewhere along in the late 1920s, Ralph Calladine bought the theatre and turned it into the motion-picture house it is today. Mr. Calladine eventually sold it to the J. Arthur Rank organization.

On Aug. 12, 1913, work started on the new Pantages Theatre on Government Street which was to cost $125,000.

VAUDEVILLE

The first Pantages had operated around 1908 on lower Johnson Street and later in The Rio. However, after completion of the Government Street house, Alexander Pantages always offered his vaudeville there.

The Pantages eventually became the Empire, then the York and, finally, the Totem.

Victoria's first theatre built exclusively for motion-pictures, the Dominion, was erected on Yates Street in 1914.

It was followed in 1918 by the Capitol, almost across the street, by which time the "moom pitcher" craze had swept North America firmly into its grasp.

Victoria was swept along with the rest of the world through the era of the silent movies until in the late twenties the films began to talk and sing.

TO SOUND

The Dominion was converted to sound in 1929, the Capitol following suit shortly thereafter.

It was in 1936 that Victoria added two more movie houses, the Atlas on Yates Street and the Oak Bay on Oak Bay Avenue.

After the Second World War three more theatres were built, the Arthur J. Rank house, the Odeon (he also purchased the Plaza), in 1948, the independent Fox on Quadra, near Hillside, in 1949, and the Tillicum outdoor theatre in 1951.

After these came television—nine channels in all—which proved to be a deadly foe to the motion-picture form of entertainment.

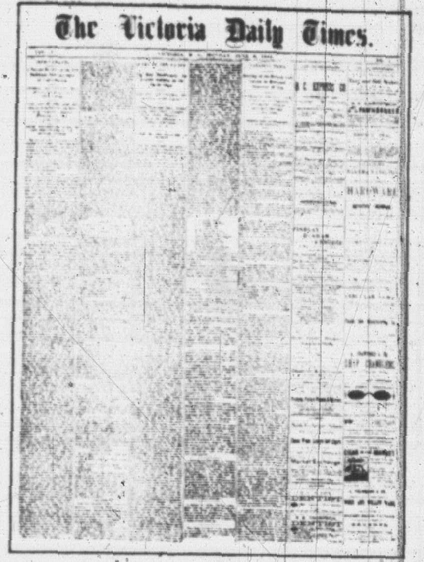
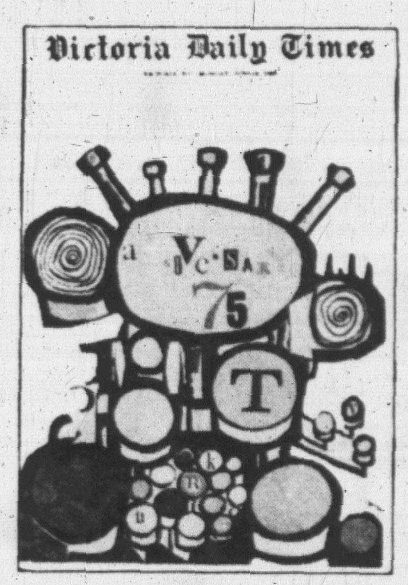
Times Change

The Times Changes



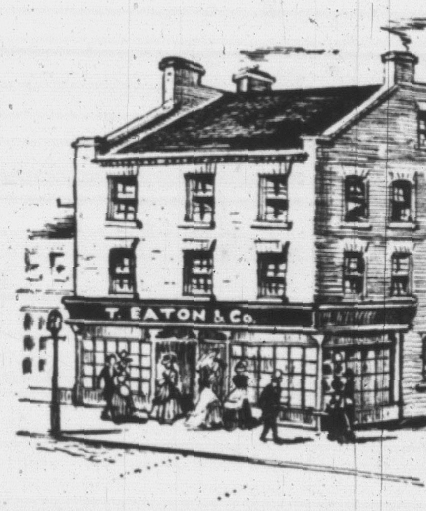
The Victoria Daily Times.

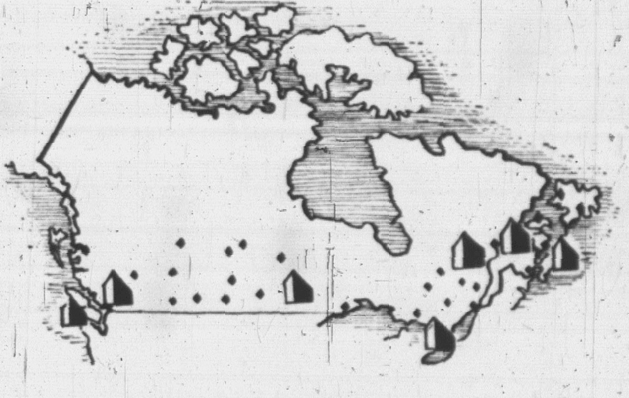


Victoria Daily Times

At first glance, little resemblance can be seen between the Times of 1884 and the Times delivered to your door today. Printing methods have changed, paper has changed, writing styles have changed—yet for all these changes, the Victoria Daily Times remains basically the same. It remains a journal dedicated to bringing news, entertainment, and informed comment to the homes of Victoria, just as it was on the day its first issue was published.

EATON'S Too, Has Changed





—but again, the changes are on the surface. Despite the tremendous growth of the Company—from one store in 1869, to the largest department store organization in the British Commonwealth today—the basic principles laid down by Timothy Eaton are still followed. He insisted on "a square deal for those who buy from us, those who sell to us, and those who work for us." This policy, applied to dealings with our customers, is summed up by the EATON Guarantee:

without whose generous treatment "Caddy" might not have survived the waves of insanity which enveloped the early critics who pledged to drive him back to the subterranean passages from which they thought he had come.

"Caddy" has taken unto himself a personality and has been a source of much enjoyment to people everywhere, even among the unbelievers. His antics, such as his gobbling up of seagulls, ducks and fish (all non-eviscerated) the way he winks his left eye, the power of his tail (don't misspell that) and the curl of his mane, delight the readers.

SEEN BY 600 !

Over 600 people have permitted their names to be used as true and honorable witnesses to the existence of "Caddy". True, no one has so far photographed him. I have a feeling that no one will, because presence of mind vanishes when in the presence of "Caddy".

Take the case of our good citizen and photographer, Wilfred Gibson. On his way to Duncan, with a camera in his car, he dipped down to Mill Bay and there, frolicking among the log booms, was "Caddy". Gibson dashed to the booms to get a better look. Did he remember his camera? No!

Caddy has always been a favorite subject for cartoonists. The Times has a standing offer of $300 for an authentic photo.

Then, there was Commander Clayards, security officer of the Navy at Esquimalt. He was fishing off the base when "Caddy", propelling himself at unstated knots, surfaced near his boat.

TERRIFIED

"I don't mind admitting that I was terrified, especially when he snapped his jaws," said the commander. "If I had had a camera I'm quite sure I wouldn't have been able to use it as I was so fixed by the strange sight."

And another thing. Nobody's going to catch my "Caddy" or kill my "Caddy".

One morning an opposition paper, which had never been too friendly towards "Caddy", mainly because the public would not accept their suggested name of "Amy" (can you imagine a sea serpent tagged with "Amy"?) announced that a boatman in Saanich Inlet had killed "Caddy". The story told in gruesome detail of how the boatman spotted "Caddy" reveling in the sunlight, charged at him at full speed and cut him to pieces. The waters of the Inlet flowed red in blood.

CRUEL, STUPID

Cruel? Yes, but stupid. How could any boatman do a thing like that? He soon regretted it.

A frenzy of resentment against the boatman developed. Plans were made to call in the SPCA.

But, "Caddy," never a chap to see even an enemy hurt, came to the rescue of the boatman. The Times was able to announce to a wrought-up citizenry that "Caddy" had reappeared off the Victoria waterfront. He seemed quite normal and his appetite was good, as instanced by the number of ducks he consumed.

Most of our people and, especially our visitors, would like to catch a glimpse, even a fleeting one, of "Caddy" and have their names enshrined on the Honor Roll.

I wish I could guarantee his appearance at prescribed hours but there are difficulties. For instance, some biologists have concluded that he hibernates in the winter. I disagree with this.

IN AUTUMN

My association wth "Caddy" convinces me that the best time to see him is in the autumn, or from early August until late November. He seems to have a close relationship with the salmon run, especially; the big fellows, the Tyees.

The best place to see him? Anywhere within a triangle formed by Trial Island, Discovery Island and Gordon Head, which takes in his most popular haunt, Cadboro Bay.

Have I seen him? Sorry, not yet!

aboard the Empress of Asia and spent an informal week-end, though crowds cheered him ashore from the vessel.

Beacon fires blazed and the city was especially illuminated for the arrival of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth in 1939.

It was a thunderous welcome by the huge crowds lining streets. This stands today as the most endearing of all royal visits to this part of the world.

On March 30, 1941, Governor General, the Earl of Athlone was hailed here, together with Princess Alice. The tune then was "There'll Always Be An England."

The third and last visit of Prince George, Duke of Kent came in the 1941 war year on Aug. 7. As air commodore, he inspected military establishments. He was killed in 1942 in an air crash in Scotland.

V-E Day had just been *marked when the Earl of Ath*lone and Princess Alice paid their second visit to Victoria, arriving at Patricia Bay, May 10, 1945. They spent five quiet days in Government House.

On Oct. 22, 1951, some 60,000 Victorians greeted Princess Elizabeth, now Queen Elizabeth, and the Duke of Edinburgh, Prince Philip, who stepped off HMS Crusader.

It was almost a rest for them after the hurly burly of their cross-Canada tour. They had temporary quiet in an up-Island resort.

In 1954 Prince Philip, on the West Coast to open the British Empire Games, touched Victoria on a Sunday and inspected Pacific Command personnel at HMCS Naden.

And in 1955 the Princess Royal, Dowager Countess of Harewood, aunt of the present Queen, spent six days on Vancouver Island during her Canadian tour. She arrived Oct. 15, inspected army units and talked with veterans in hospital.

Now, we have a Queen, whom most Victorians have seen before, but not as the head of Commonwealth . . .

The first city in western Canada to adopt the street car, the telephone and to establish a daily newspaper, Victoria continues to show a progressive spirit in developing her natural resources.

As a world port the city is strategically located on sea lanes leading to Japan, China, the Philippines, India, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand and South America.

Vancouver Island has the greatest remaining stand of soft wood commercial timber in the world, approximately 89 billion feet, the only high grade bituminous coal field on the Pacific Coast, and deposits of iron, copper, gold, limestone, silver and other minerals.

JOHN NELSON
... heeded call of west

New Spirit Breathed Into Times By Nelson Brothers From East

John Nelson, president of International Rotary in 1933-34, directed the destinies of the Victoria Times during the hectic first years of the Twentieth Century.

A native of Paisley, Ont., where he was born in 1873, John Nelson heeded the call of the West in 1899. While looking over the prospects in Victoria, he met William Templeman, publisher and owner of the struggling Times. Templeman was anxious to further the cause of Liberalism, which he championed so stoutly in his paper, by becoming a standard-bearer.

SAFE MAN

Nelson looked like a safe man to leave the Times with, and Templeman went off to Ottawa to become a Senator and later a minister of the Crown.

John Nelson was a solidly-built man with a swarthy complexion, black hair. He dressed immaculately and carried a gold-headed cane.

He was a pillar of Metropolitan Methodist Church. Socially, he was highly regarded, but his gentlemanly polish did not deter him from doing a lot of hard-hitting in the columns of The Times. He brought his brother, O. H. Nelson, from the East and made him city editor.

NEW SPIRIT

The two Nelsons set about breathing a new spirit into the paper.

John Nelson worked in a musty cubicle at the rear of the small general office of The Times. Smack up against his ear was the new 24-page Hoe press, which, when it was rolling, smothered all conversation and halted most office work.

John Nelson continued as general manager of The Times until after the national election, fought over the reciprocity issue, in 1911, when Templeman and his chief, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, went down to defeat.

John Nelson looked over the newspaper field in Vancouver and purchased the Vancouver World, a predecessor of the present Sun. He kept this paper moving throughout the First World War's difficult days.

A new profession was emerging in the east, public relations. After he sold the Vancouver World, John Nelson had an attractive offer from the president of the Sun Life Insurance Co., which was adjusting itself to a new expansion from its massive head office in Dominion Square, Montreal.

MANY HONORS

In 1922, John Nelson set out on a brilliant career which brought many honors to him. As supervisor of public relations for Sun Life, his attractive personality and appearance led him far afield.

When he was an active newspaper man, he had sensed the possibilities of an Imperial Press Conference. He attended the first one held in London and continued to attend succeeding ones until the time of his death.

His tenure on the Pacific Coast had aroused in his mind the challenge of what in those days was known as "The Pacific Bowl." He was one of the founders of the Institute of Pacific Relations and was always an active member.

Later, he became one of the founders of the Canadian Institute of International Affairs and held a membership in the Royal Institute of International Affairs.

HEART ATTACK

He was an early member of Rotary Clubs and the YMCA, and in Montreal developed a strong interest in them. At the convention of International Rotary in Boston, Mass., in 1933, he was unanimously elected president.

He was attending a Rotary convention in Chicago in 1936 when he was stricken with a heart attack and died.

Strait Swimming Fever Gripped City

By MONTE ROBERTS

There have been times when The Times got a gleam in its eye.

One of these times was in 1954, when The Times was well along in years, but still very young at heart.

And the gleam in the eye of The Times, at that time, had to do with something which people said couldn't be done.

What people said couldn't be done was to swim the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

The Times' idea was to encourage swimmers to tackle the 18.3-mile crossing from Victoria to Port Angeles.

To be completely frank, the gleam in the eye of The Times wasn't focussed on fame, honor, and glory for the successful swimmer if he or she were to emerge victorious.

The eye of The Times was levelled on something else, and you could call it mundane if you would.

Publicity for the city of Victoria.

One of the best ways to get publicity is to do something which has never been done before; even to attempt to do it is reasonably sure of being recorded in the public prints around the world.

CELEBRATING 50 YEARS OF SERVICE TO CANADIANS

Times Owner Went to Jail

Griffiths R. Hughes, who published the Victoria Times for three years, then went to jail for five years, was remembered by his staff as the best Santa Claus in their vocation. Each Christmas Eve he handed everyone, including the office boy, an envelope containing $50, which he had cheerfully removed from the till.

Griffith Hughes was a Welshman and he had been a friend of Lloyd George before he came to Canada in 1899. He made considerable money in real estate transactions in Vancouver, then moved to Victoria to open an office as an auditor and chartered accountant. Among the influential clients he attracted was David Spencer Ltd. department store. He continued to serve the firm for 13 years as financial adviser.

Hughes bought a large farm at Cobble Hill and began building up a herd of pure-bred cattle. When the executors of the Templeman estate sought to dispose of The Times, Hughes came up with the money to take it over. In time it was shown that he had embezzled the money from his employers.

Hughes's reign at The Times began on the day the Canadians were making history by capturing Vimy Ridge, April 9, 1917.

Three years later W. B. Monteith, who worked for Hughes as a chartered accountant, discovered discrepancies in the books of David Spencer Ltd.

Hughes was arrested and appeared in City Police Court on July 16, 1920, charged on four counts of embezzlement.

Victorians, who had regarded Hughes highly, were stunned when they read, in The Times of the serious nature of the charges, involving money reported to have run as high as $325,000.

Crowds pressed tightly in and about the Police Court when the preliminary hearing was held. Inside, 200 persons stood for three hours to hear the evidence. Another 100 persons milled about outside the police station. Others climbed the fire escapes and opened windows to see the proceedings. Still others opened transoms and peeked in. Several persons fainted in the crush.

TOOK $325,000

Testimony revealed that Hughes had started taking money from Spencer's in a small way, then larger amounts, and that he would make restitution "to the last farthing."

He himself had estimated his illegal takings as $325,000. When the enormity of the situation dawned on Hughes he contemplated suicide. He wrote three letters, then sat down to read a book before shooting himself. The subject matter of the book caused him to change his mind.

As part restitution, Hughes transferred The Times, the deed to his Cobble Hill farm and other holdings to a trustee, Gerald G. McGeer, then an MLA, later mayor of Vancouver, a Senator and married to one of David Spencer's daughters.

Hughes was committed for trial and there was much talk in town before the case came before the Grand Jury. The defense story was being looked forward to with great interest.

However, the Grand Jury returned a true bill against Hughes and when the charge was read in the Assize Court on Oct. 6, 1920, his lawyer entered a plea of guilty. H. A. Maclean, K.C., counsel for Hughes, presented no defense evidence but made a plea for clemency.

Quickly, sentence was passed Five years in the penitentiary on each of seven counts, sentences to run concurrently. Hughes took the sentence "stoically."

There were no more Christmas bonuses but he did leave to the editorial side of his former paper a stout reason for refusing to refrain from publishing the name of any person, no matter how high his rank, who appeared in the police court.

Our Sincere

Best Wishes

Prosperity through foresight . . .

The fisheries have played a major role in the development of British Columbia. Important in furthering the progress of this province during the next hundred years is wise planning for the conservation of the Pacific salmon and other fishes.

The Salmon itself is a multi-million dollar industry, a vital export. It provides both food and sport, a living symbol of this Province.

The very plenitude of the Salmon often makes people take this magnificent fish for granted. But when streams become polluted or obstructed the fish die and fail to reach the spawning grounds, large salmon runs disappear — witness what happened to the sockeye salmon runs of the Fraser River, now happily restored.

Conservation is everybody's business. It should be the concern of people in high and low places, in industry, among fishing fleets and sportsmen, just as it is the concern of the Department of Fisheries of the Government of Canada. This is the surest way to assure plenty of salmon in the next century.

For interesting information about the salmon and other B.C. species write to the Department for free copies of "Fisheries Fact Sheets."

naded the party in the reporter's boat. A line was reached over from the ship and cigars and drinkables, etc., were tied to it, and immediately hoisted and distributed to those lucky passengers to whom they were addressed."

There were some important marriages recorded by The Times within a few months of its first publication:

"A marriage last night the marriage of Mr. Henry Rhodes, teller of the Bank of British Columbia, and Miss Marian Bagnall, only daughter of J. Bagnall, a well-known merchant of this city, was celebrated in St. John's Church. Miss Bagnall and the bridesmaid, Miss Jenns, were elegantly dressed and could be taken as fine specimens of the handsome ladies of Victoria.

"The groom was supported by Mr. Herbert Kent at the conclusion of the service by Rev. Percival Jenns the party left the church amid the pealing of the wedding march on the organ and the joyful ringing of the church bells and were entertained at the residence of the bride's father."

"A notable marriage At 11 o'clock this morning the marriage of two well-known young people of Victoria took place at Christ Church.

"Mr. D. M. Eberts, the popular attorney, and Miss Charles, the charming daughter of Mr. William Charles of the Hudson's Bay Company, were united in marriage in the presence of a great concourse of people. The Rev. Bishop Hills performed the ceremony, assisted by the Rev. Percival James. The bride and bridesmaid were elegantly attired. The groom and attendants never looked better and altogether there was much rejoicing in honor of the worthy couple."

"Wedding bells This morning at 10 o'clock, a select wedding took place at the View Street Roman Catholic Church which was largely attended. The contracting parties were Capt. Alex McLean of Nova Scotia and Miss Lucy Dolphine, formerly of Louisiana, U.S.A.

"At the hour above given carriages containing the interested parties, together with their personal friends and invited guests, drove in front of the church and entered the building, shortly after which the ceremony was performed by Rev. Father J. M. Mandart. The bridesmaids consisted of Miss McDonald and Miss May Madigan.

"John McDowell and William Byrnes were groomsmen. The wedding passed off in a highly pleasing manner, being quiet, but the service was very impressive. After the ceremony was over and while the bride and groom were walking down the aisle the wedding march was beautifully played by Miss Martha Campbell, youngest daughter of Mr. Frank Campbell. The happy couple then received the congratulations of their many friends, who wished them a safe and prosperous journey through life."

MARINE BEAT, SPORTS WERE HIS 'MEAT'

Former Managing Editor Served As 'City Father' for 10 Years

ARCHIE WILLS
. . . started as carrier boy

Archie Wills, managing editor of The Times from 1936 to 1951, and a former acting mayor of Victoria, was associated with the paper for just on half a century.

His association with The Times began in his early teens when he delivered the paper to subscribers in the Mount Tolmie area. Then he answered an advertisement for a boy who wanted to learn journalism and landed the job at $2 a week.

From his earliest days, Archie was attracted to the characters on the waterfront—men with leathery faces, vivid imaginations and blistering tongues. There were whaling men, sealers, fishermen, tug and steamboat men.

First Columnist

Archie sat about a pot bellied stove in a ships' chandlers and dragged stories out of these men. These formed the basis for what was the first by-line column in The Times "Around the Ship Chandler's Stove."

He wrote the column for two years before enlisting in the Canadian Field Artillery in January, 1916, and went overseas.

Returning to Victoria in 1919, Archie rejoined The Times and worked on several beats. He became the first reporter to cover Victoria from an airplane.

Then he took over the sports editor's desk and set forth on a six-year stint which brought him distinction as a hockey authority. In 1925 he was the first man in western Canada to broadcast a hockey game, recreating the playoff in Saskatoon between Victoria Cougars and Saskatoon Sheiks.

Archie is the last survivor of the writers of that day who covered the Stanley Cup series in the west and the east.

Stanley Cup Play

He handled the series between the Canadiens and Victoria in 1925. The following year he went to Montreal to cover the series between Victoria and Montreal Maroons, the last series between east and west.

Archie moved to the city editor's desk and later became news editor. In 1936, following the death of B. C. (Benny) Nicholas, he was appointed managing editor.

Royal Visit

His major assignments as a reporter included the Imperial Economic Conference in 1932 and the royal visit of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth in 1939.

As managing editor, Archie was critical of local newspapers for not testing the policies they advocated before the electors.

He felt this showed a lack of moral courage and when challenged to do something about it he presented himself as a candidate for alderman and was elected.

Headed Polls

For 10 years he served on the council, heading the polls at each election.

During the last three years of his service he was acting mayor. He served for two years as police commissioner and seven years as chairman of the fire wardens. During the Second World War he was a member of the war board and chairman of the advisory board on aircraft construction.

Later as chairman of the industrial committee he pushed hard for an airport; then for the express highway to Pat Bay. He served one year as president of the Gyro Club, 12 years as a director of the Chamber of Commerce and, as he put it, "a member of every other board of directors in Victoria that doesn't pay fees."

Mayoralty Out

In 1944, when The Times began to make more demands on him, he retired from the city council and declined invitations to stand for mayor.

All newspaper men yearn to leave the exciting turmoil of the newsroom and do some serious writing and Archie, with cabinets full of material, retired from The Times in 1951.

Since then he has done much writing and his wide experience has been called on by other interests.

Like Heaven

Asked why he has stayed with Victoria, in spite of receiving attractive offers to go elsewhere, Archie says:

"When we captured Mons on Armistice Day 1918, my first thought was to get home as quickly as possible. I'd seen so much slaughter and misery that Victoria seemed like heaven. And I still feel that way about it. There's nowhere like Victoria for me."

A NEW ERA IN B.C.'S FOREST ECONOMY

In 1961, Celgar Limited's $50,000,000 pulp and sawmill project will go into production near Castlegar, in the Kootenays. Already the project is stimulating the economy of the Arrow Lakes district with the first stages of construction under way. A peak construction force of 1200 is expected by the middle of next year. The operation of the Celgar Mill will be the most modern in Canada, employing 300 men.

Celgar is the first to bring the benefits of a fully integrated forest industry to the Interior of British Columbia on the same scale as coastal pulp and paper mills have done. Nakusp is the centre of the Company's southern logging operations, and Revelstoke will become the northern logging centre.

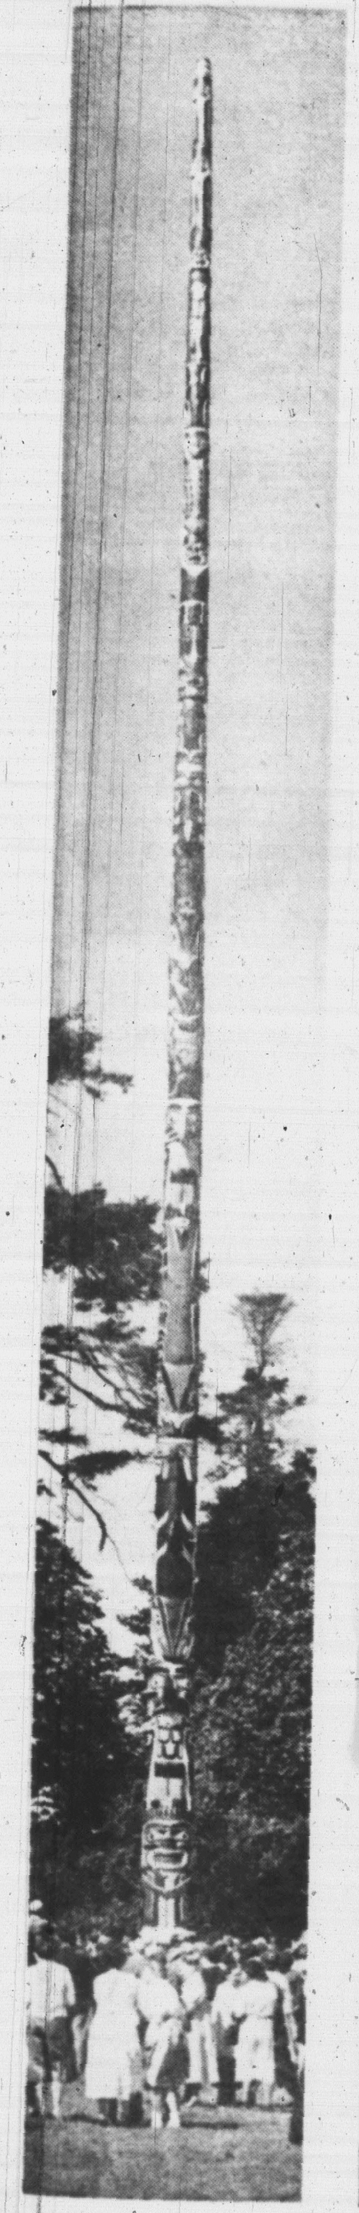
TIMES PROJECT WON WORLD-WIDE PUBLICITY FOR VICTORIA

Thousands Own Shares in Tallest Totem



This special edition of The Times is devoted mainly to what happened in the past 75 years.

Yet an event very closely connected with this newspaper occurred more than 250 years ago.

At that time a cedar seedling poked its tentative head above the mossy terrain of what is now the Muir's Creek area of Sooke, about 35 miles from Victoria. It took root in the moist soil in which cedars thrive, and settled down to its slow reach toward the sky.

The seedling was surrounded by so many more of its kind it had no choice but to grow straight up, searching for sun and sky.

Two and a half centuries later, this cedar seedling towered 160 feet.

And, on July 2, 1956, the "seedling" was dedicated in Beacon Hill Park as the World's Tallest Totem Pole.

It is, as a bronze inscription on a block of granite proudly states: A "Symbol of a proud race; memento of the nation's infancy; monument to a rare native art; proof of a united community interest; and the purest form of Canadiana."

The project of creating the World's Tallest Totem was instigated by The Times as a community effort.

Its creation provided employment for the last living artists who work in the medium of totemic carving. Chief Mungo Martin of the Kwakiutl tribe, his son David, his nephew Henry Hunt.

It helped keep alive an art which had almost died out, and whose loss would be a severe one to the cultural background of Canada.

The carving and erection of the Tallest Totem, of course, added yet another tourist attraction to the Victoria area, and won publicity all over the world.

More than that, the Tallest Totem proved that Victorians have imagination, can see and understand a project off the beaten track.

For the Tallest Totem was mainly financed by shares bought at 50 cents each, by people who were looking for no

"That," whispered the slim young fellow who was his secretary — a Nevada-born boy called Benny Nicholas "was the distinguished person who came to meet you."

"Sorry," muttered the "old man," "I thought he was a porter.

Legend Grew

Biography and legend grew about William Templeman. One of the worst-kept secrets of local politics involved an unusual telegram used by his opponent to defeat him. And when Mr. Templeman died, everyone who had worked for him at least one year was willed a month's salary.

From its beginnings on Government Street, the four-page Times had grown and moved to Yates and later Broad, where View now cuts through, then to the spanking new building on the north-east corner of Fort and Broad which Mr. Templeton built as a mark of faith in booming 1910 Victoria.

With the new quarters came a new staff. Martin Egan and George Denny had served their time on the paper in the early '90s and gone on to international fame as a war correspondent and Assocated Press general manager respectively.

In the years immediately before the First World War new blood was injected into the news room. Joe Gorman came to the sports desk from Ottawa, to bring expert knowledge of hockey to the town in which the Patricks had transplanted the national game.

Bill Henderson and Norman Senior arrived from Toronto to handle and write copy respectively. Bob Hartley was engaged to cover the legislature. Tommy Inglis, an Englishman took over city hall. Frank Dunn did general work. George Palmer wrote courts and T. Harry Wilson brought an unusual courtesy and courtliness to direction of the city desk.

Forging Staff

Ben Nicholas, who had become editor, was forging a staff and making it one to reckon with in western newspaper circles.

Then came the war. Gorman, Inglis, Henry Sivertz, and Dunn enlisted, served and died overseas. Young Archie Wills was the only one of a gallant crew who returned to resume his work on the paper, moving up from marine to sport.

The years had seen replacement of the old hand-setters by the new Mergenthaler type-setting machines, introduced by the Times to the Canadian Pacific Coast when only one other Canadian plant had acquired them. That was in 1893. By 1900 Templeman had installed a photo-engraving plant, the first in British Columbia.

The paper was growing in size, circulation and popularity.

A line of editors had passed through its office, starting with Thos. Gardiner, an Englishman who came to the Times at its opening from the Sacramento Record. John Nelson, of Rotary International fame, had taken over direction during Mr. Templeman's absence in Ottawa.

J. C. McLagan had come and gone. Robert Houston had served his stint Thomas L. Grahame, later of the London Daily Mail, and Robert Dunn had filled the chair.

When Mr. Templeman died in 1914, an era ended and a new colorful one began.

The slim secretary who had helped him to identify a local dignitary at an interior B.C. railway station, and who had served him well in an Ottawa that revered Laurier and was now beginning to know Mackenzie King, was ready to take over the helm — Benny Nicholas, no longer slim but a man growing in stature greater than his girth.

Nicholas brought to the Times a golden age — but a golden age without gold. Pay was low. Hours were long. A newsman could get by only if he built up outside correspondence.

But Benny Nicholas was the spirit of the town, its father confessor, its advocate, its voice, its image. To be one of Benny's boys was to know prestige. To be on his news-staff was to catch the current of excitement.

Unique Family

It was a unique family over which the bachelor father presided. W. S. "Bill" Henderson, shifted from the city desk to telegraph, and was an encyclopaedia and teacher. R. T. "Dick" Freeman, deskman and marine expert, was a patient reader and instructor. Tom Merriman was another member of infinite consideration and encouragement.

Archie Wills, still to move up to the managing editor's desk, was a ranking Canadian sports writer and hockey authority.

Nancy Hodges, not yet in politics, nor even dreaming of the B.C. Speakership or Senate, was a one-member women's department, doubling in concert, drama and cultural criticism.

Harry Hodges, assistant to Benny after a stretch on the Legislative Buildings, was busy on the editorial page. Ken Drury, master of any beat, was specializing in finance and magazine work, and a young Bruce Hutchison was writing politics and refusing to join a provincial government.

He was Envied.

A youngster, handling small assignments, envied Les Fox, who had taken over the police beat. Jim Nesbitt was following Dick Freeman on marine, with excursions into Victoria history, drama and the arts.

A boy, Peter Stursberg, was writing agriculture with an energy and ambition which were to take him to the international scene for radio and English newspapers before he returned to the United Nations and more recently joined a national syndicate.

Lionel Backler, a rangy youth with poetry in his heart, was serving a brief apprenticeship to writing which would end tragically on the battlefield of the Spanish civil war.

C. F. "Mory" Moriarty was handling the telegraph key, bringing Canadian Press news from world points, and was unwittingly getting ready for ANNIVERSARY . . .

For 75 years, the Victoria Daily Times has justified its readers' trust and confidence by presenting unexcelled coverage and interpretation of the news of the day. As another of Canada's older newspapers, we would like to wish the Victoria Daily Times well and all the best for continued years of service to its community.

It all started a mile underground!

It's a strange thought that a British Columbia miner working deep in the earth helped a California farmer grow better oranges. It's true, though, and the link that joins these two experts is fertilizer.

From Cominco's Sullivan Mine at Kimberley, B.C., comes a steady stream of ore containing lead, zinc, other metals and sulphur. The sulphur is a key product in Cominco's big fertilizer industry. This 30-year-old industry with a 2,000-man payroll has grown from a few thousand tons sold almost entirely on the Canadian Prairies to an output of 750,000 tons, selling throughout most of western North America and on many world markets.

Yes, the miners at the Sullivan Mine help thousands of farmers get more money from hundreds of different crops. Of course, in between the mine and the farm is a lot of "know-how" and skill, plus plants and equipment valued at many millions of dollars — the normal but vital requirements of a successful industry.

an unexpected translation into news writing.

The spanking new Times building of Mr. Templeman's construction was growing older, wearing and becoming grubby from use. But the spirit in it shone in spite of the exhaustion of late assignments and the unbelievable pay scale which stretched from eight dollars a week for office boy to $65 a week top salary for Benny Nicholas.

Into the old newsroom walked personalities of Canada and the world, the great and the crackpot, the rich and the pan-handler, Cornelius Vanderbilt and the little newsboy, Morrie, who licked every kid who tried to take his Fort and Douglas corner from him.

Here they mingled with us, joined in the fun of a family that was poor but honest and happy.

And so the great days passed, with John Shaw starring at rugby and compiling a series on the Peace River before leaving for Toronto and later the Orient, with Frank Pagett giving a Machiavellian touch to politics of Saanich, with Sandy Graves handling with equal efficiency City Hall or Legislative Buildings and Pete Sallaway slipping into the sports slot to follow Archie Willis, with Irving Strickland emerging as a cameraman after years of secretarial duties, with Ted Fox following his brother Les, with young Peter Inglis, fresh from Cheltenham, learning newspaper work on the paper his father, Tom, left in an earlier war, with young Roy Thorsen starting as office boy and finishing as a good soldier.

SEN. TEMPLEMAN

Then came a tragic afternoon when Ben Nicholas left his sickbed for the office at a time when he had finally accepted the nomination which assured him election to the House of Commons.

Heart Attack

With shocking suddenness the man who was "the Boss" and whom we loved was dead in his room, victim of a heart attack in the office he had made the hub of Victoria. We accepted the fact dumbly, throats choked, and knew an era had ended on May 19, 1936.

Ken Drury moved into the editorial chair and left it for the News Herald with Harry Hodges succeeding him.

The Times at Mr. Templeman's death had gone into the hands of a small group. That group gradually yielded to a single owner under unusual circumstances. In turn, during the Nicholas' epoch, it had passed to the David Spencer family.

So it remained, though members of the family died, as Victoria with the rest of Canada was caught in the convulsion of another world war.

Daily it carried its budget of news from the different fronts. Weekly it struggled with the tasks of adjusting staff as young men enlisted and others were claimed by priority jobs.

Eventually, well after war's end, it changed hands again in a mid-century move that made it partner of the Victoria Press. Then, too, began a new era.

fices and ignore the telephone calls of the city editor?

He is as close to them as his own keyboard, and if the story they have sent is not to the boss's satisfaction, it is an easy thing for him not only to complain, but most important of all, make his complaints noted in black and white on the machine.

The other teletype wizardry is what the staff calls simply "the stock wire."

Closing Prices

This is the service by which the closing prices on the Toronto Stock Exchange are sent to the Times by telegraph and set in metal type in time to make the home edition of the paper.

It works this way: The Toronto Canadian Press operator handling the prices, types them out on a machine which reproduces the letters and figures as a series of holes on a narrow strip of paper tape—like a tiny player piano roll.

This tape is fed into a sending machine, and impulses are carried to a second machine in the Times' composing room, where a similar tape is reproduced by a receiver-perforator.

As fast as it comes from the perforator it is fed into still another machine mounted on a linotype, which starts the linotype producing type about 50 per cent faster than a regular operator can produce.

It is expensive, requires a lot of care, and a lot of harrowing, split-second work by operators and printers. It gives businessmen the only thing they want in the way of Toronto stocks — the closing prices. No others count.

Less elaborate but ever so handy, is the radio behind the city editor's desk. Tuned to police-fire frequency, it tells the office of accidents and fires—and sometimes crimes, just as as fast as it does the men in blue. It enables the paper to send teams of reporters and photographers to the source of trouble for on-the-spot coverage.

It can be a nuisance, too. Many times when the city editor and news editor have their pages all made up and reporters are sitting back with their tensions at ease, the multiple howl of sirens on the radio reminds one and all that they are still newspapermen and have to get to work.

Ever since the Times moved into the new Victoria Press Ltd. building in 1951, the most impressive single machine has been the five-unit press. It grinds out papers faithfully at the rate of 32,000 per hour, with a maximum speed of 40,000.

With growing interest in color, a sixth unit was added a few weeks ago. It permits either the printing of advertisements in three colors and black, or of adding eight pages with four color spots to the regular run.

Scarcely a day goes by without color appearing somewhere in the paper. Advertisers like it, readers appreciate it and are drawn to it, and the paper looks brighter for the addition of a splash of red or yellow.

The big press, driven by two 150-horsepower electric motors gobbles up 4,000 tons of newsprint every year. A one-year supply of ink would half fill Crystal Garden pool.

The machines discussed are the more glamorous in the busy bustle of printing and publishing. They are backed up by a huge battery of more utilitarian units which contribute to making our printing plant the best in the country in relation to the population it serves.

History Reproduced In Times Front Pages

On five of the following pages appear reproductions of front pages of The Times since it began publishing on June 9, 1884.

The first, naturally, is the original issue of the newspaper.

The others come at 15-year intervals and were selected to display, in part, what Times editors considered the top stories of those years except one. This is the last paper published in the nineteenth century, dated Saturday, December 30 1899.

BOER WAR

As it happens the leading story in that issue deals with the battles at Ladysmith and Mafeking in the Boer War. Strangely enough there appears to have been no mention in the paper of the day that it was the end of a century.

In two of the other front pages, the outbreak of the First World War in 1914 and the D-Day invasion of 1944, there may seem to be extra stress on the subject of war, but these are events which have, of their very nature, shaken the world and people of Victoria with it.

1929 CRASH

The front page chosen for 1929 rather naturally became the stock market crash which led to the depression and the great social and economic revolution of the last 30 years.

Of considerable interest to students of typography and newspaper generally will be the gradual evolution of newspaper style, the disappearance of advertisements from the front page, the growing headline display of news, the use of larger type sizes in the body of stories and generally the more streamlined presentation for easier reading.

The final comparison, of course, is with the front page of this paper today. Together the six front pages span the 75 years in which The Times has existed.

BERT THOMAS . . . he was the first.

BERT THOMAS FIRST TO CONQUER STRAIT

Many Others Got Starry-Eyed After Flo's Attempt in 1954

Thus The Times and another firm with a gleam in its eye and a love for Victoria in its heart combined to launch the first attempt to swim the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

Joining with The Times to achieve this objective was one of the oldest, best-known companies in Victoria — the British American Paint Company.

And the two companies issued an invitation with a cash award added to one of the best professional distance swimmers in the business . . .

Florence Chadwick.

Thus it was, in August, 1954, that Victoria became a front-page dateline in literally hundreds of newspapers.

The English Channel had been crossed so often by swimmers that commuters' tickets were being issued.

The Catalina Island swim wasn't a question of who could make it, but who got there first.

Nobody, but nobody, had ever solved the tricky tides, unpredictable currents, and chilly waters of Juan de Fuca Strait.

Neither did Flo Chadwick, who launched her attempt on August 9, 1954.

Flo didn't complete the swim. But what she did do was whet the interest of scores of swimmers who wished to test their skill and endurance against Juan de Fuca Strait.

Old Man Juan—as he became known—turned back the best efforts of amateurs and professionals for a full year, until Bert Thomas of Tacoma, on his fifth attempt, made it from the Port Angeles side to Victoria.

He arrived at Saxe Point, Esquimalt, after 11 hours 17 minutes in the water, shortly before dawn, and was presented with a cheque for $1,000 by the publisher of The Times.

Once again, dateline Victoria appeared in newspapers around the world.

In August, 1956, two years after Flo Chadwick launched her gallant try at the Strait crossing, two Toronto swimmers arrived to take a crack at Old Man Juan.

One was the "swimming sweetheart," young Marilyn Bell, who had won the Lake Ontario swim the year before.

The other was her pal, Cliff Lumsdon, a perpetual winner of the Canadian National Exhibition distance swim along the Toronto waterfront.

Cliff was supposed to be here as adviser and training companion to Marilyn.

But, after she had to give up in rough water on her first try from Victoria to Port Angeles, Cliff pulled a surprise attempt.

He took off from Horseshoe Bay at 3 p.m., August 16, 1956, and ploughed steadily through the choppy Strait until he landed at Port Angeles 11 hours 33 minutes later.

Eight days later, Marilyn entered the water from the Port Angeles side, and stroked her way across to Horseshoe Bay in 10 hours 38 minutes.

Since then, there have been uncounted attempts to swim Juan de Fuca Strait, from Victoria to Port Angeles or the other way around.

None have been successful, but each has resulted in "dateline, Victoria," in the world's newspapers.

Which was, after all, the reason why The Times got a gleam in its eye back in 1954.

'Lounge' Was Rowing Grounds

Mud isn't thought of as much of a foundation for anything, except perhaps growing rice, or facial treatments, but 51 years ago it was the base of one of Canada's largest hotels, the dowager Empress of Victoria.

Ill-smelling mud flats occupied the space where the hotel now stands by the Inner Harbor. The tide ran in and met a creek that wound its way through the Fairfield district.

Indians say there was a time when they could paddle canoes from Ross Bay through to the Inner Harbor—which would now be through the hotel's gracious lounge.

Opened In 1908

The original building opened Jan. 20, 1908, five years after the CPR signed an agreement with the city of Victoria to build the hotel. It consisted of 160 rooms.

The contract between city and CPR called for filling in the James Bay mud flats "to the average levels of the surrounding streets."

This was done within a year of the agreement, and the present Causeway built.

Great wooden piles, some 90 feet long, were driven into the soil until bedrock was reached. The present hotel rests on these piles.

The original building was erected to plans drawn by the late F. M. Rattenbury, who designed the original stone legislative building here.

Cost $1,600,000

In those days, the Pendray soap works occupied a brick building which became the laundry and power plant of the Empress Hotel. The plant was rebuilt across Douglas Street some time after the hotel was completed.

Contractor for the hotel was J. L. Skene of Victoria.

While the contract with the city called for a structure to cost at least $300,0000, costs soon rose to $1,600,000.

Today there is no available estimate of the hotel's value, even from the CPR.

A north wing was built in 1910; a south wing in 1913; the north wing, extended, was completed in 1929 when the flower conservatory was opened.

President's Idea

Idea for the hotel in Victoria originated with Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, then president of the CPR.

He believed that the need for a hotel was felt here because tourists, who spent days and weeks in Victoria en route to and from the Orient, needed a place to stay with "class."

Building of the Empress allowed passengers to travel to the Far East under one transportation system, the CPR, for ship, rail and hotel accommodation.

The Empress completed the chain of 17 CPR hotels from coast to coast.

The Empress, with her mud pack, today remains beautiful.

HISTORY—
Day by Day

There are few better sources for the history of a community than the records of its newspaper. In reporting faithfully the daily happenings of Victoria over the past 75 years the Victoria Daily Times has provided more than a daily news service. It has recorded a living history of Victoria from which future generations can glean the story of an earlier day.

On this anniversary we join with others in congratulations to the Times on its past and in best wishes for its future.

BRITAIN'S OFFICIAL DECLARATION

London, Aug. 5.—Britain declared war against Germany early this morning. This announcement was made at the Foreign Office after midnight. England is ready. Orders have already been sent to the commander in chief of the British naval forces to wipe out the German fleet. It is believed that if the fleet has not already struck it will do so in the next few hours.

The British Foreign Office has issued the following statement:

"Owing to the summary rejection by Germany of the request made by His Britannic Majesty's government, that the neutrality of Belgium should be respected, His Majesty's Ambassador at Berlin has received his passports, and His Majesty's government has declared to the German government that a state of war exists between Great Britain and Germany from 11 o'clock p.m., August 4."

Britain's wireless broke loose last night. Immediately after midnight King George sent a special message to the British fleet sailing against the German armada, cleared for action.

"I have confidence that the British fleet will revive the old glories of the navy. I am sure that the navy will again shield Britain in this hour of trial. It will prove the bulwark of the Empire."

This was the first message sent to the fleet since it cleared from Plymouth harbor and sailed to the secret rendezvous in the North Sea. Ever since then the wireless had been silent. No word was permitted to go forth, until to night the signal for the most tremendous naval battle ever fought flashed out through the darkness from the great naval wireless station.

Vice Admiral Sir John Jellicoe has assumed supreme command of the British home fleet, with the acting rank of admiral. His chief of staff will be Rear Admiral Charles E. Madden.

The declaration of war against Germany in August, 1914, was an act which, in the end result, changed the whole fuuture of the world. This is how the editors of the Times on that day treated this momentous event, the outcome of which they had no way of knowing. The outlined headline is interesting.

worked every day except Sunday. Publication was never halted to observe a holiday.

By comparison, there are 275 route carriers, 30 street boys and 125 country carriers in today's circulation department.

Recalling his first boss, Bill said: "He was a senator when he hired me," and later was a member of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's cabinet.

"We didn't see such a lot of him. He was in Ottawa a great deal. He was a very nice man, respected, but very strict. There were no monkeyshines on him, but he never had any trouble with his staff.

"He was a member of the Typographical Union and always carried a card."

What about reporters of today?

"They're very good, but seem to me younger than in the old days," Bill said. (He was talking from 62 years on the staff.)

What were some of the events of the day way back when you were in the old building on Broad?

"Well, I remember the sinking of the Burgoyne Bay, crossing from France to Canada, with the loss of practically the entire passenger list and crew.

"There was no radio and we used to put bulletins in the front window. I remember that incident particularly.

"We used to get our news from the Associated Press and the CPR.

NINE DIED

"I remember the first Canadian engagement in the Boer War. Victoria lost nine of her volunteers. They were all local boys."

When the First World War came along Bill tried to enlist but gave his service to the home front when one arm failed to meet army requirements.

He finds changes to Victoria, where he has lived in Oak Bay, Victoria West and mostly Fairfield where he now boards, nothing short of "remarkable. I remember the wooden sidewalks downtown. Many miles of them I've walked.

"Johnson Street and Store Street that was the business centre in those days. Then it drifted onto Government and finally broke out onto Douglas Street where it is today.

"You could buy the finest bacon and eggs with German fried potatoes, for 25 cents. Everything was much cheaper than it is now."

Decades have passed since Bill played baseball. It is more than 50 years ago that his old team, the Maple Leaf Baseball Club, disbanded. "But I fished and hunted a little. Most of my time I spent with my family and my gardening.

"I board now since my wife died."

ROTARIAN

The only thing Bill has not given up besides work is active membership in Victoria Rotary Club. He has been sergeant at arms since 1937. Many a newcomer has feared his bellow would shatter the chandeliers at club meetings in the Empress Hotel's crystal ballroom.

A daughter, Mrs. C. A. Ridout, lives in Victoria, another daughter, Mrs. W. A. Cudlip, at Shawnigan Lake and son William is an auto dealer in Penticton. There are eight grandchildren.

Partly because of his family responsibilities and partly because "I like it in Victoria," Bill never travelled much beyond Seattle, Portland, and San Francisco, and never leaving the coast.

Maybe you're saving travel for retirement?

He stuck a short-stemmed pipe between his teeth, clamped his jaws, looked straight ahead and deliberated.

"I haven't thought about it much. I'll amuse myself some way," he said.

Bill never regretted staying ashore. "I've had a very happy time here. Some days weren't so happy, but as a general rule it's been a pretty good life."

If you had it to do over?

"I'd do the same."

The full significance of the New York stock market crash was not apparent when this front page appeared in 1929. As the lead story shows, the market had already been falling for five days when it became top headline news. The subsequent reactions to this event were worldwide as economic depression swept the continent and spread to Europe. Then government wrestling with the problem moved toward the welfare type of system we know today.

financial gain — people interested only in adding to the assets of the community.

Their contributions paid the major share in a six-month effort which began with the felling of the 250-year-old cedar, continued through the yarding out to the booming grounds at Sooke, the towing in to inner harbor, the carving at Thunderbird Park, and ended with the final erection and dedication at Beacon Hill Park.

The Tallest Totem is not only "the mostest of the bestest." It is a generic part of British Columbia.

Totemic carving is known in many parts of the world, but anthropologists and art critics agree it reached its highest peak in this province.

With the influx of "New Canadians" from the United Kingdom and Europe centuries ago, totem art began to die out. Several years ago, the B.C. Government was approached to help perpetuate totemic carving, and there was only one man who could be found who had kept his skilled hand at the work he'd learned from his father; and which his father had learned from his father's father; an art handed down through generations.

This, of course, was Chief Mungo Martin, a man who appears ageless, and is content to count his years well beyond three score and ten.

In Mungo Martin's mind were the songs and legends of his Kwakiutl tribe, and the tribes who were friends and enemies; and in his hands was inherited skill.

So, Mungo was chosen to perpetuate totemic carving, and to pass on his knowledge to others.

The B.C. Government grant under which he operated expired in January, 1956.

It was then the Tallest Totem project was launched, and Mungo Martin retained as chief carver.

Not to be too provincial about it — but to be honest — a factor in launching the Tallest Totem drive was that the Ontario Provincial Museum, at that time, housed the then-tallest pole, an 81-foot giant from the Nass River district of B.C.

It was felt that the "big boys" among totems should be right here on Vancouver Island, in the capital city of B.C.

Residents agreed. They bought shares by the thousands.

Even at that, voluntary services were needed, and gladly offered, from business firms, associations, and private citizens.

Counting in services offered at no charge, cost of the Tallest Totem — which stands at 127 feet, six inches — is estimated at $8,500.

But the value of the totem, facing to seaward from its vantage point in Beacon Hill Park, cannot be measured in dollars and cents.

It is: "Symbol of a proud race; memento of the nation's infancy; monument to a rare native art; proof of a united community interest; and the purest form of Canadiana."

STAFF WINS AWARDS

Over the past nine years, the Victoria Daily Times and its staff have been honored with nine awards in competition with Canadian and American newspapers.

Bulk of these have been won by editor Bruce Hutchison, whose editorials in 1952 and 1957 were adjudged "Best in Canada" in the National Newspaper Awards contest sponsored by the Toronto Men's Press Club. Each of these awards carries a $400 prize.

In intervening years, Times editorials were voted two honorable mentions in the same competition.

PROMOTION

In 1957, the Times won the North American award for "best promotion" in newspapers under 50,000 circulation, awarded by Editor and Publisher magazine.

This was awarded for the Tallest Totem campaign, which was praised as "a community project of sustaining interest," and presented in New Orleans by E & P editor Robert U. Brown.

Mr. Hutchison won his second and third Governor-General's awards in 1952 and 1957 for his books "The Incredible Canadian," a biography of the late prime minister, Mackenzie King, and "Canada — Tomorrow's Giant," an updating of the Times' editor's standard classic, "The Unknown Country," written in the early war years.

MORE MEDALS

In 1955 the Royal Society of Canada honored Mr. Hutchison by award of the Lorne Pierce Medal. The year before, he had won the President's Medal of the University of British Columbia.

In 1951, this institution had awarded Mr. Hutchison an honorary Doctor of Letters.

People found in the newborn Times a novelty notes on the fashions of the day:

"Men's trousers are being made very much wider.

"Little girls are wearing very big hats the littler the girl the bigger the hat.

"Crinoline is on the increase. One may as well take a long, last look at the present tight and shapely mode.

"Birds of rich plumage will continue to be worn on ladies' tall hats for the promenade, but not the church or for visiting.

"Very many of the most stylish women now get their dresses, their shoes and their hats at the same shops as men.

"The trousers worn by some of the swell young men are yellow in color, with big checks and are awfully loud.

"Big four-in-hand scarfs of silk and satin are all the go with the young men 'who know' and flat scarfs will be but little worn."

Progress came to these shores in 1884: "The Straits cable . . . successfuly landed at Clover Point . . . the government steamer Sir James Douglas and the barge Electron arrived in the harbor late last night, having entirely completed the laying of the Straits cable. Business to and from the south can now be done more cheaply and in a more direct way, to say nothing of the fact that there will be more certainty of the message reaching its destination without delay."

Electric light was still more or less a novelty in 1884: "Government Street, under the electric light, between 5 and 6 o'clock now presents an animated metropolitan-like appearance. The glare of the gas lights in the shop windows, hacks and cabs moving briskly with lighted lamps, pedestrians hurrying to and fro on the sidewalks, the lights reflecting from the boot and shoe factories of Messrs. Heathorn, and the Belmont Company; and the pleasant shout of The Times newsboys all tend to give Victoria's principal thoroughfare a thorough metropolitan appearance."

There were letters to The Times then, as now. One was from "Citizen" and was entitled "The Social Evil"—Broad Street, between Yates and Johnson is not considered a respectable promenade for ladies, but is chiefly relegated to the supervision of the police.

"Whether promoted by curiosity or a charitable desire to check the social evil, it is said many ladies are known to pass that way, and the warning of your correspondent will, he trusts, have the required effect.

"Neither is it proper for young ladies to perambulate the by-streets of the city without guardians. It is also safe to assert that no gentleman would escort a lady in localities where her sensitive nature might be wounded by improper remarks."

One of the big events of the autumn of 1884 was the annual fair, and The Times went into great detail, some of which follows:

"The exhibition British Columbia Agricultural Association last evening at a time when the hall was well filled with ladies and gentlemen the electric lights took a notion to go out, thus leaving the assemblage in total darkness, save what little light was given out by a few candles placed—here and there in the gallery.

"It is presumed, however, that strict propriety was maintained during this trying interval, as when the lights again assumed their illuminating power the young ladies and their gallant escorts were seen to be a safe distance apart and wearing expressions of intense anxiety.

"The most attractive exhibit is undoubtedly the display by the Victoria Soap Works of Pendray and Company their display is simply perfect and would be a credit to the exhibitions given in the largest eastern cities.

"A beautiful wreath of flowers is displayed by Mrs. Goodacre. It is a very charming piece of work and receives many favorable comments."

There was a great novelty at the 1884 exhibition, as we learn from the historic and valuable Times files:

"A. J. McLellan has on exhibition a number of oysters. A card announces that these oysters were brought from New York last year and placed in the Gorge waters and that their ages range from one to four years. They are very fine and large and remind one of the bivalves to be obtained only in Fulton Market, New York; about this time of the year.

Thomas Bamford was one of the noted artists of his days, and his paintings are today collector's items:

"A collection of beautiful oil paintings embracing views of the Gorge, Royal Roads, Goldstream, etc., are exhibited by Mr. Bamford."

And members of the Sehl family played their roles, as they did in so many events in Victoria through many years:

"Miss Sehl, in watercolors, and T. Gore, in pencil, took prizes for well-executed pictures.

"Jacob Sehl displays a number of articles of furniture from his manufactory. The parlor and bedroom sets are very beautiful."

"George H. Maynard makes a fine display of boots and shoes in a conspicuous glass case."

There we have some of the outstanding events covered by The Times in the first year of its publication. Quite a year, it was.

One of Victoria's largest industries, B.C. Forest Products Limited's integrated sawmill and plywood plants on Selkirk Water, provide year-round employment for almost a thousand local residents.

As Victoria's largest single industrial source of jobs and income, British Columbia Forest Products Limited take pride in their share of our city's progress. The nearly four million dollars which our sawmill, plywood, booming and sorting operations now add each year to local payrolls are a key factor in the area's fast-expanding economy. With faith in the future, B.C. Forest Products Limited look forward to contributing even more to Victoria's — and British Columbia's — prosperity in years to come.
